BUCKINGHAMSHIRE.

BUCKINGHAMSHIRE, taking its name from the town of Buckingham, is a southern inland shire, lying near the middle of England, equidistant between the North Sea, at the mouth of the Thames, and the Bristol Channel. Its area is 738 square miles, or 467,009 acres, being rather below the middle size of English shires; the main length of 53 miles is from north-west to south-east, and its greatest breadth about 27 miles; the shape is very irregular, and it has few natural bound-marks. On the north it is bounded by Northamptonshire; on the east by Bedfordshire, Hertfordshire, and Middlesex, from which latter it is parted by the Colne; on the south the Thames parts it from Berkshire; on the west it is bounded by Oxfordshire. The population in 1831 was 130,982; in 1841, 138,248; in 1851, 143,655; in 1861, 167,993; in 1871, 175,879; and in 1881, 176,277, viz., males 86,713, females 89,564. The shire belongs to the chalk formation, and is cut across in the middle by the great chalk downs called the Chiltern hills; the central part of the shire is watered by the Thame, the northern by the Ouse, the southern by the Thames, and the eastern by the Colne. The highest hills in the Chilterns are 905 feet high, near Wendover; Ivinghoe hills, 904 feet; Mazzle hill, near Brill, 744 feet; Bow Brick hill, 683 feet. The soil is chiefly good, though there are some gravels and wet clays, and sometimes sands; but these are more than compensated by the rich grounds in the Vale of the Thame, at Aylesbury, and on the banks of the Thames and Colne.

The Thames, at the southern border, runs down to London and the sea, bearing large craft, and by canal it communicates with every part of England; on its banks, in this county, are Great Marlow and Eton. The small river Wye, flowing from Wycombe, falls into the Thames near Hedsor, after turning several paper mills. In the Thames are found barbel, trout, pike, carp, chub, tench, dace, roach, crayfish, eels, and other fish. At the southern part of the shire the river Colne, which turns many mills, falls into the Thames, and with its feeder the Missen, or Misbourn, it waters the south-eastern part of Bucks.

The Chess flows by Chesham into Herts. The Thame is formed by a great many streams, and waters the Vale of Aylesbury, and thence flows past Thame to the Isis at Dorchester; it is after the junction of the Thame with the Isis that the latter properly becomes the Thames, though it is popularly known by the latter name throughout its course; it has trout, pike, eels, chub, perch, roach, gudgeon &c. A small feeder of the Cherwell rises in Bucks. The midland Ouse runs through the shire for abont 43 miles, from near Brackley, by Buckingham, to Stony Stratford, thence through Newport Pagnell to Olney and into Bedfordshire; it receives the Tove, at Stony Stratford; a large stream from Winslow, and another at Newport Pagnell, called the Onsel, 30 miles long, flowing from Fenny Stratford. The Thame is navigable at Thame, the Ouse throughout the county. The chief canal is the Grand Junction, which passes by Ivinghoe, Fenny Stratford, and Stony Stratford; it has branches to Wendover, Aylesbury and Buckingham, thus most of the towns in this county have water communication.

The chief railway is the main line of the London and North Western, which proceeds from London, close to the Hertfordshire border, by Tring, Leighton Buzzard, Bletchley and Wolverton. There are branches from this line of 7 miles to Aylesbury; of 15 miles from Bletchley by Fenny Stratford to Bedford, and thence to Cambridge, forming a junction with the Great Northern at Sandy; of 29½ miles from Bletchley by Winslow to Oxford; and of 12 miles from Winslow, on the latter line, to Buckingham and Brackley and thence to Banbury. From Wolverton is a line of 4 miles to Newport Pagnell, belonging to the North Western Railway Company. The southern part of Bucks is well provided by the Great Western Railway, which comes in near Colnbrook, and crosses by Slough to Maidenhead, Reading, and the west of England, sending off branches of 2 miles to Uxbridge, of 3 to Eton and Windsor, and of 9½ miles to High Wycombe, thence passing through Princes Risborough to Thame and Oxford; at Princes Risborough is the junction of the line to Aylesbury, 7¼ miles; a line from Aylesbury to Buckingham connects the northern and southern systems. From the Quainton Road station on the last line there is a steam tramway to Brill; from the High Wycombe line is a short branch to Great Marlow, and from Princes Risborough is the Watlington railway.

The chief productions are chalk, limestone, lime, sand, gravel, forest marble; beech, oak, and other timber; wheat, barley, clover, tares, turnips, hay; horses, cows, oxen, calves, sheep, lambs, pigs, butter and cream cheese; condensed milk is prepared at Aylesbury, and in that neighbourhood ducks are largely reared; woven silk, bonnets, lace, shoes and paper are made; many persons are employed in the lace manufacture, of which the greater part are females. The making of straw bonnets and hats and the plaiting of straw also employ a number of females; the eastern part of the county, bordering on Herts and Beds, is the chief location of the straw manufacture. There is a large trade in the manufactures of wooden chairs of various patterns, wooden spades, brush handles, bowls and various other articles of turnery made from beech and other trees, with which the county abounds; High Wycombe is the chief seat of this trade.

The shire was formerly inhabited by Britons, who were driven out by a Belgic tribe, sometimes called Catyeuchlani, Catuellani and Cassii, and at the time of the invasion of Britain by Julius Cæsar they formed part of the Belgic force under Cassibelaun, which fought with him. In the time of the Emperor Claudius the Romans got a footing here, and, it is thought, killed in this shire a leader called Togodumnus: they afterwards planted the country, which they formed into part of province of Flavia Cæsariensis: many of their roads are yet to be traced, particularly Watling Street, now the grand Holyhead road, by Brickhill and Stony Stratford; also Ikenield, Ikening, or Acknell Way, thought to have been named after the Iceni; further, Akeman Street, and others unnamed; they had several stations, but none of any great note. After the Romans went away, the English came in and drove out the Welsh, planting the country, which was made part of the great kingdom of the Mid-English or Mercia. The people of Bucks long spoke a remarkable dialect of English, of which there are some old literary records.

During the parliamentary wars it was the field of many severe contests. The shire is in the Midland circuit, with spring and summer assizes at Aylesbury, the latter having been removed by Act of Parliament from Buckingham: the quarter Sessions are also held at Aylesbury, and there are 12 petty sessional divisions. The county returns three members to Parliament, Aylesbury being the chief place of election.

The Parliamentary boroughs are:—

	Members	Population in 1881
Aylesbury	2	 28,899
Buckingham	1	 6,859
Great Marlow	1	 6,779
Wycombe	1	 13,154

The Municipal boroughs are:—Buckingham, population, in 1881, 3,585, and Wycombe 10,618. Other towns are, Amersham, Aylesbury, 7,795; Chesham, Eton, 3,466; Fenny Stratford, Newport Pagnell, Princes Risborough, Slough, 5,080; Stony Stratford and Winslow. Brill is an ancient town with a mineral spring. Many eminent names are connected with Bucks; among others may be mentioned Milton, Hampden, Cowper, Herschel and Edmund Burke.

The hundreds are 8, formerly 18—Ashendon (Thame) in the west, Aylesbury in the midland, Buckingham in the north-west, Burnham (Chesham and Amersham) in the south-east, Cottesloe (Winslow) in the east, Desborough (High Wycombe and Marlow) in the south-west, Newport Pagnell in the north, Stoke (Colnbrook) in the south. The number of parishes is about 200.

The Superintendent Registrar's Districts are:—

No.	Place	Area	Population in 1881
140	Amersham	49,840	18,314
141	Eton	42,540	27,738

The hundreds of Burnham, Desborough and Stoke form the Chiltern hundreds, the stewardship of which is taken in order to vacate a seat in Parliament.

The following is a list of the hundreds in the county, with the parishes contained in them—

Hundred of Ashendon:—Ashendon, Aston Sandford, Boarstall, Brill, Chearsley, Chilton, Dinton (part of), Dorton, East Claydon, Fleet Marston, Grendon Underwood, Grandborough, Hogshaw-with-Fulbrook, Illmire, Kingswood, Long Crendon, Ludgershall, Middle Claydon, Nether Winchendon, North Marston, Oakley, Oving, Pitchcott, Quainton, Quarrendon, Shabbington, Shipton Lee, Stone, Towersey, Waddesdon, Westcott, Woodham, Worminghall, and Wotton Underwood.

Hundred of Aylesbury:—Ashton Clinton, Aylesbury, Bledlow, Bierton-with-Broughton, Buckland, Cuddington, Dinton (part of), Ellesborough, Great Hampden, Great Kimble, Great Missenden, Haddenham, Halton, Hartwell, Horsendon, Hulcott, Lee, Little Hampden, Little Kimble, Little Missenden, Monks Risborough, Princes Risborough, St. Leonards, Stoke Mandeville, Upper Winchendon, Wendover and Weston Turville.

Hundred of Buckingham:—Addington, Adstock, Akeley-cum-Stockholt, Barton Hartshorn, Beachampton, Biddlesston, Bourton, Bourtonhold, Buckingham, Charndon, Chetwode, Edgcott, Foxcott or Foscott, Gawcott, Hillesden, Leckhampstead, Lenborough, Lillingstone Dayrell, Lillingstone Lovell, Maids Moreton, Marsh Gibbon, Padbury, Pounden, Prebend End, Preston Bissett, Radclive, Shalstone-with-Oldwick, Steeple Claydon, Stowe, Thornborough, Thornton, Tingewick, Turweston, Twyford, Water Stratford, and Westbury.

Hundred of Burnham : — Amersham, Beaconsfield, Boveney, Burnham, Chalfont St. Giles, Chalfont St. Peter, Chenies or Islehampstead Cheynes, Chesham, Chesham Bois, Coleshill, Doaney, Farnham Royal, Hedgerley Dean, Hitcham, Penn, Seer Green, and Taplow.

Hundred of Cottesloe:—Aston Abbotts, Cheddington, Choulesbury, Creslow, Cublington, Drayton Beauchamp, Drayton Parslow, Dunton, Edlesborough, Great Horwood, Grove, Hardwicke, Hawridge, Hoggeston, Ivinghoe, Linslade, Little Horwood, Marsworth, Mentmore, Mursley, Nash, Nettleden, Pitstone, Shenley Brook End, Singleborough, Slapton, Soulbury, Stewkley, Swanbourne, Tattenhoe, Weedon, Whaddon, Whitchurch, Wing, Wingrave-with-Rowsham, and Winslow.

Hundred of Desborough:—Bradenham, Chipping Wycombe, Dinton (part of), Fawley, Fingest, Great Marlow, Hambleden, Hedsor, High Wycombe, Hitchenden or Hughenden, Ibstone, Lewknor-up-Hill, Little Marlow, Medmenham, Radnage, Saunderton, Turville, West Wycombe and Wooburn.

Hundred of Newport:—Astwood, Bletchley, Bow Brickhill, Bradwell, Bradwell Abbey, Broughton, Calverton, Castle Thorpe, Chicheley, Clifton Reynes, Cold Brayfield, Emberton, Fenny Stratford, Gayhurst, Great Brickhill, Great Lindford, Great Woolston, Hanslope, Hardmead, Haversham, Lathbury, Lavendon, Little Brickhill, Little Linford, Little Woolston, Loughton, Milton Keynes, Moulsoe, Newton Longville, Newport Pagnell, Newton Blossomville, North Crawley, Olney, Olney Park Farm, Ravenstone, Shenley Church End, Sherrington, Simpson, Stantonbury, Stoke Goldington, Stoke Hammond, Stony Stratford (east and west sides), Tyringham and Filgrave, Walton, Warrington, Water Eaton, Wavendon, Weston Underwood, Willen, Wolverton, and Woughton-on-the Green.

Hundred of Stoke:—Datchet, Denham, Eton, Fulmer, Hedgerley, Horton, Iver, Langley Marish, Stoke Poges, Upton-cum-Chalvey, Wexham, and Wyrardisbury.

H.M. Prison is situated half-way between Aylesbury and Bierton: the entrance is under an archway, on each side of which are the respective residences of the governor and chaplain, presenting a handsome facade to the road, between which and the entrance building is a courtyard, flanked on each side by the several places of confinement: in the entrance corridor to the main building are nine rooms for visiting justices, governor, chaplain, surgeons and others, and above are six infirmaries for the general purposes of the prison: behind the centre building, stretching out in the form of the three lower limbs of a cross, are the cells; each of these divisions contain three stories or tiers, which are approached by outside iron galleries and crossings at each story, and by an iron spiral staircase: the prison contains 220 common cells and 6 dark or punishment cells, for males; 19 common, 3 reception and 5 unappropriated cells, for females; and 17 sleeping rooms, 4 day rooms and one visiting room in the debtors' department: each prisoner has a cell to himself, measuring 13 feet by 7, the arrangements and discipline of which are upon the plan of the Model Prison at Pentonville: the chapel contains sittings for 300 persons: in the basement of the building are the kitchens and apparatus for cooking, which is done by steam; the food is raised by a windlass to the different galleries, and placed silently in a small aperture in the door of each cell. The walls of the prison enclose an area of nearly 5 acres. James Young, governor; Rev. Henry Gilbert Layton, chaplain; Miss Emma Jane Linton, matron.

The County Lunatic Asylum, situated in the parish of Stone, is a large red brick building with stone dressings, erected in 1852, but since enlarged, it will now hold 500 patients; a chapel has been added. John Humphry M.R.C.S. Eng. superintendent; Rev. Charles Lowndes, chaplain: William Henry Sherman, house steward and clerk.

The Buckinghamshire General Infirmary, situated at Aylesbury, at the junction of the Bicester and Buckingham roads, is a handsome building of red brick with stone dressings: it was built by private subscription at a cost of about £11,000, and contains two wards, one for men and one for women, and two by-wards for eye cases, the whole affording beds for 50 persons. On the ground floor is a spacious dispensary and waiting-room for out-patients, with accommodation for the house surgeon, matron &c.: the building was publicly opened on the 24th June, 1862, and in 1882 another ward was opened for patients requiring isolation. E. C. Howard Van Buren, house surgeon; George Fell, secretary; Mrs. Robinson, matron.

Coroners for the County—Aylesbury district, J. Parrott, Aylesbury; Beaconsfield district, George Allington, Chearsley; Newport Pagnell district, J. Worley, Stony Stratford; Winslow district, Robert De'Ath, Buckingham.

IMPORTANT WORKS OR PAPERS ON LOCAL GEOLOGY.—1861. Whitaker, W.—On the "Chalk Rock" in Bucks. Journ. Geol. Soc., vol. xvii. p. 166. 1865. Whitaker, W.—The Chalk of Bucks and the Totternhoe Stone. Journ. Geol. Soc., vol. xxi. p. 398. 1867. Brodie, Rev. P. B.—Purbeck Beds &c. at Brill. Journ. Geol. Soc., vol. xxiii. p. 197. 1881 Hudleston, W. H.—Gasteropoda of the Portland Rocks. Geol. Mag., p. 385.

NOTWITHSTANDING the extensive and varied character of the rocks of this county, they do not seem to have received much attention from local geologists. We have admirable geological maps of the surface published by the Government Survey between 1861 and 1865, and mainly the work of Messrs. Whitaker, Hull, Bauerman and Green; Mr. Whitaker has also well and minutely described the Chalk district, Dr. Fritton the Portland Beds and Lower Greensand, and the Purbeck Beds at Brill have been noticed by the Rev. P. B. Brodie; Mr. Macalister also published some notes on the northern portion, in the Geologist for 1861, but there remains an extensive field to be filled by those who live upon the spot. Every quarry, brick pit, railway cutting, or opening of whatsoever kind into the earth, should be diligently examined, carefully measured and drawn, and continually examined for fossils; in this way the broad outlines we now possess must be filled up, and if only one person in each parish could be induced to undertake such work, the gain to geological inquiry would be of real and great value.

Commencing with the oldest rocks, we find in the north that the river Tove has cut down into and exposed the Upper Lias Clays, which just enter the county between Grafton Regis and Ashton to Castle Thorpe, two or three miles north of Stony Stratford; the Ouse has also exposed small patches near Stoke Goldington and Weston Underwood.

THE OOLITE.—Of the sandy and slaty beds known as Northampton Sand there are no good sections; indeed, these beds have either thinned out or changed in character in this direction.

The Great Oolite.—The limestones of this well-known bed are exposed in many quarries; from Brackley and Birmingham it passes round by Stowe, Lillingston and Potterspury; Stony Stratford, Newport Pagnell and Cold Brayfield mark its eastern limit, but it stretches north-eastward from these points into Bedfordshire.

The limestones are of a compact and not oolitic character; they are often soft and marly, and in such beds fossils are most common; frequently we find only the moulds or casts of shells, but they are generally entire, and appear to have been deposited in still water. Clayey beds occur at the base, above which come thin-bedded, cream-coloured limestones and marls, whilst the white, hard, fine-grained limestones are more usually found near the top. Between Brackley and Buckingham there are many quarries, as near Westbury. At Shalstone Hill Farm there is a bed of very hard, white limestone, composed almost entirely of broken shells, and yielding a beautiful building stone. In the valley of the Thornborough Brook there are some large quarries, exposing a section of more than 30 feet; a fault, with a downthrow to the east of 10 feet, runs across the quarry; very interesting exposures of "faults," or dislocations of the beds, may also be seen in a quarry near South End. On Whittlewood Forest there are several quarries; here, on blocks of stone which have been long exposed to the weather, one finds standing out in relief portions of shells, plates and spines of sea-urchins, star-like joints of the stems of crinoids, with worm tracks and serpulæ.

From quarries at Gayhurst, Eckley, Salcey Wood and Olney many fossils have been obtained; the shell called Terebratula maxillata abounds here. The scenery of the tract occupied by the Great Oolite is undulating, hilly, and often well-wooded, with an eastward slope to the Ouse; the dip of the beds is also in this direction, and their total thickness is about 200 feet.

Forest Marble.—We seemingly have the end of this formation in Buckinghamshire; traces of it are seen in quarries near the brook east of Tingewick church, at Thornton and Lillingston Lovell; the beds consist of from 3 to 10 feet of blue or brown clay, with about two feet of hard grey slaty limestone underneath, almost made up of oysters.

Cornbrash.—We find the rubbly limestones which go by this name between Fringford, Tingewick and Buckingham, north of which town they extend past Maids Moreton and Akeley; eastwards by Thornborough and Beachampton, the outcrop is two miles wide; near Stony Stratford it contracts to half a mile, again widening between Bradwell, Great Linford and Newport Pagnell; it is then obscured by the Ouse gravels, but re-appears as a narrow band, not a quarter of a mile wide east of Sherrington, and curves round thence to Newton Blossomville; it is largely quarried for road-making, being very hard. Near Buckingham, on the Bourton road, we see hard blue limestones associated with beds of black and blue clay; near Thornborough, on the Leckhampstead road, we have in the quarries good illustrations of the manner of weathering of these limestones: the top limestone bands are yellow and rubbly, then, under a bed of sandy clay, we have solid limestone, yellow outside, blue within; lastly, at the base we find solid blue limestone only. The change in colour is due to the iron, which exists in the lower bands as a carbonate, whilst upwards it gradually passes into a peroxide, under the influence of air and water; the total thickness here is about 40 feet. Near Wolverton there are several quarries; here the Cornbrash is of blue-grey colour, very hard and finely laminated; fossils are numerous but difficult of extraction. There are two curious inliers at West Stan Hill and Marsh Gibbon; the first is a very low hummock; a quarry here shows loose rubbly Cornbrash, with a bed of pale blue clay, full of oysters. Marsh Gibbon stands on a little hill of Cornbrash; there are several quarries here, which show loose rubbly stone on top, then soft marly clay, and hard blue limestone at the bottom.

The Oxford Clay.—This is a light-blue clay, weathering yellow at the surface, and perhaps 500 feet thick; its western limit is defined by the beds of Cornbrash just described, but eastwards it stretches over a wide expanse to Muswell and Brill Hills, Quainton and Fenny Stratford; sections are not common, but may sometimes be seen in brick-pits, railway cuttings, or drain cuttings; towards the Ouse it occupies the top of the low escarpment, forming a heavy undulating country which rises with a short but steep slope above a plateau formed of Cornbrash. Near Goddington we have the base of the formation, here composed of hard, cream-coloured calcareous clay, containing Ammonites Jason, &c.; similar beds are exposed round Newport Pagnell, where Ammonites Calloviensis is found, with saurian bones, &c.; these, probably, are near the horizon of the Kelloway Rock, of Wiltshire. The brick-pits near Padbury show shaly dark-blue clay, with large nodules and septaria of limestone. Gryphæa dilatata is common everywhere, with semi-transparent glassy crystals of selenite, called "fossil water" by the workmen, and yellowish lumps of iron pyrites.

The Coralline Oolite.—The sands and limestone at Headington and Stanton St. John, near Oxford, appear to pass eastwards into a clayey band containing Ostrea sandalina, which has been traced by Worminghall, Oakley, Boarstall, round Muswell Hill, and through Dorton to the base of Quainton Hill. At Studley there is a bed of grit, "a sort of argillaceous chert, rich in Pinnæ, Ammonites, and other organic remains;" this may mark the transition.

Kimmeridge Clay.—The Coralline Oolite having become itself a clay band, or being absent altogether, there is nothing over the greater part of Bucks to separate the two great clay masses named after Oxford and Kimmeridge from one another; it is however considered that the Kimmeridge Clay forms the plains and low grounds between Thame, Brill, Waddesdon and Aylesbury; the lower boundary line is drawn by the Geological Survey to end off near Stewkley, but this is marked "wholly conjectural;" it is a bluish-grey or yellow shaly clay, often bituminous, sandy towards the base and with irregular bands of limestone nodules: like the Oxford clay, it is best fitted for pasture land; oaks grow well upon it; from the impervious nature of this wide clay tract there are no springs. Near Hartwell and Aylesbury this Kimmeridge clay is largely worked for brick-making; here it is of a dull leaden colour, lignite (fossil wood) is common and fossils abound; Ammonites biplex occurs, with the original beautiful shelly lustre still preserved, and many of the fossils sparkle with iron pyrites and are found entire and in great perfection.

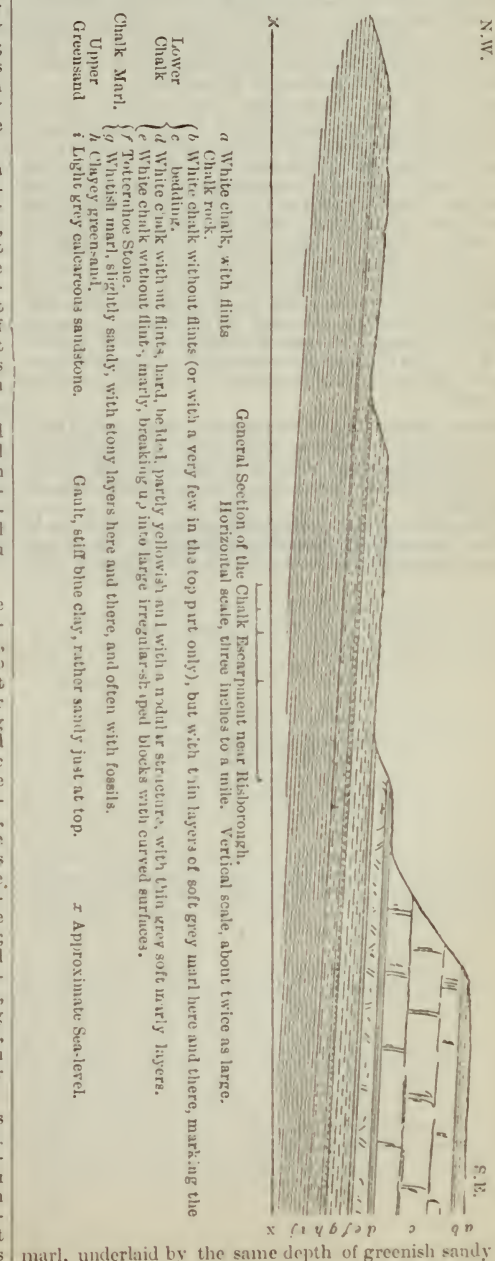
Diagram Section of small faults in the Portland Stone, Brill. This dislocation of the beds was seen in a small pit about two-thirds of a mile south-west of the church. The dark bands are two shaly layers; the greatest displacement, or "throw," only amounts to two feet. (After A. H. Green, Geol. Survey.)



Portland Beds.—The lower part is sandy, above which come beds of limestone; the main outcrop passes north-east from Thame by Cuddington and Dinton to Aylesbury and Bierton; outlying masses occur at Muswell Hill, Brill, Ashendon, Whitchurch &c. There are several sections at Brill, where it is quarried for building; here, at the base, we see the Portland Sands with green grains, and then limestones with bands of clay and grit, altogether about 25 feet thick; in one pit, south-west of the church, a number of small faults were seen, dislocating the beds about two feet at each step. Near Aylesbury the Portland limestone is called "pendle;" it is soft and sandy. Trigonia gibbosa with Cardium dissimile are the most common fossils.

Purbeck Beds.—These are thin-bedded limestones and clays or freshwater origin; they come above the Portland beds at Brill, also capping the ridge between Whitchurch and Oving, and they crop out east of Cuddington and south-east of Stone; the limestones are drab-coloured, close-grained, and in beds six or eight inches thick; the total thickness is about ten feet; fish teeth and scales occur, with the little crustacean known as Cypris.

THE CRETACEOUS FORMATION.—The sandy beds at the base, known as Lower Greensand, are very irregular in occurrence; in the north-east they are called the Woburn sands, which come southwards from Great and Little Brickhill to Fenny Stratford, where they are overlapped by the Gault Clay; here they form dry, hilly ground; on a hill near Great Brickhill there is a section 30 feet deep, showing coarse reddish sands resting on Oxford clay; scattered through the sands are "red coprolites," or phosphatic nodules, for which the sands are sifted, the coprolites are then ground up for manure; the same bed occurs at Rushmoor brick-yard and at Potton in Bedfordshire, and Upware, near Cambridge. More than twenty species of fossils native to the bed have been found here by Mr. W. Keeping, besides numbers washed out of lower formations, especially the Kimmeridge Clay. At Wavendon there is an outlier containing seams of fullers' earth; passing southwards the Lower Greensand crops out again at the south of Stone; here it rests partly on Purbeck, partly on Portland beds, and presents indications of Wealden beds at its base. At Hartwell a bed of brown and white sand, about eight feet thick, has been used for glass-making; there is a small outlying patch south of Oving, and others on Muswell Hill, Brill, north of Chearsley, &c.; the main mass also crops out again north of Haddenham. Quainton Hill is also capped by Lower Greensand.

Gault.—This is a thick mass of pale-blue clay, sometimes shaly, often with whitey-brown phosphatic nodules. Entering the county in a broad band three miles wide, extending from Towersey to Henton, we trace it by Weston Turville to Hulcott; here the outcrop broadens to seven miles between Cublington and Wing on the west and Buckland and Eaton Bray on the east. The manner in which it overlaps the Lower Greensand we have already seen; its thickness is about 130 feet in the south and 205 feet in the north-east, and it is dug for brick and tile making. A rich seam of "black coprolites" is found about 40 or 50 feet below the top of the Gault; it has been worked at Edlesborough, Puttenham, Cheddington, Northall, Billington, &c.

The Upper Greensand.—This formation overlies the Gault, and extends from between Henton and Princes Risborough to about a mile north-east of Buckland, from which point it is hardly traceable, although it is once more seen in the brick-yard at Eaton Bray; here we have six feet of pale-grey marl, underlaid by the same depth of greenish sandy clay.

At Buckland it is seen in the sides of a pond, and a stream cuts through it about half a mile south-east of Aston-Clinton church; at Risborough it is, perhaps, 60 feet thick; in the road cuttings about Bledlow and Henton we see beds of crumbling whitish sandstone, sometimes hard, and these are covered by clayey dark-green sand seldom exposed. Numerous springs burst out at its junction with the Gault below, which have determined the sites of a whole string of villages.

The Chalk.—This well-known rock constitutes a large portion of the south of the county, rising in the Chiltern Hills to about 900 feet above the sea level; the lowest beds are of soft whitish chalk marl, about 80 feet thick, and form rising ground between Bledlow, Risborough, and the reservoirs between Tring and Marsworth. The top of this division is formed by the hard Totternhoe Stone, a rather brownish sandy chalk with dark grains; it is well seen in a small quarry near "Tring Wharf," and in several road cuttings along the line just mentioned.

Lower Chalk.—This division is about 400 feet thick and is without flints; it forms the slope of the great chalk escarpment, and is exposed along the sides of the valleys which cut it back; the top is marked by a thin but very constant bed of Chalk rock, hard and pinkish; we see this layer in a large chalk-pit one mile north of Henley, and in various chalk-pits between the latter town and Marlow, also near High Wycombe, Chesham, &c. Well-sinkers call it "rock," and have to blast it on account of its hardness.

Upper Chalk with Flints.—This mass is some 300 feet thick and forms the eastern slope of the Chiltern Hills; it may be distinguished from the lower beds not only by the presence of flints, but by the character of the fossils. We find in it many species of sea-urchins, sponges, &c., whilst in the Lower Chalk whorled and spiral univalve shells occur.

Beech trees grow largely over this tract of chalk, and their wood is used for chair-making. The chalk itself is much burnt for lime; it is got in large pits from 50 to 150 feet deep; the men work at the top of the pits with crowbars, dislodging great masses, which break to pieces in their fall; fortunately the chalk is traversed by fissures or joints, for were it one homogeneous mass it would be scarcely possible to work it. The Chiltern Hills command an extensive prospect and rise sharply from the Oolitic plain which lies to the north-west.

TERTIARY BEDS—EOCENE FORMATION.—Occupying a large triangle between Colnbrook, Beaconsfield and Rickmansworth, we find sands and clays of an age altogether distinct from, and later than, those rocks of which we have hitherto been speaking.

Reading Beds.—These extend eastwardly from Woburn by Burnham, Beaconsfield, Hedgerley, Chalfont St. Peter's and Denham; they consist of variegated plastic clays with light-coloured and green sands; they are exposed in brick-yards at Hedsor, Burnham, &c. There are several outliers on the chalk, as at Penn, Pollard Wood, &c. No fossils have been found.

The London Clay.—This rests on the Reading Beds round Fulmer, at Stoke Common, Iver, Red Hill, &c.; it is a stiff brownish clay, often containing large nodules called septaria, which are rounded lumps of impure limestone, traversed by fissures filled with carbonate of lime.

THE DRIFT.—In attempting to trace the beds of stratified rocks of which we have been speaking, the geologist finds that they are largely covered over and obscured by irregular, often thick, masses of clay full of pebbles, or by more or less extensive patches of sand or gravel. These deposits are relics of the glacial period; the clays were probably dropped by melting icebergs, or possibly pushed out from the end of a great glacier which travelled down from the north into Bedfordshire. The northern side of the Ouse valley between Brackley and Olney is tolerably free from Drift, but south of this line and spreading over the plain formed by the Oolitic Clays we find thick and varied deposits; clean gravel beds occur round Hardwick, between Finmere and Buckingham, and round Stowe and Akeley. In the gravel-pit at Tingewick we see false-bedded coarse gravels with beds of soft clean sand. Near Buckingham there are several examples in gravel-pits of the manner in which these beds are sometimes contorted and bent into curves; this is supposed to be due to the grounding of icebergs; similar cases occur at Foxcott and Maids Moreton. The stiff clay drift is well shown round Leckhampstead, where it contains striated boulders of carboniferous limestone, &c. There is also a connecting link in the shape of clayey dirty gravels which are widely distributed.

Over the chalk hills there is much "clay with flints," probably a result of the decomposition of the chalk during long ages.

The Ouse river-gravels cover much ground; they abound in oolitic fossils, especially belemnites, which are sometimes collected by the villagers, who consider them, when pounded, an excellent cure for rheumatism!

Flint Implements, the tools of the early inhabitants of this country before they became acquainted with the use of metals have only been found in one or two places. Pulpit Wood, near Princes Risborough, appears to have been the site of an ancient encampment, and flakes of flint occur in numbers; they were probably used as knives; rounded tools, called scrapers, which would be useful in cleansing skins, have been found here too; a rude flint arrow-head was found by Mr. John Evans in 1866, on the surface of a field between Edlesborough and Tring, at the foot of the chalk hills. Many more would doubtless turn up if they were intelligently looked for.

ADDINGTON is a parish 2 miles north-west from Winslow and 5 south from Buckingham, in the hundred, union and county court district of Buckingham, rural deanery of Claydon, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Mary is a handsome structure consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, vestry, south porch with square western embattled tower and 4 bells; it has been restored and beautified by the patron of the living; there is an organ and every window is stained; there are several monuments to the Busby family, formerly lords of the manor, and one to the Poulett family. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is a rectory, yearly value £250 including 103 acres of glebe with residence, in the gift of the Right Hon. J. G. Hubbard P.C., M.P., D.L., J.P. and held since 1869 by the Rev. David Greig M.A. of Marischal College, Aberdeen. There is a charity, the proceeds of £720 in Reduced £3 per Cents. for the poor and for teaching poor children to read and binding them to some trade.

Addington Manor, the seat of the Right Hon. John Gellibrand Hubbard P.C., M.P., D.L., J.P., F.R.G.S. is a handsome building erected in 1857 from a design of P. Hardwick esq.; it is of brick with Bath stone quoins and dressings and has three lofty towers and some fine conservatories, the style is a modification of the French château; it is pleasantly situated in a well-wooded park of 300 acres. The Right Hon. John G. Hubbard M.P. is sole landowner and lord of the manor. The soil is clay and gravel; the greater portion of the land is pasture. The area is 1,320 acres; rateable value £2,362; the population in 1881 was 134.

ADSTOCK is a parish and small village 3 miles north-west from Winslow and 4 south-east from Buckingham, on the London road, in the hundred, union and county court district of Buckingham, rural deanery of Claydon, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Cecilia is a very ancient building consisting of chancel and nave, with square embattled tower and 2 bells: there is an ancient stone font; it was restored in 1875: in the nave is a monument to three successive rectors of the same family named Thomas Egerton, who held the living from 1587 to 1720 and another to the memory of the Rev. Alexander Burrell M.A. 50 years rector of this parish, dated 1771: a clock was placed in the tower by subscription in 1880, at a cost of £80. The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a rectory, present yearly value about £350 with residence, in the gift of Philip Hart esq and held since 1879 by the Rev. Daniel Watkins. Land comprising 4A. 2R. 4P. was left for the repairs of the church. Here is a Wesleyan chapel. James Hawley esq. who is lord of the manor, the Right Hon. John G. Hubbard P.C., M.P., D.L., J.P., F.R.G.S. and Samuel Perkins are the principal landowners. The soil is clay; two-thirds of the land is pasture and one-third arable. The area is 1,130 acres; rateable value, £1,773; and the population in 1881 was 352.

AKELEY is a parish 2½ miles north from Buckingham, in the hundred, county court district and union of Buckingham, rural deanery of Buckingham, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, on the road from Buckingham to Towcester. The church of St. James the Apostle was entirely rebuilt in 1854 by private subscription: it consists of chancel and nave, with square embattled tower on the south side of the nave, through the basement of which is the principal entrance, 2 bells, clock and an octagonal turret or spire at one corner of the tower rising about 24 feet: it is in the Early Decorated style: an organ has been added by private subscription. The register dates from the year 1682. The living is a rectory, yearly value £210 with residence, in the gift of Charles Pilgrim esq. J.P. and held since 1874 by the Rev. Hill Toller M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. Here is a Wesleyan chapel. There is a poor's allotment of 12½ acres. Akeley Wood, the residence of Mrs. Pilgrim, is a half-timbered Elizabethan cottage, standing in about 200 acres of well-timbered grass land, part of Akeley Wood, a celebrated old cover, left by William of Wykeham to New College, Oxford. The Warden and fellows of New College, Oxford, are lords of the manor, A. J. Robarts J.P. L. R. Hall J.P. esqrs. Captain E. M. Dayrell J.P. and Mrs. Pilgrim are the principal landowners. The soil is clay; subsoil clay. The land is about equally divided between pasture and arable. The area is 1,277 acres; rateable value, £1,892; the population in 1881 was 387.

AMERSHAM (formerly AGMONDESHAM) is a market and union town and parish and a polling place for the county, situated in a delightful valley, 26 miles from London, 7 from High Wycombe station on Great Western railway, 8 from Berkhampstead station on North Western railway, 5 from Beaconsfield and 3 south from Chesham, on the Misbourne stream, in the hundred of Burnham, county court district of Chesham, rural deanery of Amersham, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford; it consists of two streets, intersecting in their centres, where the Market house stands. The church of St. Mary is a handsome Gothic structure in length about 125 feet and chiefly of Perpendicular date, consisting of chancel with north aisle, or Drake chapel, nave with clerestory, lighted by five windows on either side, aisles, south porch richly groined, and a western embattled tower, containing 6 bells: the stained east window representing the Twelve Apostles and Evangelists was removed here from the chapel of Lamer Manor House, Herts, on its reconstruction by Sir Bennett Garrard in 1761: the nave and aisles are divided by arcades of five Pointed arches of Late Decorated work; on the north side of the chancel is a monument, with demi-effigy, placed in a niche, to Sir William Drake bart. and on the south side, also in a recess, between pillars of the Doric order, a cenotaph of black and gold, above which are medallion portraits of Montagu Drake esq. 1678 and Jane, his wife, daughter of Sir John Garrard bart. of Lamer, Herts, 1724; there are also in the chancel other memorials to the family of Drake, including a mural monument, by Bacon, to Thomas Drake Tyrwhitt-Drake esq. of Shardeloes, M.P. for Amersham 1810; a monument to William Drake esq. 1796; and in the vestry a mural tablet to Dr Thomas Drake, rector of Amersham, 1775 and Elizabeth, his wife, 1765; the mortuary chapel of the Drake family, on the north side of the chancel, is about 50 feet long by 25 wide and has on the north side a magnificent tomb, by B. Schumaker, consisting of a sarcophagus of black marble, gilt, with figures in white marble, beneath an elliptic arch, supported on pilasters, to Montagne Garrard Drake esq. 1728; over the vestry door is a tablet to Margaret, wife of the Rev. John Drake, of North Church, Herts, 1812; at the east end of this is a monument, with emblematical carving, in white marble, by Bacon, to Elizabeth, daughter of William Drake esq. M.P. and widow of Rev. Rich. Frank D.D.; on the south side are other memorials, by Bacon and others, to William Drake, jun. esq. 1795 and Emily, his wife, 1806; Elizabeth, wife of William Drake esq; Rev. Charles Tyrwhitt-Drake A.M. 1816; Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Tyrwhitt-Drake esq. 1801 and Henry and Francis, his sons, 1793-1801; Rachel, widow of William Drake, jun. esq. 1784 and Mary, his wife, 1778; Mary, wife of the Rev. John Tyrwhitt-Drake M.A. rector of Amersham, 1827; Jesse, wife of Francis Drake esq. of Esher, 1625: in the south aisle is a brass, with the effigy of a child, to John, son of the foregoing, 1623; in the chancel is an altar tomb, with fluted pillars supporting a pediment, beneath which are kneeling figures of a lady and gentleman, and below an inscription to Elizabeth, widow of William Bent esq. of Corby, Leic. 1730, and to George Bent, her son, 1714; near which is a mural tablet, with an account of her bequests to the town by will, dated 25 June, 1728: in the north cross aisle is a mural tablet to James Rumsey M.D. 1821, and various memorials to the family of Eeles, 1727-1815: in the south aisle are inscribed stones or mural monuments to Edward Childe, 1676; Philip Ayres esq. 1712 and the Rev. John Drake LL.D. 50 years rector of Amersham; and in the vestry a mural tablet to the Rev. Benjamin Robertshaw, rector of Amersham, 1728-43: in the south cross aisle are brasses, with effigies, to John de la Penne, 1537 and Elizabeth, his wife, 1521; and to Henry Brudenell esq. 1430 and Alianora, his wife: in the north aisle is a brass effigy and inscription to Thomas Carbonell esq. 1439 and Elizabeth, his wife, 1400; there is also a mutilated brass of an ecclesiastic; the brasses of Drugo Brudenell, 1479 and his wife, Ellen, 1469, are lost. The register dates from the year 1561. The living is a rectory with the chapelry of Coleshill annexed, commuted at £1,500 with residence, in the gift of Thomas Tyrwhitt-Drake esq. D.L., J.P. and held since 1863 by the Rev. Edward Tyrwhitt-Drake M.A. of Magdalene College, Cambridge. The Particular Baptists, General Baptists and Wesleyans have each a chapel. There are two cemeteries, one for Nonconformists, the extent of which is half an acre, and another of 1A. 1R. 39P. in extent. The Town hall, standing in the centre of the town, is a handsome brick edifice resting on piazzas; the lower part is appropriated to the use of the market (though not now used); the upper part is surmounted by a lantern turret, with clock, is used for transacting public business and entertainments. There are six almshouses, built in the year 1657 by Sir William Drake, formerly owner of Shardeloes, for the benefit of six poor widows of farmers and tradesmen, who each receive 7s. per week and a new gown every two years, also on the longest day 9s. 4d. and on the shortest day 1s. 4d. each, besides two loads of wood annually for firing; and six almshouses, built by Miss Day, for six elderly females, endowed with 7s. each per week. There are also the Tothill, Snell's, Waller's, Hales', Wharton's and Mrs. Bent's charities, comprising various sums, altogether amounting to about £400 a year for various purposes. The market day is Tuesday; and fairs are held on Whit Monday and on the 19th September. Here are three flour mills and an extensive brewery. Shardeloes, the ancient seat of the Drake family, stands in a park of 340 acres and is occupied by Thomas Tyrwhitt-Drake esq. D.L., J.P. who is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Little Shardeloes is the seat of Capt. Thomas Henry Tyrwhitt-Drake. The soil is principally chalk and flint. The entire area is 12,544 acres, chiefly arable, with much woodland; rateable value, £10,337; the entire population in 1881 was 2,500.

Coleshill is a hamlet and chapelry in the parish of Amersham, 1¼ miles south, formerly in the county of Hertford, but by the Act 2 & 3 William IV. cap. 64 is now included in this county; it is about one mile and a half from Amersham, situated on a hill, with much woodland. The trade of manufacturing earthenware pots and pans was formerly carried on here, but now is nearly extinct, there being now only one kiln. Among the curiosities is the celebrated Waller's Oak.

LARKINS GREEN is in this hamlet. The area is 2,810 acres; rateable value, £2,173; the population in 1881 was 550.

WINCHMORE HILL lies between Coleshill and Penn, being situated partly within the boundaries of both those places.

Parish Clerk, George Priest, Church street.

ASHENDON is a village and parish 9 miles west from Aylesbury, 4 east from Brill, 1½ east from Dorton and 1 mile from the Wotton station on the tramway from Quainton road to Brill, in the hundred of Ashendon, union and county court district of Aylesbury, rural deanery of Waddesdon, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford and is situate on a hill. The church of St. Mary is an ancient structure in the Decorated, Early English and Perpendicular styles and consists of chancel, nave with clerestory and an arcade of three arches connecting it with the south aisle; south aisle, south porch and a tower at the west end containing 3 bells: there are two piscinæ: in the chancel of the church, beneath a depressed crocketed arch with finial, is a tomb with the figure of a cross-legged warrior in chain mail, the hauberk reaching to his knees and covered with a surcoat; his right hand grasps his sword and his left the scabbard, the left arm bearing a large heater-shaped shield; the effigy is said to be that of Sir John Bugden, of Pollicott; the chancel arch is acutely pointed: there are many mural monuments. The register dates from the year 1670. The living is a vicarage, annexed to that of Dorton in the year 1850, joint yearly value £202, in the gift of Christ Church Oxford, and held since 1871 by the Rev. John Cramer Addison M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge, who resides at Dorton. The finest examples of saucer-shape blake known are two of the Anglo-Saxon period, 3¾ inches in diameter and jewelled, found in this parish and now in the collection of the Hon. Richard Neville. The Duke of Buckingham and Chandos is the lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is loam and clay; subsoil, clay and limestone. The land is principally used for pasture. The area is 1,790 acres; rateable value, £2,800; the population in 1871 was 274.

POLLICOTT (UPPER and LOWER) form a hamlet in this parish, about half a mile south of the village.

ASHLEY GREEN, a hamlet and an ecclesiastical parish, formed in 1875 from the civil parish of Chesham, is situated on a hill on the borders of Herts, about 3 miles north-east from the town and 2 from Berkhampstead station, in the Amersham union, Chesham county court district, rural deanery of Amersham, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. John the Evangelist, of flint with stone dressings, in the Early English style, was consecrated in 1875 and has chancel, nave and south aisle, porch, belfry and 2 bells: it was erected at the sole cost of Miss Dorrien. The register dates from the year 1875. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £270 with residence, in the gift of Miss Dorrien and held since 1880 by the Rev. Robert Straffen M.A. of St. Catharine's College, Cambridge. Here is a small Baptist chapel, to seat 100. The hamlet is surrounded by several farms of considerable importance: in Grove farm are the remains of an old Danish fort; the walls and moat are still in a state of preservation. The land is chiefly arable. The rateable value is £3,742; the population in 1881 was about 592.

LEIGH GREEN and WHELPLEY HILL are places in this parish.

ASTON ABBOTTS (or ABBOTS ASTON) is a small village and parish 3½ miles from Marston Gate station on the Aylesbury and Cheddington branch of the London and North Western railway and 5½ north-east from Aylesbury, in the union and county court district of Aylesbury, hundred of Cottesloe, formerly a peculiar of the Bishop of London, but now transferred to the diocese of Oxford and archdeaconry of Buckingham and in the rural deanery of Mursley. The church of St. James is a small stone structure, chiefly of the Decorated period, consisting of chancel, nave, south porch, and a western tower with square turret, containing 5 bells, dated respectively—No. 1, 1652; 2, 1740; 3, 1739; 4, 1652; 5, 1652: there is a good Decorated piscina in the south wall of the chancel, in good preservation: the stained east window, executed at a cost of £70, is a memorial to Sir J. C. and Lady Ross, who died and were buried in the churchyard, the former in 1862 and the latter in 1857: the church was restored and partly rebuilt in 1865-6, at a cost of about £1,230, under the superintendence of the late G. E. Street esq. R.A. and re-opened by the late Bishop of Oxford, May 22nd, 1866: the tower, which is the only portion of the old church now standing, is of the fourteenth century, the remainder being of the eleventh century: the new work is partly executed with the old materials, in random courses, with quoins of Ancaster stone: the church furniture has been presented by Mrs. Thornton and family from the proceeds of private sales of their own work. The register dates from the year 1559. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £150 with residence, in the gift of Lord Overstone and held since 1853 by the Rev. John Thornton M.A. of St. Catherine's College, Cambridge. Here is a Baptist chapel erected in 1830, a Congregational chapel erected in 1839, also a Primitive Methodist chapel. Lord Overstone is lord of the manor. The Abbey, the residence of Frederick Straw esq. is a commodious house of brick and stone and previous to the dissolution of the monasteries was a seat of the Abbot of St. Albans; it stands pleasantly overlooking the town and vale of Aylesbury; there is a sheet of water in the grounds. The principal landowners are Lord Overstone, John Temple Leader esq. the Roads family, Mr. William Elliott and E. M. M. Lucas esq. The soil is sand and gravel; subsoil, sand. The chief crops are grass and wheat. The area is 2,180 acres; rateable value, £3,914; the population in 1871 was 327.

BURSTON (or BIRDSTANE), called in Domesday Book Bricstock, is in this parish and was at one time the seat of a branch of the Lees; it now contains two farms.

ASTON CLINTON is a township, parish and village within the parliamentary borough of Aylesbury, on the road from Aylesbury to Tring, from which it is distant 3 miles north-west and 3½ south-east from Aylesbury, in the hundred, union and county court district of Aylesbury, rural deanery of Wendover, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The Chiltern hills run through this parish and the village is supplied with water from them by the company which supplies Aylesbury. The church of St. Michael is a stone building consisting of chancel, nave and aisles, with a square tower and 6 bells: it was restored in 1867 at a cost of £1,000, raised by voluntary contributions; £500 of the above sum was given by John Hall esq. late a resident in this parish, being a portion of several thousands left to him as trustee by a lady for the purpose of restoring and building churches, and £250 were presented by Sir A. de Rothschild, bart.: a handsome stone pulpit has been erected and the chancel entirely rebuilt: the churchyard is surrounded by a belt of lime trees. The register dates from the year 1560. The living is a rectory, net yearly value £754 with residence, in the gift of Jesus College, Oxford and held since 1881 by the Rev. Thomas Williams M.A. late fellow of Jesus College, Oxford. The Baptists have a chapel here, built in 1830 and rebuilt in 1846. Turpin's charity of £12 15s. yearly is for bread. Preparing straw for plaiting forms the chief employment of the inhabitants of this parish. The seat of Lord Lake is now the property of Louisa the Dowager Lady de Rothschild, the mansion having been rebuilt on an enlarged scale by the late Sir Anthony de Rothschild. The Dowager Lady de Rothschild, who is lady of the manor, Mrs. Bull and the Mercers' Company are the chief landowners. The soil is stiff loam; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley, beans and clover. The entire area is 3,640 acres; rateable value, with St. Leonard's, £6,710; the entire population in 1871 was 1,435.

ASTON SANDFORD is a small secluded parish 4 miles east-north-east from Thame and 7 south-west from Aylesbury, in the hundred of Ashendon, union and county court district of Aylesbury, rural deanery of Aylesbury, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Michael is a small building in the Early English style, dating from the thirteenth century, and consists of chancel and nave; the former contains an ancient ambry: there are three stained windows: there is a tablet in the chancel to the memory of the Rev. Thomas Scott, twenty years rector of this parish. The register dates from about the year 1600. The living is a rectory, net yearly value £150 with residence, in the gift of the trustees of the late John Dover esq. and held since 1881 by the Rev. Allan Cameron Alford M.A. of Corpus Christi college, Cambridge. The trustees of the late John Dover esq. are lords of the manor and sole landowners. The soil is stiff, wet clay; subsoil, same. The chief crops are wheat and beans. The area is 669 acres; rateable value, £928; the population in 1871 was 58. This place is included in Haddenham School Board United District.

AYLESBURY.

AYLESBURY is a market and union town, parish, parliamentary borough and a polling place for the county, in a hundred to which it gives name, rural deanery of Aylesbury, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, most pleasantly situated on an elevated site formed of Portland rock, one of the members of the oolitic formation, and at its highest point about 300 feet above the level of the sea, near the middle of the county, 40 miles from London through Wendover, Amersham and Uxbridge, 38 through Tring, Berkhampstead and Watford, 43¾ by the North Western railway, which has a terminal station in the town, on a branch line diverging from the main line at Cheddington Junction, and 47½ by the Great Western railway, which runs in on a branch line diverging from the main line near Maidenhead and passing High Wycombe and Risborough; from the latter place it was opened in October, 1863: the Aylesbury and Buckingham line connects it with the Buckinghamshire railway, thus completing its direct communication with all parts of the kingdom; it is 30 miles south-south-east from Windsor, 16 from High Wycombe, 17 from Buckingham and Bicester, 10 east-north-east from Thame and 10 west-south-west from Leighton Buzzard, Bedfordshire. A branch of the Grand Junction canal runs into Aylesbury. The town gives name to the large and fruitful Vale of Aylesbury, long celebrated for verdure and fertility, which, extending from the foot of the Chiltern Hills and the western border of Hertfordshire towards the north to Wingrave and Oving, is skirted by the hills of Pitchcott and Quainton and stretches westward almost to the verge of Oxfordshire, losing its appellation in the tract of woodland formerly Birnwood, or Bernwode, Forest.

Aylesbury, anciently written Æglesbyrig (probably Ecclesbury or Churchbury, although derived by the Rev. J. Taylor, from the name of Eigil, the hero-archer), was a town of the ancient British and stoutly maintained its independence against its English invaders till the year 571, when it was reduced by Cuthwolf, brother to Cealwin, King of the West Saxons. During the Civil war it was garrisoned for the Parliament in 1644-5, under Col. Bealstrode: Prince Rupert appeared before the town, 20th March, 1643, but no engagement took place. The skirmish known as "the Battle of Holman's Bridge," near Aylesbury, occurred on November 1, 1642. The town was incorporated and was made a borough and empowered to send members to Parliament by a charter from Queen Mary in 1553-4; the latter privilege it still possesses in returning two burgesses to Parliament, who are elected by occupiers residing in the three hundreds of Aylesbury, comprising twenty-six entire parishes and part of another. WALTON, which is now a continuous street leading out of Aylesbury, on the road to London through Amersham, was formerly a separate hamlet, but it is now united to and forms a part of the town.

The town is governed by a Local Board of nine members.

The town with Walton is now abundantly supplied with water from the Chiltern Hills by a public company established in the year 1867 and which also supplies the villages of Aston Clinton, with St. Leonard's, Buckland, Drayton Beauchamp, Halton, Hartwell, Stone, Upper Winchendon, Waddesdon, Wendover, Westcott, Weedon and Tring in Hertfordshire

A complete system of sewerage has been applied to the town at an expense of £25,000: the whole of the sewage is conducted by main sewers to one outfall about a mile from the town, where works have been constructed for dealing with it by precipitation: these works are in the hands of the Native Guano Co. Limited, who relieve the Local Board of Health from all trouble and responsibility: the process employed is the A B C, which has not only entirely satisfied the authorities, but has attracted much attention in various quarters, resulting in numerous deputations being sent to visit the works by the authorities of other towns.

The ecclesiastical history of Aylesbury derives its chief interest from the connexion which existed between this church and the cathedral of Lincoln. At an early period a bishop of that see, in compliance with a papal requisition, presented a foreigner, who was a relative of his own, to the rectory, and he appropriated it in the usual form to the deanery of Lincoln, so that it became annexed to it; subsequently, this arrangement was reversed, and the rectory attached to a prebendal stall, and, until the abolition of peculiar jurisdictions, once nearly 300 in number, the church of Aylesbury was exempt from ordinary episcopal visitation, as a peculiar of the dean and chapter of Lincoln.

St. Mary's church, a fine old building, which undoubtedly replaces one of Saxon origin, stands on the western side of the town and nearly at its highest elevation and is therefore conspicuous from all parts of the surrounding country: the earliest portions of the present structure are Early English of the thirteenth century, the transepts being fine specimens of the Perpendicular order; the church is cruciform, and from the intersection of the nave, chancel and transepts there rises a massive Early English tower terminating in an ornamental parapet of wrought stone, with panelled battlements of Perpendicular character; above this rises a small tower and spire of woodwork covered with lead, called the clock tower and erected in the seventeenth century: the tower contains a peal of 8 bells and a saints' bell bearing the date of 1621, and has recently been wholly refaced with rubble stone, while the turret and spire have been recased with lead and ornamental clock dials of cast iron affixed: the original Early English aisles of the nave have been enlarged by the addition of chapels, which date from the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, both containing piscinæ: the south porch and the western entrance are fine specimens of Early English: the west window of Late Perpendicular character, contains six main lights with transverse mullions and tracery and is filled with elaborate stained glass, presented by Acton Tindal esq. in 1862: in a recess beneath a moulded and feathered arch in the north transept lies the effigy of a knight in white marble, clad in the usual plate armour of the fourteenth century, the head resting on a helmet; slight traces of armorial bearings remain of the surcoat, and the figure is supposed to have formed part of the tomb of James Boteler, the founder of the Grey Friars monastery, out of the ruins of which it was dug about a century ago: there is also a fine old monument in this part of the building, with quaint inscription to the Lee family, and within Early English niches, in the outer wall of the north aisle, are two stone coffins, discovered in the course of some repairs about 1860: the chancel is Early English, the east stained window, a fine triple lancet, richly ornamented with shafts and carved capitals, is filled with designs copied from an old window of this period in Chetwode Priory; on either side are three lancets, also stained: the chancel stalls, dating from the fifteenth century, are in a good state of preservation and the roof is a fine specimen of the waggon or cradle roof: the chancel contains an aumbry and a sepulchre of Early English date; on the north side of the chancel aisle is a vestry, with upper story, containing an ancient fireplace and baluster window: in the north transept are two piscinæ, a trefoil-headed reredos and sepulchre, both Early English, and in the south transept some remains of an altar, with a hagioscope, and on the south side a rich niche with crocketed pediment: the Lady chapel is a beautiful work of the fourteenth century, underneath which are the remains of an ancient Saxon crypt entered by a flight of stone steps at the west end of the chapel: the sacristy contains a wardrobe and locker of oak, of the early part of the sixteenth century: stained windows have been placed in the west window of the north chapel by Mr. Thomas Perrin (Christmas, 1870), in the south chapel by Mr. and Mrs. James Ceely, to the memory of their son (June, 1871), and in 1873, by Miss Hatten, to the memory of her father and mother, two small statues of SS. Peter and James, the patron saints respectively of Quarrendon and Burton, placed on either side of the doorway leading to the south transept, were given by the late Sir G. G. Scott R.A.: the oak benches are in fac-simile of the ancient seating of the church: the font is Norman, and has a circular escalloped bowl, with rich scroll work round the upper part, and stands on a cushioned base carved with foliage: the whole of the interior and exterior of the church was thoroughly repaired and restored under the direction of the late Sir G. Gilbert Scott R.A the work having been commenced in 1848 and successfully completed in 1869, at a cost of upwards of £18,000. The churchyard, which is extensive, is well kept and is planted with avenues of trees. The most illustrious of those who have held the prebendal stall of Aylesbury was Dr. John Hacket, who, during the sitting of the Long Parliament, made the memorable appeal before the House of Commons on behalf of Cathedral Establishments, 12th May, 1641; and was a munificent restorer of the Cathedral of Lichfield. The register dates from the year 1564. The great tithes constituted the endowment of a prebend attached to the cathedral church of Lincoln, which prebend is now extinguished, and the revenues, when the present leases expire, will be at the disposal of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £300, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford, and held since 1882 by the Rev. Charles Coleridge Mackarness M.A. of Exeter College, Oxford.

A church, to be named St. John, is now (1883) in course of erection in Cambridge street, and will be a chapel of ease to the parish church.

WALTON is an ecclesiastical parish, formed in 1846 out of this parish. it was formerly a separate hamlet, but now forms part of the town. The church of the Holy Trinity, erected about 1843, is a plain structure of flint with red brick facings, consisting of chancel with nave, aisles and a small open belfry containing 1 bell. The register dates from the year 1863. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £300, with residence, in the gift of trustees, and held since 1858 by the Rev. Frederick Young B.A. of Queen's College, Oxford.

The Congregational church, situate in the New road, is a handsome brick building with stone dressings in the Early English style, erected in 1874 at a cost of £3,000; there are sittings for 650 persons.

The Primitive Methodists have just had (1883) a new chapel built in the Buckingham road, to replace the old building in Station street: it is a red brick building with stone dressings, will seat 250 and cost nearly £600: there is a Sunday school attached.

There is also a Baptist chapel in Walton street, built in 1801, to seat 200; a Wesleyan chapel in Friargate path; a Christadelphian hall in Albert street and a Christan chapel in Cambridge street.

The Cemetery, situated on the Tring road, contains 7 acres of ground; there are two chapels and a mortuary.

Four ecclesiastical foundations are recorded to have been established here: 1. the hospitals of St. John and St. Leonard, about A.D. 1361 and 1362, for needy and leprous persons. 2. The Franciscans or Grey Friars, by James Buller, Earl of Ormonde, in 1837, and surrendered Oct. 1 1539. 3. A Fraternity or Chantry, in the time of Henry VI. 1425, by J. Singleton and J. and J. Baldwin. 4. A house of Trinitarians.

The Corn Exchange, erected in the year 1866 on a site formerly occupied by the White Hart inn, adjoining the County Hall, is a building of red brick with stone facings in the Elizabethan or Jacobean style and is entered by a handsome and lofty triple archway, with elaborately carved capitals, divided by pilasters in both stories: over the central arch is a capacious oriel, and the whole terminates in a moulded parapet with balustrading and finials; the roadway underneath is divided from a pathway on each side by short stone pillars supporting an arched roof. The Meat Market is a very suitable erection abutting on the Corn Exchange.

In the middle of the town is the large and commodious Market square, to which all the roads and principal streets converge as to a common centre. A handsome four-faced clock tower has been erected here at a cost of about £750, raised by subscription, from designs by David Brandon esq. of London. The clock was presented to the town in 1857 by Acton Tindal esq. and placed in the old Market House erected by the Marquis of Buckingham in 1806, on the site of an earlier edifice built by Sir John Baldwin, Lord Chief Justice Common Pleas, in 1530, for which Henry VIII. gave the timber: it has been removed into the new tower, which is of blue walling stone with Bath stone dressings and is 70 feet in height; the foundation stone was laid by Mrs. Acton Tindal, July 11, 1876, and the structure entrusted to the Aylesbury Board of Health, June 25, 1877; the lower part of the tower forms a drinking fountain. Temple street and square derive their names from the Temple family, who held lands in the parish in the sixteenth century, and Bourbon street from Louis XVIII. who resided at the neighbouring mansion of Hartwell.

The market, held every Saturday, is supplied with meat, grain, cattle, pigs, poultry and other agricultural produce, and is well attended. Sales of fat stock are held on Wednesday. The corn market has considerably improved. The fairs will, on the approval of H.M. Secretary of State (for the future), be held as follows: 3rd Saturday in January; Saturday next before Palm Sunday; 2nd Saturday in May; 3rd Saturday in June; 4th Saturday in September, and 2nd Saturday in October. The Wool Fair will be held on the 2nd Wednesday in July; the Fat Cattle Fair on the 2nd Wednesday in December, and a new fair specially for the sale of rams will be held on the 1st Saturday in August, except any one of the days appointed for holding the market shall happen to fall on any day appointed for a public fast or thanksgiving, in each of which cases such market shall be held on the day next preceding the appointed day. The lord of the manor parted with his franchise as the owner of the tolls of the market and fairs to a public company, which was incorporated by Act of Parliament in the year 1863, called The Aylesbury Market Company.

There are three banks and a savings bank; the town is also the head quarters of the Bucks Architectural and Archhæological Society. The Mechanics' Institute, built entirely at the expense of Sir Nathaniel de Rothschild bart. M.P. and held at a pepper-corn rent, is situated in Temple street and was opened in 1880: it contains a spacious reading-room on the ground floor, with a library above; the library is fitted with handsome oak and glass book-cases, the gift of Lady de Rothschild. Three weekly newspapers are published here.

On the south side of the Market square is the County Hall, a large and imposing structure of red brick, with stone dressings and a handsome flight of steps at the entrance, with iron palisadoes on each side extending the whole length; the interior of the building is spacious and, besides the respective courts of justice, contains the office of clerk of the peace and the county record office. The assizes and quarter sessions and petty sessions are held in the County Hall and the general county business transacted. The office of the County Police adjoin the Hall.

The Buckinghamshire General Infirmary was instituted in 1833 and the new building, which is situated at the junction of the Bicester and Buckingham roads, is a handsome building of red brick with stone dressings; it was built by private subscription at a cost of about £11,000, and contains two wards, one for men and one for women, and two bywards for eye cases, the whole affording beds for 50 persons; on the ground floor is a spacious dispensary and waiting-room for out-patients, with rooms for the house surgeon, matron &c.; the building was publicly opened on the 24th June 1862; the number of in-patients for the year 1881 was 299 and of out-patients 916: during the year 1882 a new ward has been erected for the reception of patients suffering from disorders which required isolation from the general body of patients, at a cost of about £1,000. The expense of this ward has been borne by voluntary subscription.

Her Majesty's Prison was built on slightly rising ground in 1845, halfway between Aylesbury and Bierton. The entrance to the prison is under an archway, on each side of which are the respective residences of the governor and chaplain, presenting a handsome façade to the road, between which and the entrance building is a courtyard, flanked on each side by the several places of confinement; in the entrance corridor to the main building there are 9 rooms viz. visiting justices', governor's, chaplain's, surgeon's, clerk's, waiting, visiting room, and stores; there are also six reception rooms in the basement, together with a surgeon's examining room, and above are six infirmaries for the general purposes of the prison; behind the centre building, stretching out in the form of the three lower limbs of a cross, measuring 303 feet by 140, are the cells; each of these divisions contains three stories or tiers, which are approached by outside iron galleries and crossings at each storey and by an iron spiral staircase; the prison contains 220 common cells and 6 dark or punishment cells for males; 19 common, 3 reception and 5 unappropriated cells for females, and 17 sleeping rooms, 4 day rooms and 1 visiting room in the debtors' department; each prisoner has a cell to himself measuring 13 feet by 7, the arrangements and discipline of which are upon the plan of the Model Prison at Pentonville: the chapel is 32 feet high, and contains open sittings for about 300 persons: in the basement of the building are the kitchens and apparatus for cooking, which is effected by steam; the food is raised by a windlass to the different galleries and placed silently in a small aperture in the door of each cell. The walls of the prison enclose an area of nearly 5 acres.

The making of cushion or pillow lace, called in this quarter "bone lace," for which the county was formerly famous, has, like several other handicrafts, been obliged to succumb to the influence of steam; the trade, however, is still carried on in various villages, but to a comparatively limited extent, and straw-plaiting, lately adopted here, seems in many places entirely to have superseded it. A silk manufactory has been established in the town for some years, which gives employment to from 130 to 200 persons, the majority of whom are females. The printing works of Messrs. Hazell, Watson and Viney, of London, adjoining the cemetery, give employment to over 200 hands. A large industry is carried on by the cottagers in the neighbourhood in raising ducks for the London market.

The Anglo-Swiss Condensed Milk Company have branch works here, erected in 1870. The company was originally established in 1866: head office at Cham, Switzerland; London office, 10 Mark lane e.c.

Besides several small sums left to be distributed to the poor and the prisoners in Aylesbury Gaol, John Bedford, in the year 1619, gave a real estate, said to be then producing £30 a year, now £600 and upwards, to the poor and for the repairs of the highways of this parish, now vested in trustees, incorporated by Act of Parliament under the name of The Incorporated Surveyors of the Highways of Aylesbury; and John Hickman, gent. gave by will, in 1695, a real estate in this parish of £40 a year and upwards, now worth about £100 a year, besides almshouses for the habitation of poor people, to be disposed of by the churchwardens and overseers of the town of Aylesbury for the time being, to such poor people as do not receive collection: this goes by the name of Hickman's charity: there are Holloway's charity of £44 and Clements' of £40 yearly; Evans' charity, for widows, about £40 a year; Harding's charity, left in 1719, mainly for apprenticing, £500 a year, besides some small charities.

In digging for gravel in a field on the right-hand side of the Buckingham road, near Holman's Bridge, and about half a mile from the town, upwards of 200 skeletons were found, which appeared to have been buried in a confused manner: they are supposed to have been the remains of persons who fell in a battle in 1643 between the Royalists under Prince Rupert, who came from Oxford, and Sir William Balfour, the commander of the Parliamentary garrison of Aylesbury, the latter, although with a much less force, obtaining a victory; after the lapse of more than a century and a half, the bones were collected by the late Lord Nugent and buried carefully in Hardwick churchyard, and a monument, with the following inscription put on it at the expense of his lordship: "May the memory of brave men be respected: and may our country never again be compelled to take part in a conflict such as that which this tablet records." In September, 1861, a quantity of human remains were found on the premises of Mr. Robert Gibbs, in Church street, but without any traces of coffins: the site is supposed to have once been a cemetery, connected with some ancient hospital or religious house.

The manor of Aylesbury passed in 1802 from Sir John Pakington, the eighth baronet, to the Marquess of Buckingham. The present lord of the manor is Nicolas Tindal-Carill-Worsley esq. The chief landowners are Sir Nathaniel Mayer de Rothschild bart. M.P. the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, Messrs. Ware, and Bedford's, and Hardings' charities. The Manor House is a modern building situated on Bierton Hill; the house is spacious, commands extensive views of the surrounding country and is at present occupied by Charles Threlfall esq. The Prebendal House, the private property of the Venerable Archdeacon Purey-Cust M.A. was sold from the prebendal estate about the year 1801 to redeem the land tax this was for some time the residence of the notorious John Wilkes, the satirist, who represented the borough in Parliament in 1757.

The population of the town and parish in 1871 was 6,962, and in 1881, 7,795; that of the parliamentary borough 28,899; the area, which includes all the thirty parishes in the three hundreds of Aylesbury, is 69,243 acres; area of Aylesbury parish 3,200 acres; rateable value £26,829.

BEACHAMPTON is a parish and village on the borders of Northamptonshire, 2½ miles south-west from Stony Stratford and 6 north-east from Buckingham, in the hundred, union and county court district of Buckingham, rural deanery and archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of the Assumption of the Virgin Mary is a small edifice mostly in the Perpendicular style; it has chancel, nave, aisles, south porch and tower with 3 bells; it contains a monument to Sir Simon Benet, who died in 1631, erected 128 years after his death by University College, Oxford, to which foundation he had been a great benefactor; also a handsome marble monument to Simon Bennett esq. Lord Mayor of London, nephew to Sir Simon Benet, whose daughter and heiress married the ancestor of the Marquis of Salisbury; there is an east window to the memory of Bishop Wilberforce, whose kneeling effigy is in the lower northern portion; the reredos, which is of alabaster, is most elaborate and contains in the centre The Crucifixion; there is a good organ in a chamber on the north side of the choir, an offering of Lady Mary Russell; the choir stalls and sittings are of carved oak; the church was completely restored in 1874 at a cost of about £3,000, principally given by the late rector. The register dates from the year 1560. The living is a rectory, yearly value £379 with residence, in the gift of Caius College, Cambridge and held by the Rev. — Long. There are a few charities amounting to £50 yearly, the bequest of Sir S. Benet; also £35 from Elmer charity. Sir James Walker bart. Lord Carrington and W. E. Bennett esq. are the principal landowners. The soil is strong clay; subsoil, limestone. The chief crops are wheat, oats, beans and barley. The area is 1,402 acres; rateable value, £2,080; the population in 1881 was 217.

Parish Clerk, James Alderman.

Letters received through Stony Stratford at 10 a.m.; box cleared at 5 p.m week days & 10 a.m. sundays. Stony Stratford is the nearest money order & telegraph office

BEACONSFIELD is a town and parish situated on a hill near the Wooburn stream, 10 miles from Windsor, 5¾ north-east-by-east from Wycombe, 8 north from Slough and 2½ from Wooburn Green station on the Great Western railway, in the hundred of Burnham, union of Amersham, county court district of High Wycombe, rural deanery of Burnham, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford; the town is governed by a Local Board of 9 members. The church of St. Mary and All Saints is in the Perpendicular style and consists of chancel with chancel aisles, nave, aisles and square tower with clock and 6 bells; it is built of flint with Bath stone dressings: the tower, which is the oldest portion, dates from the fifteenth century; it underwent complete renovation in 1869; there is a tablet to Edmund Burke, the statesman, ob. 1797, and to his only son Richard, who predeceased him; there is a brass also near to the place where he lies; in the churchyard is a marble sarcophagus, with four urns and a pyramid in the centre, to Edmund Waller, the poet (ob. 1687), in a good state of preservation: the east stained window was erected in 1869 to the memory of the Rev. J. Gould, late rector; there is a stained window at the east end of the south aisle to the memory of Henry Reginald Sykes esq. added in 1870. The register dates from 1631. The living is a rectory, yearly value £867 15s. 4d. with residence, in the gift of Magdalen College, Oxford and held since 1867 by the Rev. Samuel James Bowles M.A. formerly fellow of that college. The old rectory-house is still standing and worthy of notice; it was formerly a cell belonging to Burnham Abbey, and the residence of nuns; the foundation is supposed by antiquaries of repute to be coeval with the abbey. There are National schools for boys, girls and infants, which are supported by voluntary subscription and Government grant; schools were built in 1873. Here is a Congregational chapel, built in 1880, also a Primitive Methodist chapel. The Police Station, with inspector's residence attached, was built in 1872. The charities are of about £130 annual value; three of the donors were of the Waller family, viz. Edmund Waller (1699), £7 10s. yearly, E. Waller (1810), of £36 18s. yearly and F. Waller, £14 16s. yearly. Fairs are held on the 13th of February and 10th of May. The Right Hon. Edmund Burke purchased an estate here on which he resided, at a house named Butler's Court, and died there in 1797, aged 68, and was buried in the churchyard; his widow, who died in 1812, disposed of the property, and the house was burnt down about a year after her death. The late Right Hon. B. Disraeli took his title of Earl of Beaconsfield from this town. Hall Barn, the seat of E. L. Lawson esq. is a beautifully wooded park of about 400 acres in extent, with extensive and well laid-out gardens and pleasure grounds; this was formerly the residence of Edmund Waller and the property of that family for many years; the mansion is of brick with stone dressings and appears to have been built at different periods. Wilton Park, the residence of Caledon George Du Pré esq. D.L., J.P. is also a spacious stuccoed mansion with a long terrace on the south side, standing in an extensive and well-wooded park. E. L. Lawson esq. is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are E. L. Lawson esq. Caledon George Du Pré esq. Charles Neville Biggs esq. William James Rolfe, Lord Howe, Thomas B. Grove esq. and Frederick Charsley esq. The land is arable, meadow and pasturage, with a considerable quantity of beech wood. The soil is a gravelly loam: subsoil, chalk. The area is 4,504 acres; rateable value, £7,255; the population in 1881 (including part of the hamlet of Coleshill) was 1,635.

BIDDLESDEN is a parish on the Northamptonshire border, in the hundred and county court district of Buckingham, union of Brackley, rural deanery and archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, 3½ miles north-east-by-east from Brackley and 6 north-west from Buckingham. The church of St. Margaret is a plain building of red brick with stone dressings, and has a bell-turret with 1 bell and a clock at the west end; it appears to have been built in the first half of the eighteenth century: there are some tablets to the Morgan family. The register dates from the year 1695. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £75, in the gift of Lieut.-Col. Geo. Manners Morgan J.P. endowed with £400 private benefaction and £400 Royal Bounty, and held since 1854 by the Rev. Hugh William Smith M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge, who resides at Brackley. Here was formerly a Cistercian convent. Biddlesden Park, the seat of Lieut.-Col. George Manners Morgan J.P. is thickly wooded and of about 180 acres in extent, a portion of which is well stocked with deer; the house is a substantial stone building on the site of the old Abbey, with capacious pleasure grounds and large fish ponds. Lieut.-Col. Morgan J.P. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is chiefly clay; the land arable and pasture, about equal, with about 180 acres of woodland. The area is 1,988 acres; rateable value £2,627; the population in 1871 was 150.

Parish Clerk, Daniel James.

Letters received through Brackley at 9 a.m.; dispatched at 4.30 p.m. Brackley is the nearest money order & telegraph office. There is no parish school. Children attend Syresham.

BIERTON, with BROUGHTON and BURCOTT.

BIERTON is a parish and scattered village within the parliamentary borough of Aylesbury, in the hundred, union and county court district of Aylesbury, rural deanery of Wendover, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, one mile and a half north-east from Aylesbury, on the road to Leighton Buzzard. The Aylesbury branch of the London and North Western railway and the Grand Junction Canal pass through the parish. The church of St. James, built in the twelfth century, is a cruciform structure of mixed styles, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, transepts and a tower with small spire containing a clock and 6 bells; on the north side of the chancel is an old credence table, and on the south a piscina: the arcades of the nave are Decorated, the east window Late Perpendicular: there is a plain Norman font with cable moulding, and a curious monument, the inscription on which states that it "was erected and sett vpp at the propper coste and charges of Mrs. Cæcily Bosse, the widdowe of the late Mr. Samvel Bosse," who died 21st December 1616, and that he had nine sons and four daughters; the monument represents the deceased and his lady kneeling opposite each other, with their children in the same position, the sons behind the father and the daughters behind their mother: the interior of the church was repaired and reseated in 1852, and the gallery removed. The register dates from the year 1560. The living is a vicarage with that of Quarrendon annexed, joint net yearly value £310, with residence, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Lincoln, and held since 1877 by the Rev. John Langton Gurney, of St. Bees. The Baptists have a chapel at Bierton, erected in 1831, also one at Burcott, erected in 1870; there is a Congregational chapel at Burcott, and the Wesleyans have also a place of worship here. Hill's charity, producing £154 yearly, is derived from 64 acres of land left in 1723: of this Bierton school receives £30 yearly, the balance is for gene-coats, apprenticing poor boys &c. The Feoffees' charity (of unknown origin) produces £42 yearly, and is expended in church expenses and the relief of the poor. Bosse's charity and Reeve's charity of £2 each are for the poor. Mr. Allen left, in 1832, £100 Consols, the dividend to be given in bread on Christmas Eve. Part of a large urn, 15 inches in diameter and 12 in depth, was found about 1870 on a farm occupied by Mr. Bell, and was presented by him to the museum of the Bucks Archæological Society. In January, 1861, excavations were made in a pightel belonging to Mr. James Bonham, 85 paces eastward of the church and abutting on the road: in this little field were found the remains of at least two distinct generations of men, separated from each other by long intervals of time, and comprising eight skeletons, lying in various positions: three rectangular openings were also discovered about 5 feet below the surface, which contained ashes, and on a level with these were undoubted traces of a Romano-British interment, consisting of a circular excavation 1 foot 9 inches in depth and about the same in diameter, fitted with a large sepulchral urn of lead; in a circle at a radius of 3 feet from this were found a number of mortuary urns and 10 feet distant another: a number of Rechen, Pfenning or Nuremburg tokens, a testoon or shilling of Henry VIII. a halfpenny of James I. one of William III. and other coins were met with on the same spot. About 1830 three halberts, 8 feet 6 inches long, with remains of men and horses, were found in "The King's Furlong." Nicolas Tindal-Carill-Worsley esq. is lord of the manor; the de Rothschild family are the chief landowners. The soil is clay with a portion of stone brash, but chiefly clay; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, beans, barley and clover. The area is 2,470 acres; rateable value £5,140; the population in 1881 was 740, including 72 inmates of H.M. Prison, which is within this parish.

BLEDLOW is a parish within the parliamentary borough of Aylesbury, in the hundred of Aylesbury, union of Wycombe, county court district of High Wycombe, rural deanery of Aylesbury, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, 5½ miles east-south-east from Thame and 3 west-south-west from Princes Risborough, on the borders of Oxfordshire. Here is a station on the Wycombe, Aylesbury, Thame and Oxford branch of the Great Western railway, 45 miles from London. The Princes Risborough and Watlington railway passes through. The church of the Holy Trinity, restored in 1876 at a cost of £1,100, is an ancient structure of flint and stone, chiefly in the Decorated style, and consists of chancel, nave, with a clerestory lighted by 6 three-light windows, aisles, separated from the nave by arcades of 5 arches on round columns with enriched capitals, south porch, and a western tower containing 5 bells: the inner doorway of the south porch is very fine, consisting of a pointed arch with small circular shafts of Early English date: on the right of this door there is an unusually large holy-water stoup; over the outer door is a dial and near the entrance the stone base of an ancient cross; the north aisle contains a canopied niche, and both north and south aisles have a piscina, the former being double: the south aisle contains traces of two recessed tombs: in the chancel is a brass of a priest in his robes; the walls of the nave contain some ancient fresco paintings nearly obliterated; there is a good organ and ancient font of Norman date and elaborately carved; there are several tablets of the early part of the last century to members of the Towne family; the churchyard is bounded on the east by a deep and woody glen into which several springs of water fall, and uniting form a small lake called the Lyde (in which large quantities of watercress are grown for the London markets) and which appearing to undermine the cliff, gave rise to the following local prophecy:—

"They who live and do abide,
Shall see the church fall into the Lyde;
And they who live and do remain,
Shall see the same built up again."

The register dates from the year 1592. The living is a discharged vicarage, rated in the King's Books at £16 9s. 7d. and endowed with £400 private benefaction and £200 Royal bounty, yearly value about £175 with residence, in the gift of Lord Carrington and held since 1867 by the Rev. Thomas Aikin Sneath M.A. of Cains College, Cambridge. There is a small Wesleyan chapel here, also one at Bledlow Ridge. The school of the Wycombe union is here, occupying what was formerly the workhouse; the average number of children is about 60, of both sexes; there are six acres of land adjoining the school, which are cultivated by the boys, and the girls do most of the domestic work. The charities produce £72 16s. 6d. yearly, inclusive of rent for the poor's land of 35 acres for fuel; the principal testators have been—Henry Smith in 1608, John Blanks in 1671, Marg. Babham in 1672, and Edmund Slaughter in 1831. In this parish is a Greek cross cut into a lofty hill, similar to that at Whiteleaf in Monks Risborough; it is much overgrown with weeds. Lord Carrington and Eton College are lords of the manor. The principal landowners are Lord Carrington, Eton College, Mrs. Heybourn, Thomas Taylor, James Britnell, William Clarke, Henry Gibbons and Edward Crouch esqrs. The soil is variable, some parts chalk loam, other parts stiff clay; subsoil, chalk or ragstone and clay. The chief crops are wheat, beans, peas and barley. The area is 4,130 acres; rateable value, £4,414; the population in 1881, including BLEDLOW RIDGE, PITCH GREEN AND ROUT'S GREEN was 1,070.

Sexton, Richard Piggott.

Bledlow Ridge is an ecclesiastical parish formed in 1868 and is 3 miles south from Bledlow village, in the rural deanery of Wycombe. The church of St. Paul consecrated by the late Bishop of Oxford, July 13th, 1858, is a handsome building of flint with Bath stone facings, in the Early English style, and consists of nave, south porch, with 1 bell and has sittings for 200 persons; the church contains a small organ presented by Thomas Wheeler esq. of High Wycombe; the cost of building with purchase of site, including burial ground and endowment, was over £4,000, which was borne entirely by Mrs. Grace, of Eastbourne. The register dates from the year 1861. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £134 with residence, in the gift of five trustees and held since 1868 by the Rev. John Hilmer B.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The area is 1,738 acres; the population in 1871 was 510.

BLETCHLEY is a parish, village and railway station one mile west from Fenny Stratford, 12½ miles east from Buckingham, 7 south from Newport Pagnell and 46½ from London, in the hundred, union and county court district of Newport Pagnell, rural deanery of Newport Pagnell, archdeaconry of Buckingham, and diocese of Oxford. About half a mile from the village but in the parish of Fenny Stratford, is Bletchley station on the London and North Western Railway, being the junction of the Bedford and Cambridge and the Banbury and Oxford branches with the main line. The parish comprises the township of Bletchley with the hamlet of Water Eaton. The church of St. Mary is a large edifice, mostly in the Perpendicular style, but some portions are of as early a date as the eleventh century; it consists of a large chancel, with north aisle forming a chantry of the Grey de Wilton family, clerestoried nave, aisles, with arcades of four arches, a fine western tower, containing 8 bells, one of which was lately recast; a part of the ceiling of the chancel, which is in twelve compartments, is painted and ornamented with portraits of the Apostles; the remainder over the sacrarium consists of a Tetragrammaton in a triangle surrounded by cherubs; the church was restored by Dr. Browne Willis, in 1704, at a cost of £1,346, in accordance with the bad taste then prevailing, and quite out of character with the style of the building; in the chancel are four early sedilia, two of which have been destroyed, and a reredos of Painswick and Mansfield stone; the East window is of five lights, with head traceried in trefoils and quatrefoils, the stalls are of carved oak; between the chancel and the north chapel is an ancient table tomb, with an effigy in white marble, to Lord Grey de Wilton, who died at Water Hall in 1442 and was buried here with his son and grandson; the effigy was repaired and recut by Weston, the statuary at Browne Willis's expense; at the foot of the figure is a helmet said to have belonged to Lord de Grey; in the chapel, which is also the mortuary of the family of Willis, is a raised table tomb to the wife of Dr. Browne Willis, who died at Whaddon Hall in 1724, and an inscribed marble slab to Dr. Willis ob. 1760 and in the north wall of the chancel is a very curious brass to Thomas Sparke, a former rector, who died in 1610; the church is approached by a fine avenue of very ancient yews, and was restored in 1867-8 under the direction of W. White esq. F.S.A. of London; the windows and doorway of the chancel, which had been modernised and misplaced, have been reformed; some few remains of ancient glass preserved, the body of the church fitted with oak seats, and the lower pinnacles, set up by Willis, removed; the pulpit was the gift of the Rev. W. Bennitt, rector; the cloth for the communion table was worked and presented by Mrs. Williamson, of Little Brickhill rectory; the organ was designed by the Rev. W. G. Corker, of Fenny Stratford. The register dates from the year 1665. The living is a rectory, yearly value about £600 with residence, in the gift of Joseph Bennitt esq. of Ashwood House, Dudley and held since 1861 by the Rev. William Bennitt M.A. of Trinity College, Oxford. The rectory house is a large Gothic building, erected in 1834. Elmers, the residence of Richard William Selby-Lowndes esq. J.P. is pleasantly situated near the church; the old house, which was very ancient, was pulled down in 1871 and on the same site a handsome gabled residence was erected, which is surrounded by some fine elm trees. Sir P. D. P. Duncombe, bart. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is strong clay; subsoil, clay and gravel; the chief crops are wheat, oats, beans and barley. The area of the parish is 2,167 acres: viz. Bletchley 1,230, Water Eaton 1,044; rateable value, Bletchley £2,6[illegible]7, Water Eaton £5,564; and the population in 1881 was 762, viz. Bletchley 514, Water Eaton 248.

BOARSTALL is a scattered village and parish situate in a hilly district on the borders of Oxfordshire, 2½ miles west from Brill, on the road from that place to Oxford, from which it is distant about 11 miles and 8 from Bicester and 7 north-west from Thame, in the hundred of Ashendon, union and county court district of Bicester, rural deanery of Waddesdon, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford; it is said to derive its name from a grant of land originally made by King Edward the Confessor in favour of one Nigel or Fitznigel, on account of his having slain a very fierce wild boar which had committed great ravages in the neighbourhood. The church of St. James, rebuilt on the original foundations in 1818 by Sir John Aubrey bart. is a small edifice, consisting of a chancel and nave without a tower; in the chancel are two marble monuments to the Aubrey family, and the stained east window bears the arms of Sir John Aubrey, impaling those of his two wives Colebrook and Carter: in the churchyard are the remains of an ancient cross. The register dates from the year 1640. The living, with that of Brill annexed, is a vicarage, joint yearly value £101, in the gift of Charles Aubrey Aubrey esq. and held since 1873 by the Rev. Henry William Banfather B.A. of Corpus Christi college, Cambridge, who resides at Brill. Here is a small Congregational chapel. There are charities amounting to £20 a year left by Edward Lewis esq. and Lady Penelope Dynham, the former of £12 yearly, to be distributed amongst the poor and the latter, of £8, for the purpose of apprenticing poor boys. Charles Aubrey Aubrey esq. is the chief landowner and lord of the manor. During the Civil Wars, Boarstall House was garrisoned for the king in 1644, and on its evacuation by the Royalists the Parliamentarians at once seized it, and used it as an effective basis of attack against the King's forces at Oxford; being again taken by the Royal forces, under Colonel Gage, it successfully resisted the Parliamentary troops under Skippon and Fairfax, until 1646, when, after a siege of 18 hours, on the 10th of June, in that year, it was surrendered to Fairfax, by Sir Charles Campion, the Governor; a massive gateway with embattled turrets at the corners, reached by crossing a stone bridge over the moat, is all that now remains; two turrets have rooms in them, and two others contain spiral staircases communicating with apartments over the gateway; it is now occupied as a farm-house, and still presents an interesting and strikingly picturesque appearance on entering the village from Brill. The soil is gravel and stiff blue clay; subsoil, loam and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley and beans, and about two-thirds of the land is pasture. The area is 3,080 acres; rateable value, £3,000; the population in 1881 was 209.

BRADENHAM is a parish situated on the high road from High Wycombe to Princes Risborough, 4 miles north-west from the former place and 4 south from the latter, 2 west from West Wycombe station, in the hundred of Desborough, union and county court district of High Wycombe, rural deanery of Wycombe, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Botolph is a small structure of flint and stone, and consists of chancel, nave, mortuary chapel (built by Lord Windsor in the year 1542), low square Perpendicular tower with 3 bells and a clock, and a south porch, the doorway of which is very ancient; a portion of the nave and whole of the chancel were rebuilt in 1863 under the superintendence of the late G. E. Street esq. R.A. in the Decorated style; the chancel contains two stained windows and the nave one; in the chapel there is a handsome altar tomb of the Hon. Charles and Mrs. Elizabeth West. The register dates from the year 1627. The living is a rectory, yearly value £224 with residence, in the gift of and held since 1865 by the Rev. John Graves M.A. of Exeter College, Oxford, and J.P. Bradenham House, formerly the residence of the late Isaac D'Israeli, esq. is a large mansion with gardens, overlooking an extensive green and adjacent to the church: it is now the seat of the Rev. John Graves M.A., J.P. lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is light; subsoil, chalk and flint. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats; the area is 1,001 acres; rateable value, £1,146; the population in 1881 was 183.

BRADWELL, with NEW BRADWELL.

BRADWELL is a parish 3¾ miles south-east from Stony Stratford, 4 miles from Newport Pagnell, 1 south from the Wolverton station, in the hundred, union and county court district of Newport Pagnell, rural deanery and archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Lawrence is an ancient edifice in the Early English and Decorated styles; it has a small chancel, nave, south aisle with three arches, square tower with 4 bells and was restored in 1868. The register dates from the year 1577. The living is a vicarage, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor, yearly value £145 with residence, and held since 1869 by the Rev. Kitelee Chandos-Bailey B.A. of University College, Durham. There is a charity of about £20 a year, left by the Rev. J. Hume for distribution to poor householders and for the education of six children; there are also 15 acres of land awarded to the poor in lieu of common right when the parish was enclosed in 1788, the rent of which is given in coals. Here are small Congregational and Wesleyan Methodist chapels. William Selby-Lowndes esq. is lord of the manor. Mrs. Jones, A. Greaves and G. Wilkinson esqrs. are the chief landowners. The soil is light clay; subsoil, clay and stone. The chief crops are wheat, oats, barley and beans. The area is 834 acres; rateable value, £5,945; the population with New Bradwell, in 1881, was 2,460.

New Bradwell is a portion of this parish for civil purposes, but for ecclesiastical it is a separate vicarage annexed to Stantonbury; it is situated on the north-east side of the Wolverton railway works, and is principally inhabited by the men employed there. The Newport Pagnell railway has a station here, opened in 1867. A handsome stone church (St. James), in the Geometric style, was erected in 1859, which is used for the parish of Stantonbury as well as for this part of Bradwell; it consists of chancel, nave and north aisle, in which is a side chapel with an unfinished tower, and has sittings for about 365 persons. The register dates from the year 1658. The living is a vicarage, annexed to Stantonbury, joint yearly value about £225 with residence, in the gift of Earl Spencer and held by the Rev. Charles Purcell Cotter M.A. of Trinity College, Dublin. The church and schools, with residences, were built by subscription, principally by shareholders of the London and North Western Railway Company and opened in 1859; the late G. E. Street esq. R.A. architect. The schools will hold about 600 children. There is a Primitive Methodist chapel in Thompson street and a Baptist chapel in North street. The land is principally the property of A. Greaves esq, and the London and North Western Railway Company. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1881 was 2,049.

GREAT BRICKHILL is a parish and village picturesquely situated on the Brickhill hills, on the borders of Bedfordshire, 3 miles south-east from Fenny Stratford, 10 south from Newport Pagnell, 4 from Leighton Buzzard, and 3 from Bletchley stations, in the hundred, union and county court district of Newport Pagnell, rural deanery of Bletchley, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Mary is a stone building of the Decorated period, consisting of chancel with side chapels, nave, aisles, south porch, and a central tower with turret containing 6 very fine bells; in the chancel is a small piscina: there are numerous tablets to the Duncombe family from 1559 to the present time, as well as to the families of Barton, Fanncefort and Chase; the roof of the church and chancel were heightened and the whole fabric underwent a thorough restoration in 1867, chiefly at the cost of Sir P. D. P. Duncombe bart. D.L., J.P. There is a good organ. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is a rectory yearly value £425 principally arising from 270 acres of glebe with residence, in the gift of Sir P. D. P. Duncombe bart D.L., J.P. and held since 1876 by the Rev. Montagu Brymer Nepean M.A. of Christ's College, Cambridge. There is a Baptist, built in 1812 to seat 100 and a small Methodist chapel. There are several small charities, amounting to about £17 yearly, which is distributed in bread, meat and money. The feoffees' charity, yielding about £23 per annum, is appropriated to the general uses of the poor, and 16 cottages occupied rent free. The poor's land of 8 acres produces £10 yearly for fuel. Sir Philip Duncombe Fanncefort Duncombe bart. D.L., J.P. is lord of the manor and principal landowner and his seat, the Manor House, is an elegant mansion, re-decorated in 1859, and commands a panoramic view of the surrounding country: the conservatories are very fine. The sand hills here are of great elevation and picturesquely planted, and the neighbourhood is considered very salubrious. The soil is various, some sand, other clay; subsoil, clay and gravel. The crops are chiefly pasturage, some wheat, oats and barley. The area is 2,370 acres; rateable value, £4,295; the population in 1881 was 559.

LITTLE BRICKHILL is a parish and village on the borders of Bedfordshire, on the London and Holyhead road, the old "Watling Street," 2 miles south-east from Fenny Stratford, 9 miles south from Newport Pagnell, in the hundred, union and county court district of Newport Pagnell, rural deanery of Bletchley, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Mary Magdalen, situated on the brow of a hill, below which runs the Roman Watling Street, is an ancient stone building in the Decorated style and consists of chancel, nave, south aisle, south porch and an embattled western tower containing 3 bells: the chancel, approached by three steps and paved with encaustic tiles, contains a small piscina; the vestry, formerly a chapel, is at the end of the south aisle and opens into the chancel; in the church is an inscription on brass to Mr. Robert Seling, 1696, with seventeen English verses: the church has been repaired at various times, once through the munificence of Browne Willis, it was thoroughly restored in 1864, the chancel being at the same time rebuilt by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners as rectors; the total cost of restoration, exclusive of chancel, was about £1,000, raised by voluntary contribution and a rate of £500; the churchyard was enlarged in 1870, and the added portion consecrated in 1871; a stained east window has been placed by the vicar in memory of Lady Rose, widow of Sir George Henry Rose, and mother of Lord Strathnairn, G.C.B. and of his brother Sir William Rose K.C.B.: a chapel, adjoining the church, was blown down in 1703. The register dates from the year 1559, and between the year 1561 and 1618, contains the names of 42 persons who "suffered death and were buried," one of the victims being "Cecily Revis, burned in 1596," there are two entries relating to the Civil War, one the burial of a woman "Agnes Potter, of Dunstable, wounded at the battle of Edge Hill," and the other that of a soldier of the King's army, slain by the Parliamentarians, Aug. 27, 1644. The living is a vicarage, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford, yearly value £270, held since 1860 by the Rev. Thomas Pym Williamson, of St. Bees. This place, now but a decayed village, was once a spot of no little importance; it is mentioned as the first town in the county at which the Judges arrived on going the Norfolk Circuit, and here in 1433 and 1638 were held the assizes and general gaol deliveries for Bucks; in Saxton's map, published in 1574, it is laid down as the assize town and elections as well as other county meetings, were also convened here. There are charities of £5 for educational purposes, the church and poor charity of £20 for church purposes, and £20 for fuel for the poor, Penrose's of £3 for blankets, Abdy's of £16 for bread and also 15 acres of land in trust for the poor, allotted under the Inclosure Act, and producing £10 yearly, distributed in fuel; the estate is vested in trustees, viz. Lord Strathnairn and his brother Sir William Rose K.C.B. clerk of the parliaments. Lord Strathnairn is lord of the manor and sole landowner. The situation of this village, on the highest part of the Brickhill hills and adjoining the Woburn plantations, is picturesque and eminently healthy. The soil for the most part is light on the hill and heavier below; subsoil, clay and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, oats, beans and barley. The area is 1,360 acres; rateable value £2,221; the population in 1881 was 241.

BRILL is a parish and ancient town and a polling place for the county, in the hundred of Ashendon, union and county court district of Thame, rural deanery of Waddesdon, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, 7½ miles north-west from Thame, 12 north-east from Oxford, 8½ south-east from Bicester and 13½ west from Aylesbury. The town is situated near the Oxford border of the county, in what was once the forest of Bernwode, in the Saxon kingdom of Mercia, on the table land of a high hill, formerly called Brehull and Brunhelle, from which its name has been corrupted into Brill. There is a tramway from here through Wootton to the Aylesbury and Buckingham railway at Quainton Road station 8 miles distant. Brill was entered in the Domesday book (1082) as a royal manor. The church of All Saints is an ancient stone structure in good repair, consisting of chancel, nave, south porch and plain Perpendicular tower containing 6 bells, saints' bell and a clock; in the east end of the north aisle there is an Early English window; there are also two Norman doorways; the font is octagon at the top and heptagon below, and there is a brass without date near the chancel; an addition was made on the south side of the church in 1838, when the old Saxon wall on that side was removed, painted figures have recently been found on both sides of the chancel arch, which had been plastered over to preserve them from destruction by the Puritans at the time of the Civil War. The register dates from the 1569. The living is a vicarage, united with Boarstall, joint yearly value £101, in the gift of Charles Aubrey Aubrey esq. and held since 1873 by the Rev. Henry William Banfather B.A. of Corpus Christi college, Cambridge. There are four almshouses which were endowed by Alice Carter in 1591; and £300 a year derived from the rental of the pasture farm at Boarstall is distributed yearly to the poor of Brill and Oakley. Here is a Congregational chapel built in 1841, also a Wesleyan chapel and a Congregational chapel at Little London. In the immediate neighbourhood of the town, at the foot of Dorton hill, is a mineral spring, the waters of which are chalybeate, and have been successful in the cure of various complaints. The manor was once part of the ancient demesnes of the Crown; and the Palace, remains of which are still standing, was said to have been a favourite residence of King Edward the Confessor. King John spent his Christmas here in 1205 and Henry II. and Henry III. also held their courts here. Charles Aubrey Aubrey esq. who is lord of the manor and the Duke of Buckingham are the principal landowners. The soil is various; subsoil various. The land is principally used for pasture. The area is 2,600 acres; rateable value £5,438; population in 1881 was 1,289.

LITTLE LONDON is a picturesque hamlet half a mile south from Brill on the road to Oakley.

BROUGHTON is a parish and village 3 miles south-south-east from Newport Pagnell, in the hundred, union and county court district of Newport Pagnell, rural deanery of Bletchley, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, on the road from Newport Pagnell to Woburn. The church of St. Lawrence is a substantial stone building, chiefly in the Early Decorated style and consists of chancel, nave, south porch and a western tower containing clock and 5 bells; upon the walls are four ancient fresco paintings of the Last Judgment, the Passion, St. Dunstan, and St. George; at the north-east angle of the nave is a good staircase turret; in the chancel are two memorial stained windows and within the communion rails are three brasses to Agnes, wife of John de Broughton, son of Robert de Broughton, 1399; to John de Broughton, son of Robert de Broughton, 1403 and to Mary (Edmonds), wife of Thomas Duncombe esq. 1655, four sons and three daughters; there are also memorials to the family of Chester; there is a stained window on the north side to the memory of W. Ridgway, inserted by friends and neighbours; the church was thoroughly restored in 1881. The register dates from the year 1720; there is a list of the names of rectors from 1294. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value £140 with residence, in the gift of the trustees of R. G. W. Tyringham esq. and held since 1854 by the Rev. John William Irving M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. There are charities amounting to about £60 yearly, of which £12 is for educational purposes, £2 for church repairs, £6 for fuel and blankets and £25 16s. for the general uses of the poor. The trustees of Roger Giffard William Tyringham esq. are lords of the manor and sole landowners. The soil is mixed; subsoil gravel and clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and roots. The area is 1,020 acres; rateable value £1,562 the population in 1881 was 159.

BUCKINGHAM.

BUCKINGHAM is a municipal and parliamentary borough, market and union town, head of a county court district and a polling place for the county, and includes in the parish the chapelry of Gawcott, the hamlets of Bourton, Bourtonhold and Lenborough and the precinct of Prebend End, in the hundred, rural deanery and archdeaconry of its name, and diocese of Oxford, situated on the London road to Birmingham, and has a station on the line of the Buckinghamshire railway, which runs from Bletchley on the London and North Western line to Banbury, 57 miles from London by road and 60¾ by rail, 17 north-west from Aylesbury, 24 north-north-east from Oxford and 8 east-by-south from Brackley.

Buckingham is unquestionably a place of very considerable antiquity and certainly once had a castle. A branch of the Roman Akeman Street, from Chesterton, in Oxfordshire, crosses part of the hundred and parish of Buckingham, and many Roman coins have at different times been dug up in the vicinity. At the time of the Domesday survey Buckingham was included with its hamlet of Bourton. The seignory of Buckingham was for a long period held by the Staffords, Earls and Dukes of Buckingham, from whom the borough derives its arms. In 1724 a third part of the town was consumed by a dreadful conflagration and, unhappily for its future interests, through neglect of obtaining an Act of Parliament no uniformity was observed either in setting out the streets or rebuilding the houses: it is pleasantly situated on the river Ouse, which environs it on every side except the north, and is crossed by three substantial bridges; it is paved and lighted with gas and plentifully supplied with excellent water. The Grand Junction canal has a branch to this town.

Edward III. granted to Buckingham a charter of incorporation, which was confirmed by Henry VIII. and subsequently by Queen Mary, 27 Jan. 1553, and by Charles II. in 1684. By the Municipal Corporation Act the government was vested in a mayor, four alderman and twelve councillors the corporate body being styled Mayor, Aldermen and Burgesses of the borough and parish of Buckingham, in the county of Buckingham.

The borough police force consists of 1 superintendent, 1 sergeant and 2 constables.

The parliamentary borough comprises seven parishes in addition to Buckingham.

The borough constantly sent two representatives to the legislature from the 36th of Henry VIII. but by the Representation of the People Act, 1867, it now returns one only.

The most conspicuous ornament of Buckingham is the church of SS. Peter and Paul, erected in 1777-81 on a hill of natural rock, supposed to be the site of an ancient castle said to have been built by one of the Earls of Buckingham prior to the Conquest, parts of the foundations of which are occasionally uncovered and constitute its only vestiges. The old church, a cruciform structure 163 feet in length, remained for a series of years in a dilapidated state, until on the 26 March, 1776, the tower suddenly fell, and the building was thereupon removed and the present church erected on a new site. A large well, substantially lined with stone, was discovered some years since by some workmen, who sounded the covering of this ancient hollow tank, which on being opened was found perfect. Again in 1877 some good masonry was revealed under the bank on the south-east side of the hill, during the excavations for erecting a building. The church, begun in 1777, was completed in four years, at an expense of £7,000, the greater part of which was contributed or raised by Earl Temple; it is constructed of stone and consists of chancel, nave, aisles and a battlemented western tower with pinnacles and a light tapering spire, which rises to the height of 150 feet from the ground: the interior was originally fitted up in the Grecian style, with columns and arched ceiling, richly ornamented: the altar piece is a beautiful painting of The Transfiguration, being a copy from the celebrated picture of Raphael, presented by a former Marquis of Buckingham: since 1862 extensive repairs and alterations have been made from plans by the late Sir G.G.Scott R.A.who was a native of Gawcott, a hamlet of this parish,and these are being continued under the direction of his son, John Oldrid Scott esq. the nave has been completely reconstructed, with new windows, buttresses and parapets of the Early Decorated style; a noble chancel has also been added at the cost of the present Duke of Buckingham and Chandos, and a spacious chancel aisle has been erected to serve as an organ chamber and vestry; the subscriptions, including the gift of the chancel, amount to £8,000: stained windows have been erected as memorials to the late lamented vicar, Rev. H. Roundell, who died on St. Stephen's Day, 1863; and to a former curate, who died at Zanzibar; there are other memorials to Ann, daughter of the Rev. William Ellis, vicar of Caversfield, 1840; Philip Box, 1833; and Mary Clarke, 1820: attached to the church is an endowment of £18 18s. yearly, given by Mr. Box for the repair and maintenance of the organ. The register of baptisms and burials dates from the year 1561; marriages, 1559. The living is a discharged vicarage forming a peculiar in the diocese of Lincoln; its present gross income is about £450 with residence, it is in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1879 by the Rev. Fredk. Grave Kiddle M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge. Before 1445 Buckingham was a chapelry attached to the neighbouring church of King's Sutton, but was at that date made a separate vicarage, the great tithes, together with the manor of Gawcott, were appropriated to a prebendal stall in Lincoln cathedral, called the prebend of Sutton-cum-Buckingham, once occupied by the illustrious William of Wykeham, but surrendered to the Crown 1547. The Vicarage house is an ancient building, supposed to have been built in the reign of Charles II.; it stands on a site orginally given to the benefice when it was first constituted a vicarage in the year 1445 and the present vicarage garden, sloping down to the river Ouse, appears to be precisely the ancient "Field of Walnuts," of that early date; in the large dining-room of the house is a beautiful and massive chimney-piece, finely designed and carved out of slabs of rude marble, discovered in the parish and presented by the Marquis of Buckingham to the Vicarage. A simple but commodious school-chapel of stone in the Early English style, after a design by the late G. E. Street esq. R.A. was erected in 1865 to serve the joint purpose of a day school and a mission chapel for the working people of that portion of the town. A mission chapel of iron and wood occupies a similar position at the north end of the parish.

The Congregational church, built in 1857 on the site of the old chapel in Church street, founded in 1700, is an edifice in the Early English style; with a gable front of Cosgrove stone and Bath stone dressings; in front is a porch with an open arcade of four arches: the church consists of nave and an aisle separated by an arcade of four pointed arches resting on circular pillars; the cost of erection, exclusive of old materials, amounted to £1,995, raised entirely by subscription. In 1876 Sunday schools were erected in connection with the church at a cost of about £2,000 and capable of holding 400 children.

The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have also places of worship here.

The Cemetery, established in 1856 by the corporation, under a burial board, is situated about a quarter of a mile from the town, on the Brackley road, and consists of three acres surrounded by a brick wall,surmounted by a light iron railing and the ground is planted with shrubs; the mortuary chapels are of red and white brick, with quoins of Bath stone; in the Decorated and Early English styles, the sexton's house forms a lodge at the entrance. The Burial Board established in 1856 consists of nine members, elected by the vestry.

The chapel of St. John's Royal Latin school, now incorporated with an English school, under the management of trustees, was founded by Edward VI. who endowed it with the revenue of a dissolved chantry belonging to the guild of the Holy Trinity, and appropriated to its use; the chapel was founded in 1260 by Matthew Stratton, archdeacon of Buckingham and dedicated to St. John the Baptist and Thomas à Becket, probably in the memory of that prelate's visit to Buckingham as Chancellor in 1160: in 1470 it was partly rebuilt by Archdeacon Ruding: in the year 1776 a new roof, constructed principally from the timbers of the old church, was placed by Earl Temple, and the chapel was used for divine service during the erection of the present church on Castle hill: there is a house for the master, built in 1690 by Alexander Denton esq.: the original Norman doorway still remains and is deeply recessed with a profusion of the charcteristic zig-zag ornament and niche shafts, with cushioned capitals. In 1875 a thorough restoration of the schoolroom was commenced from designs furnished by the late Sir G. Gilbert Scott R.A. when a new stone bell-cot was erected, the large window in the south-eastern gable filled with suitable mullions and tracery and two new windows inserted in the south wall. The cost was defrayed by a grant from the trustee of £30, public subscriptions amounting to £140 and £30, the proceeds of concerts and entertainments given by the masters and pupils.

The Town Hall, situated nearly in the centre of the town is a plain but spacious and lofty building of red brick surmounted by a clock, and bell-turret of wood covered with lead, on the top of which, standing with wings expanded on a golden ball, is a large carved and gilded swan of copper, chained, adopted as the device of the borough from the Staffords as stated above, the ground floor contains offices for the borough and county magistrates and a private council chamber, a large and handsome oak staircase conducts to the first floor on which is a large room used at elections and on other public occasions, and a court room in which the quarter sessions and county court business is transacted.

The building formerly used as the borough gaol and now as the borough and county lock up is a commodious structure, situated at the bottom of Market square, facing the Town Hall, and was erected by Lord Cobham in 1748 at his own expense; before the year 1839 the principal front of the building was on the north side but in that year the south side was built in a castellated style with square towers and battlements at a cost of £1,500, on the outside a tablet recording the restoration of the summer assizes to this town in 1748 ; they were held here from 1748 to the month of July, 1848, when they were removed to Aylesbury : the building contains a dwelling for a resident official (who is also superintendent of police), 13 cells and a police office.

The Literary and Scientific Institution occupies the upper floor of the Town hall ; and has a library of 800 volumes.

The Barracks, situated in West street, form a commodious building of stone, erected in 1802 by the Marquis of Buckingham as a depôt and storehouse for the Royal Bucks Yeomanry ; this popular and highly efficient regiment now numbers 480 officers and men, of which the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos G.C.S.I. is colonel commandant ; the regiment assembles once a year for drill and exercise.

Buckingham is the head quarters of the 3rd Co. (1st battalion) Bucks Rifle Volunteers, under the command of Major Henry Hearn.

The market is held on Saturday for live and dead farming stock and also for corn, and on Monday a calf market is held at the Woolpack yard. On July 10th a fair is held for wool only, and a statute pleasure fair on the Saturday after Old Michaelmas day. There are auction sales of farming stock in the market every Saturday, and a large fat cattle fair and sale early in December.

A capital mansion in this town, called "Fowlers & Lambard's," was anciently the residence of John Barton, founder of the hospital mentioned below ; here, in 1514, Edward Fowler entertained Catherine of Arragon ; and in 1644, being then in the occupation of Sir Edward Richardson, it was for some days the residence of Charles I.

In the centre of the town is a Nursing Home and a small Hospital, established in connection with the parish church, where trained hospital nurses from London reside, receive a few patients and nurse in the town and villages of the neighbourhood : this useful institution, founded by the late vicar in conjunction with his parishioners and neighbours, has now (1882) reached its fourteenth anniversary.

Christ's Hospital, founded in 1597 by Queen Elizabeth, for 7 poor women, and Barton's Hospital, founded in 1431 by John Barton, sen. of Buckingham, each maintain 6 poor women ; the former has an income of £10 and the latter of £5 yearly ; there is also Lady Penelope Osborne's Charity of £12 for the general uses of the poor ; Sir Simon Bennett's of £16 for clothing ; Hart's, of £7 for apprenticing ; Adkin's, of £26 for distribution in money ; West's, of £18 for bread ; Newton's, of £26 for education ; Rogers', of £19 for the poor ; Pittam's, of about £2 for distribution ; Groves', of £2 10s. for bread ; Sir Richard Temple's, of £13 for apprenticing ; Higgins', of about £80 for the general uses of the poor ; Agard and Dayrell's, of £60 for the same ; Lady Mary Bagot's, of £15 for clothing, and others. The poor's allotment, 14 acres, near Gawcott wood, produces £22 yearly for fuel.

There are several maltings in the town, an artificial manure manufactory, three water and steam corn mills and brewery ; the poorer female inhabitants are employed in making pillow lace.

Buckingham confers the title of Duke upon the family of Grenville-Temple, and their seat, Stowe House, is a great object of interest and attraction ; this noble seat is situated in the parish of Stowe, about three miles north-west from Buckingham, and is approached, from the town, by an avenue about 2 miles in length, bordered on either side by lofty trees, and continuing in a direct line to the principal entrance, a fine arch of the Corinthian order.

The principal land and property owners in Buckingham are the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos, Mrs. Parrott and J. E. Bartlett esq. the Rev. E. A. Uthwatt, James Harrison esq. E. Stamford esq. Mrs. Box and Arthur Byass esq.

The population in 1881 was—of the parish and municipal borough 3,585, and of the parliamentary borough 6,859, which includes the parishes of Hillesden, Maids Moreton, Padbury, Preston Bissett, Radclive-cum-Crackmore, Thornborough and Tingewick : the area of the parish is 5,000 acres ; rateable value, £17,868.

Bourton is a hamlet in the parish of Buckingham, one mile east. Bourton House was fortified by Sir Richard Minshull for Charles I. in 1642, but was taken and sacked by Lord Brook. William Oxenden Hammond esq. is sole landowner. The population in 1871 was 41.

BOURTONHOLD is a hamlet forming part of the town.

Lenborough (Lethenborough), a hamlet, is 2 miles south from the town ; Viscount Clifden is the principal landowner. Lenborough House became in 1445 a seat of the Ingoldsbys, an ancient Lincolnshire family ; of whom one Francis represented the town in Parliament ; Henry Ingoldsby, an officer in the Parliamentary army, was created a baronet in 1661 and died in 1701.

Gawcott is an ecclesiastical district, formed into a separate chapelry in 1862 out of the parish and within the liberty of the borough of Buckingham, one mile and a half south-west from the town. The chapel of St. Catherine, or, according to Lysons, St. Andrew, has been demolished, but a new church (The Holy Trinity), built by subscription, was opened in 1828 : it is a square building with chancel and western tower. The register dates from the year 1806. The living is a vicarage endowed with £100 by the late John West esq. of Gawcott and there is a glebe, house and 12 acres of land, total nett yearly value about £125, in the gift of five trustees and held since 1880 by the Rev. Alexander Joseph Schwartz M.A., Ph.D. The late Sir George Gilbert Scott R.A. the ecclesiastical architect, was born at the vicarage of Gawcott. Here are small Congregational and Primitive Methodist chapels. Mr. John West left £600 to the poor of the hamlet, the interest arising from which was formerly distributed in meat at Easter, is now distributed in May. The principal landowners are William Law esq. Mr. Samuel Sheppard, Mrs. Richard Warr, Mr. Eagles (of Aylesbury) and Mr. Durant (of Tingewick). The area is 2,340 acres ; the population in 1881 was 458.

PREBEND END is a precinct in this parish.

BUCKLAND is a parish within the parliamentary borough of Aylesbury, in the hundred, union and county court district of Aylesbury, rural deanery of Wendover, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, situated 3 miles west-north-west from Tring and 4½ east-south-east from Aylesbury, on the borders of Herts. The Grand Junction canal intersects the parish. The church of All Saints is in the Early English style and was erected in 1294 and restored in 1869; it consists of chancel, nave, north aisle and a square low embattled tower and 3 bells. The register dates from the year 1530. The living is a chapelry annexed to the vicarage of Stoke Mandeville, gross yearly value £180, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Lincoln and held since 1879 by the Rev. Meyer Mensor D.D. of the University of Berlin, who resides at Stoke Mandeville. There is a Wesleyan and also a Baptist chapel. Mrs. Parrott is lady of the manor. The chief landowners are Louisa, Dowager Lady de Rothschild, the Dean and Chapter of Lincoln and Mrs. Parrott. The soil is red and white clay and chalk; subsoil, chalk and clay. The chief crops are wheat, oats and beans. The area is 1,544 acres; rateable value, £2,559; the population in 1871 with the hamlet was 820.

Buckland Common is 5½ miles from the parish church and 3½ from Tring and joins the hamlet of St. Leonards belonging to the parish of Aston Clinton. There is a district church on the common, of wood with slated roof. Here is a small Baptist chapel built in 1860 to seat 150.

Parish Clerk, Richard Hearne.

BURNHAM is a large parish comprising the liberties of Boveney, Britwell, the hamlets of East Burnham, Cippenham and Town and Wood, in the hundred of Burnham, union of Eton, county court district of Windsor, rural deanery of Burnham, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. Burnham is 4 miles north-west from Eton, one mile and a half north-east from Taplow station, 5 miles from Windsor. The parish extends northward from the Thames 5 miles and is intersected by the Great Western railway. The village is lighted with gas. The church of St. Peter is a large edifice in the Early English and Decorated styles, comprising chancel and nave, with four bays, aisles and north transept and tower at the east end of south aisle containing 5 bells and clock and has been entirely reseated and restored with the exception of the tower: there are four stained windows, the reredos and the stained window in transept were erected by Anne, Lady Grenville, in memory of William Wyndham, Lord Grenville, his sister and brother, date 1864; in addition are monuments to George Evelyn, 1657; the Hon. Mr. Justice Willes, 1767; and Bridget, wife of William Friend, 1721; brass with effigies of Thomas Eyer, three wives, four sons and three daughters, date 1581; brass in memory of William Aluyche and Gyles Eyre (no date). The register dates from the year 1561. The living is a vicarage with the chapelry of Boveney annexed, joint nett yearly value £505 with residence, in the gift of Eton College, and held since 1878 by the Rev. Robert Frederick Rumsey M.A. of Brasenose College, Oxford. There is a Congregational chapel built in 1790. A Workman's Reading Room was opened in 1876 with a lending library containing 550 volumes, supported by honorary subscriptions and payments of members. Beech Tree Coffee Rooms were opened in May 1881. The charities for distribution amount to £130 yearly. Here is a Volunteer Fire Brigade comprising 12 members who have a manual fire engine. A market was formerly held here. Burnham is a place of great antiquity having given name to the hundred. On a moated site near Cippenham stood a royal residence of the kings of Mercia and of the early monarchs of the Norman line, and the remains of an old abbey, founded by Richard, Earl of Cornwall, brother to Edward III. in 1265, are still extant. Burnham Beeches, a romantic spot in this locality, often resorted to by the poet Gray, has been considered an unequalled fragment of forest scenery. The principal landowners are Lady Louisa Fortescue, lady of the manor, the Duke of Leeds and Sir Charles James Palmer bart. J.P. The soil is gravel; subsoil loam. The chief crops are wheat, oats and barley. The entire area of the parish is 6,730 acres; rateable value, £18,827; the population of the parish in 1881 was 2,241.

Britwell is a liberty a quarter of a mile north-east; rateable value, £1,465.

East Burnham is a liberty 1¾ miles north-east.

Cippenham is a liberty 1½ miles south-east. The school here has had a small chancel added to make it available for the service of the Church of England; the chancel, designed by Mr. E. Dolby, has been recently (1883) opened by the Bishop. The Welcome coffee tavern was opened in May 1882.

Lower Boveney is a liberty in the parish of Burnham, on the north bank of the Thames, 2 miles west from Eton, containing in 1881 with Upper Boveney 116 inhabitants, and where there is a chapel of ease; the area is 480 acres; rateable value, £699. This place is included in the Dorney United School Board District. Boveney Court is the seat of Mrs. Evans.

Parish Clerk, John Tilbury.

CALVERTON is a parish and scattered village 1 mile south-west from Stony Stratford, 7½ miles from Newport Pagnell, 3 south-west from Wolverton station, in the hundred and county court district of Newport Pagnell, union of Potterspury, rural deanery and archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The river Ouse separates the parish from Northamptonshire. The church of All Saints was defectively rebuilt in 1818, but was restored and the south aisle added by the late rector, the Hon. and Rev C. G. Perceval in 1870; it is in the Middle-Pointed and Norman styles and consists of chancel, nave and south aisle with a fine western tower containing 5 bells; the chancel was decorated in polychrome, the stained glass of the east window renewed and the panels of the pulpit filled with figures of St. John Baptist, St. Paul, St. Peter and St. Barnabas; the west door, for a long time blocked, was re-opened, and the font placed in the lower stage of the tower, which now serves as a baptistry: all the windows are stained; the area is seated with open benches and paved with encaustic tiles: a handsome reredos in mosaics, representing the Adoration of the Magi was added in 1882: the entire restoration was carried out under the direction of Mr. J. Swinfen Harris, architect, of Stony Stratford. The register dates from the year 1559. The living is a rectory, yearly value about £550 principally arising from 390 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Earl of Egmont and held since 1881 by the Rev. George Edward Willes B.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. There are six almshouses near the church, erected by the late Hon. and Rev. C. G. Perceval (late rector of this parish), and there are charities amounting to about £11 yearly for distribution in money and kind, besides about £23 for apprenticing, £5 for public uses, £3 for pensioners and upwards of £10 for the general uses of the poor. William Selby-Lowndes esq. who is lord of the manor, the Earl of Egmont and Lord Carrington are the principal landowners. The soil is light and stiff clay; subsoil, clay and stone. The chief crops are wheat, oats, beans and barley. The area is 1,980 acres; rateable value, £3,279; the population in 1881 was 550.

LOWER WEALD ½ mile south, and MIDDLE WEALD ½ south-east, and UPPER WEALD 1 mile south-east are parts of this parish.

CALVERTON END is about one mile to the north of the church, adjoining Stony Stratford, under which heading the names are given.

Parish Clerk, William Mundy.

CASTLE THORPE is a parish and village and station on the London & North Western railway, in the hundred, union and county court district of Newport Pagnell, rural deanery of Newport Pagnell, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, 54½ miles from London, 5 miles west-north-west from Newport Pagnell, 3½ north from Stony Stratford, 11 from Northampton and 2½ north from Wolverton. The river Tove separates the parish from Northamptonshire. The church of SS. Simon and Jude stands in an elevated position on the border of the old Castle yard and is an ancient stone structure consisting of chancel, nave and ailes, with low square tower containing 1 bell; the chancel has been restored; the baptismal font is large and ancient, with figures at the corners; there is a handsome monument in the chancel to Sir Thomas Tyrrell, knt. who died March 1671, erected by his widow Dame Bridget. The register dates from the year 1530. The living is a chapelry annexed to Hanslope, joint yearly value £152, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1851 by the Rev. Mark Anthony Nicholson M.A., L.Th. of Durham University who resides at Hanslope. The above Dame Bridget Tyrrell gave £10 yearly to the poor of the place, which has been invested in the purchase of 18 acres of land producing £36 yearly, which by a scheme of the Charity Commissioners is applied as follows: a portion for keeping in repair the nave of the church, £1 for an annual sermon on March 8th in the church and the remainder in doles for the poor. The castle stood near the church and was the seat of the Mauduits; it was demolished about 1215 by General Fawkes de Brent, in King John's wars with the Barons; in 1663 it became the property of Sir Thomas Tyrrell knt.; the house occupied by him stood near the castle, some portions of which still remain and are now occupied as tenements by labourers. Edward Hanslope Watts J.P. esq. is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are Lord Carrington and the Corporation of Lincoln. The soil is mixed; subsoil, stone and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and roots. The area is 1,380 acres; rateable value, £9,194; the population in 1881 was 329.

CHALFONT ST. GILES is a village and parish, 5 miles from Rickmansworth station, 4 north-east from Beaconsfield and 3½ south from Amersham, in the hundred of Burnham, union of Amersham, county court district of Chesham, rural deanery of Amersham, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, situate on the Misbourne stream. The church of St. Giles is an ancient structure chiefly in the Decorated and Perpendicular styles and consists of chancel, nave, aisles and a tower originally Norman restored in the Early English style and again restored in 1862; there is an elegant and curious east window and a four foil piscina: the font is square and has been renewed with supporting columns of Purbeck marble: in the church are some brasses to the Gardiner and Fleetwood families, including one to Thomas Fletewode 1570, with 2 wives and 18 children, the vault of Hare, Bishop of Chichester, and monuments and coats of arms of the Claydon family, the Rev. W. Jones, Sir Hugh Palliser bart. and Thomas Allen esq. and stained windows in memory of the Mair, Fawcett, Palmer and Lloyd families: the church was restored in 1862-3, under the direction of the late G. E. Street esq. R.A.; during the restoration many interesting objects were brought to light, including some frescoes of architectural designs over the chancel arch, with others on the south wall of the south aisle depicting scenes from the Old and New Testament: in the same wall was discovered an arched recess, now enclosing remains of stone coffins found under the pews in the nave; a number of interesting specimens of old tiles bearing figures and devices of flowers were relaid: the north and south aisles have been relaid with old sepulchral stones, of which thirteen formerly contained brasses: the church was re-opened by the Bishop of Oxford, June 7th, 1863. The register dates from the year 1584, but has been mutilated in several places, the years 1642 to 1653, are missing. The living is a rectory, nett yearly value £650 with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1859 by the Rev. Charles Lloyd B.A. of Christ Church, Oxford, J.P. Bucks. Here is a Congregational Chapel built in 1876 and a Primitive Methodist chapel with Sunday schools, also a meeting-house for the Society of Friends, one of the first established in England. Allen's charity of £10 yearly is for bread; Jones's charity of £20, Sandford's of £3, Molloy's £20, and Sir H. Palliser's £34, are for clothing and education. The Vache, the seat of Thomas Newland Allen esq. J.P. stands in an extensive park; the house is stated to have been built in the year 1277 and a great part of the original structure still remains: Dr. James Fleetwood, Bishop of Worcester in 1683, was born in this house. Misbourne is the seat of Charles Hunter Fenn esq; Stone Dean, of the Rev. Edward Moore. The Grové, the seat of Samuel Sandars esq. M.A. is celebrated as having been the place in which the Society of Friends held their earliest meetings previous to the building of Jordans, where a number of Quakers have been interred, including William Penn, the founder of Pennsylvania, his two wives and five children. During the great Plague in 1665, Milton retired to this village, and here wrote or finished his "Paradise Lost;" the idea of "Paradise Regained," is said to have been suggested to him through a conversation which occurred between the poet and his friend Elwood, a quaker; the house in which Milton resided still remains, and appears, from the arms above the doorway, to have been built by the Fleetwoods. Thomas Newland Allen esq. who is the lord of the manor and the Rev. Edward Moore are the principal landowners. The soil is gravel, loam and chalk: subsoil, chalk and gravel. The land is arable, meadow, pasture and woodland. The area is 3,641 acres; rateable value, £5,143; the population in 1881 was 1,265.

CHALFONT ST. PETER is a village and parish on the high road from Wendover to London, 4 miles east-north-east from Beaconsfield, 5 south-south-east from Amersham, 5½ north-north-west from Uxbridge and 5 south-west from Rickmansworth station on the London and North Western railway, in the hundred of Burnham, county court district of Uxbridge, union of Amersham, rural deanery of Amersham, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. the Misbourne stream runs through the centre of the village: the parish is bounded on the east by Hertfordshire. The church of St. Peter is a plain building, erected in the reign of George I. and comprises chancel, nave and south chapel, with western embattled tower, and has 6 bells dated 1726: the east end has been enlarged in the Early Pointed Gothic style; it contains three memorial windows to the Hibbert and Wells families; it also contains many brasses from the old church about the fourteenth century: the churchyard was given by J. N. Hibbert esq. D.L., J.P. The register dates from the year 1528. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £731 with residence, in the gift of St. John's College, Oxford, and held since 1863 by the Rev. George Martin Bullock B.D. formerly fellow of that college. A chapel of ease to the parish church of St. Peter was erected by subscription in 1866 at a cost of £800. There is a Baptist chapel at Gold Hill built in 1774 to seat 450. There are charities of about £40 annual value. Newland Park, on the borders of Herts, is the seat of Thomas Newland Allen esq. J.P.; Chalfont Park, of 400 acres, is the seat of John Nembhard Hibbert esq. D.L., J.P.; the Rev. Edward Moore is lord of the manor and the Rev. George Martin Bullock B.D. is lord of the vicarage manor: the principal landowners are John N. Hibbert esq. D.L., J.P., the Rev. Edward Moore and Thomas Newland Allen esq. J.P. The soil is mixed gravelly loam; subsoil, chalk: the land is arable and pasture: the chief crops are oats, wheat and barley: the area is 4,717 acres; rateable value £7,408; the population in 1881 was 1,456.

CHEARSLEY is a small village and parish 4 miles north-east from Thame, which is the nearest railway station and 8½ south-west from Aylesbury, in the hundred of Ashendon, union of Aylesbury, county court district of Thame, rural deanery of Waddesdon, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, situate on the river Thame. The church of St. Nicholas is a small stone structure, in good repair, consisting of a chancel, nave and a fine tower containing 3 bells, with a turret at the south-east corner: the floor of the chancel is tesselated: there is an ancient carved font standing on the north side of the church and some remains of old brasses of the fifteenth century on the chancel floor. The register dates from the year 1576. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value about £147, in the gift of D. Bradley esq. and held since 1878 by the Rev. James Magrath B.A. of Trinity College, Dublin, who is non-resident: the Rev. Henry Horrocks Slater B.A. of St. Catherine's College, Cambridge, is curate in sole charge. Here is a Baptist chapel, built in 1854, to seat 100. Mr. Richard Roadnight, who is lord of the manor, and Mr. John Guy are the principal landowners. The soil is clay and light loam; subsoil, clay and limestone. The chief crops are wheat, barley and turnips. The area is 1,130 acres; rateable value, £1,518; the population in 1871 was 311.

CHEDDINGTON is a village and parish 2 miles north-west from Ivinghoe, 6 from Leighton Buzzard, 6 north from Tring and 36 from London, in the hundred of Cottesloe, union and county court district of Leighton Buzzard, rural deanery of Ivinghoe, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The London and North Western railway passes through and has a station at Cheddington Junction, where the Aylesbury line branches off. The Grand Junction canal also intersects the parish. The church of St. Giles, situated a short distance from the village, is a plain structure in the Perpendicular style and consists of chancel and nave with square tower containing 5 bells: the font is octagonal, of Decorated character, and the pulpit is of ancient carved oak: the church was restored in 1858 under the direction of the late G. E. Street esq. R.A. principally at the expense of the late Earl Brownlow and the rector, the remainder being paid by a mortgage on the church rates for 30 years: a stained east window was presented in 1865 by the Rev. Arthur Perceval and Lady Emma Purey-Cust: there is also a window in the north aisle in memory of Mrs. Newens, a former schoolmistress, and a stained window in the north chancel, a memorial of a former rector, the Rev. J. Weighell: the reredos, a glass mosaic, representing the Last Supper, was presented by the Rev. Z. Dawson-Damer. The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a rectory, yearly value £300 with residence, in the gift of the Earl Brownlow and held since 1869 by the Rev. Frederick Burn Harvey M.A. of Hertford College, Oxford. Here is a Wesleyan chapel. The Earl of Rosebery is lord of the manor and the principal landowner. The soil is Oxford clay; subsoil, chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and rye. The area is 1,398 acres; rateable value £6,126; the population in 1871 was 745.

SEABROOK, a hamlet partly in this parish, will be found under Ivinghoe.

CHENIES (sometimes styled Isenhampstead Cheynes as distinguishing it from the neighbouring village of Isenhampstead Latimers) is a village and parish 5 miles south-south-east from Chesham, 4 east from Amersham and 4 north-north-west from Rickmansworth, in the hundred of Burnham, union of Amersham, county court district of Chesham, rural deanery of Amersham, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford and stands on a chalk hill rising near the Chess stream which separates the parish from Hertfordshire; the houses, large and small, are built of red brick, solid and substantial, with high chimneys and pointed gables and well trimmed gardens before the doors and the entire aspect of the village is old-fashioned, grave and respectable. The church of St. Michael, thoroughly restored in 1861 at a cost of about £1,600, by the Duke of Bedford, is chiefly of the Perpendicular period and consists of chancel with north aisle, or chapel, nave, south aisle, Norman south porch and a western embattled tower with turret, but destitute of parapet, containing 6 bells, recast in 1826, during the incumbency of the Rev. John Wing, by Mears of London: the nave is separated from its aisle by three pointed arches of Decorated work on octagonal columns, and there are good two-light windows of the same period in the chancel, the rest of the church is Perpendicular; the font is Norman and cup-shaped, with foliaged scrolls round the border and stands on a square base: opening from the chancel on the north side is the Russell chapel and below it is the vault where lie the remains of most of the family who have borne the name for three centuries and a half, including the late Earl Russell, 1878 and his son, Viscount Amberley, 1876: on a stone tablet over the east window are the words:—"Thys Chapel ys built by Anne, Countesse of Bedford, wyfe to John Erle of Bedforde, according to ye last will of the sayd Erle, A.D. 1556"; the earliest monument in the chapel is the tomb of Lady Anne, 1558 and her husband, 1554, one of the finest of its kind in Europe; it is of beautiful pink-veined alabaster and bears the recumbent figure of the earl, in plate armour, with coronet, collar of SS. and sword, and of the countess in ermined robes; on the sides of the tomb are the arms of both, with the Russell motto, "Che Sara Sara" and inscriptions; the faces are evidently careful likenesses, for the earl had lost an eye in action and here the eye-lid droops over the socket as in life; the monument of the next earl, Francis, "with the big head," 1585 and Margaret his wife, adjoins, but is altogether inferior to that of his father and mother; it has also recumbent effigies of alabaster, but coloured according to the taste of the seventeenth century, in white, red and gold, while at the head of the figures is a raised frame with the arms, coronet and supporters; here also is another altar tomb, consisting of a slab of black marble, supported on four columns and bearing the effigy of a lady in scarlet and ermine robes, with a coronet and a profusion of ornaments and inscribed to Anne, Countess of Warwick, daughter of the above-named Francis, Earl of Bedford and to her brothers and sister; the panels around the sides of the tomb enclose various shields of arms; in the middle of the south aisle is a gorgeous tomb, with similar recumbent figures, to Francis, second Lord Russell, of Thornhaugh, and afterwards fourth Earl of Bedford, 1641 and his Countess Catherine, 1653; behind the principal figures, within two niches in the wall, are other figures and inscriptions to their daughters Frances, 1612 and Elizabeth, 1616; and around the monument the arms of Russell, Chandos and others; at the west end is the most ostentatious tomb in the chapel, that of William, first Duke of Bedford, 1700 and his Duchess Anne (Carr) 1680; it has a circular basement, supporting a pavilion of grey marble upon which are the sitting figures of the Duke and Duchess in an attitude of violent grief, their bodies flung back and their heads buried in their hands, in the anguish of petrified despair; medallions of their children are ranged on either side in perpendicular rows and in the centre is that of the eldest, William, Lord Russell, beheaded in Lincoln's Inn Fields, July 21, 1683; the execution of this medallion is exceedingly good and the likeness to extant portraits remarkable: there are other memorials to Frances, wife of Gyles, Lord Chandos, 1623; Wriothesley, second Duke of Bedford, 1711 and Elizabeth, his wife, 1724; Lady Frances Bourchier, 1612; besides inscriptions to various members of the house of Russell on the tombs above mentioned: in the chancel are mural tablets to the Rev. William Morris M.A. 29 years rector of Chenies, 1824 and to Martha, widow of the Rev. Codrington Carrington, 1821: in the north aisle is an inscribed tablet to Mary, widow of Samuel Attomi, of Islington esq. 1721 and there are brasses to John Waliston Smith, 1469, with his wives Isabella and Johanna; Edmund Molyneux esq. 1484 and his wife Agnes, with effigies under a canopy; Anne, widow of Sir David Philip, 1510, with figure holding a heart, from which issue two scrolls, and on either side are pinnacles with shields of arms, supporting a crocketed ogee canopy; Agnes Johnson, widow, mother of Robert Leyff, rector 1511, with veiled effigy; Elizabeth, daughter of John Broughton esq. 1524, with effigy, shields and marginal inscription; Richard Newland, rector 1484, with effigy and an inscription to Sir Nicholas Smythe, parson of Latimer, 1517: under a low elliptic arch in the north wall is the upper half of an ancient stone statue of a man in armour, boldly sculptured in hard, close-grained stone; the pointed bascinet, mail gorget and emblazoned surcoat indicate the date of the effigy to be of the later fourteenth or beginning of the fifteenth century; two martlets only, of the heraldic bearings, remain, but the figure is supposed to represent Sir John Cheyne, lord of this manor, who died about 1440; under another arch is the figure of a lady, somewhat mutilated, dressed in a long robe, over which is the peculiar jacket worn at the beginning of the fifteenth century; the head is attired in a caul and rests on a lozenge-shaped pillow; the date is probably about 1413: in the churchyard is an altar-tomb, with arms and inscription, to John Vernon, gent. 1622. The register of baptisms dates from the year 1592; marriages and burials 1593 and contains many entries relating to the family of Russell. The living is a rectory, yearly value £407 with residence, in the gift of the Duke of Bedford and held since 1829 by the Rev. Lord Wriothesley Russell M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge, canon of Windsor. Here is a Baptist chapel, erected in 1760, to seat 300. The charities are of about £70 annual value, given by the Dukes of Bedford. Here are 10 almshouses, founded and endowed in 1603 by Anne Countess of Warwick, daughter of the second Earl of Bedford; these form three sides of a quadrangle and have an income of £51 per annum. The Old Manor House, now occupied as a farmhouse, is only a portion of the structure reared by the first Earl of Bedford on the site of an old castle of the Plantagenet kings and consists but of a single wing, but so well constructed and of material so admirable that it looks as if it had been completed yesterday; in itself though a fragment, it is a fine specimen of Tudor masonry and its high-pitched roofs and clusters of curiously twisted chimneys have evidently served as models for the architecture of the village; it contains nothing of much interest. The country around is richly wooded. The Duke of Bedford is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is gravel, flint and chalk; subsoil, gravel and chalk. The chief crops are wheat and barley. The area is 1,744 acres; rateable value £2,259; the population in 1881 was 388.

Parish Clerk, Robert Hockley.

CHESHAM, in Domesday "Cestreham," is a parish and market town, head of a county court district and a polling place for the county, in the hundred of Burnham, union of Amersham, rural deanery of Amersham, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, distant by road from London 28 miles, Uxbridge 14 north-west, Amersham 3 north, Aylesbury 13 south-east and Buckingham 30, and from the different stations—6 miles from Boxmoor, 5 from Great Berkhampstead, 8 from Tring, 9 from Rickmansworth and 12 from Watford. Chesham derives its name from the river Chess, a feeder of the river Colne, which flows through the town from two spring heads, one in the park of William Lowndes esq. and the other from Higham Mead, the property of Mrs. Mary Pratten. The town consists of three streets and is lighted with gas; is now (1883) being drained by an extensive system of sewage, the outfall of which will be by Broadwater bridge, about 1½ miles from the town, and extensive waterworks are also in course of construction. The town was visited by Her Majesty Queen Victoria and H.R.H. the Prince Consort, July 25, 1841, on their way to Woburn Abbey. There were originally two churches in this place, one the present edifice and the other that of Chesham Woburn, situated at the back of the infant school, where the foundations have been discovered; the church of St. Mary is a cruciform building chiefly in the Perpendicular style, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south porch with parvise, transept, chapels and a central embattled tower with rectangular spire and containing a clock and 6 fine-toned bells recast in 1812, and a sanctus bell, hung in 1790; the curfew is regularly rung from the first Sunday after New Michaelmas day until the Saturday evening immediately preceding March 10th: the earliest existing portion is the chancel, excepting, perhaps, a portion of the north transept, in which is half a Norman window; a fragment of the rood screen remains, in the chancel a piscina and in the porch a stoup; the south transept was formerly the burial place of the Cavendishes of Latimer, and contains a monument to Sir John Cavendish, 1618, and an altar tomb with a lofty pyramidal structure above to Mary, wife of Sir Francis Whichcote bart. 1728; on the north side of the chancel is a monument, with effigy in the act of preaching, to Richard Woodcock, a former vicar, 1623; and one to Richard Bowle, 1626; in the chancel are memorials to Nicholas Skottowe, 1798, by Bacon and several inscribed stones to members of the Lowndes family; in the north transept is a brass, inscribed to George, son of Major William Wade, 1738; a brass is also recorded to the family of Eggerley; the entire building has been restored by subscription: the chancel being renovated at the cost of his Grace the Duke of Bedford, who likewise gave £500 towards the remainder of the restoration; the work was from the designs of the late Sir George Gilbert Scott R.A.; and the church was reopened by the Lord Bishop of Oxford, December 9, 1869: the external walls were partly refaced, and in doing this many fragments of worked stone, proving the Norman character of the building, were met with; the area of the north aisle was enlarged and the nave roof cased in the Perpendicular style; those of the south aisle and transepts restored and a new roof of the original pitch placed on the chancel: the new font, in the Early English style, was the gift of William Lowndes esq. of the Bury, and the lectern that of the Misses Suthery: the organ, erected in 1852, was enlarged and improved in 1869; the stained east window was presented by the Duke of Bedford, the north window of the sacrarium by the Misses Nash and one on the south side by Mrs. Lowndes; in the north aisle is a memorial window to Mrs. Morton and Miss Aylward, and in the south clerestory another to Richard Clare and Mary his wife, and more recently a window, subscribed for by his friends, has been placed on the north side of the chancel, to the memory of the Rev. A. F. Aylward, twenty-five years vicar of Chesham, who fell a victim to a terrible epidemic of fever in the parish, November 12, 1871, while visiting his parishioners: a mural brass, erected by the poor of the parish, has been placed above the pulpit: during the restoration several ancient fresco paintings were discovered on the north and south walls and the north-west pier of the tower, one of these being a colossal figure of St. Christopher; some fragments of the arms of the Earls of Bedford remain in the clerestory windows. The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £270, with residence, in the gift of the Rev. Alfred Peache and held since 1872 by the Rev. Joseph Stephen Pratt B.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. There are places of worship for General Baptists, founded in 1706, also High Calvinistic and Particular Baptists; also one Congregational chapel, erected in 1724, and a Friends' Meeting House. Here is an excellent building for the Church school and there are Free Sunday schools at all the Dissenting chapels, and connected with the Dissenting places of worship are societies for visiting the sick at their homes. There is a cemetery of 7 acres with 2 mortuary chapels. The Town Hall is an oblong brick building supported on arches, the upper part of which is used for magistrates' meetings and the open part below as a market place. There is a Mechanics' Institute in the Market square and a Temperance Hall in Church street. The market for corn and cattle is held on Wednesdays, and annual fairs on the 21st April, 22nd July and 28th September. There is an efficient Town Club for the poor of both sexes for relief in times of sickness. The country around the town is beautifully diversified and very picturesque and is famous for the growth of the beech tree, from which various articles are made, such as chairs, bedsteads, malt shovels, brush blocks and covers, hoops in sizes, bowls, churn heads and cheese vats. In the town are two breweries; straw plait is also manufactured here to a great extent. There is a considerable trade in shoe making for the army and home and foreign trades. Some copious springs near the town form a fine expanse of water, supplying the river Chess, which falls into the Colne near Rickmansworth, working several flour mills on its course: on the road to Amersham is a chalybeate spring, similar to the Tunbridge water; Thomas Standing, an aged man, suffered death at the north end of the town, about 1532, during the Marian persecution. Roger Crab, the Chesham hermit, an extraordinary religious herbalist, was a hatter of this town, but afterwards retired to Ickenham, near Uxbridge, and lived an ascetic life till his death, September 11, 1680. Weedon's almshouses, endowed with 100 acres, producing £114 yearly, were built in the reign of James I. by Thomas Weedon, citizen and draper of London, who died in 1624, are for four persons, who each receive seven shillings per week with other gratuities. The Earl and Countess of Devonshire's charity of £11 yearly; J. Cheyney's £2, given by deed, in 1555; and Gawdrey's of £3 bequeathed in 1670, are for distribution in money; Mrs. Johnson's gift of the interest of £500 is attached to the British schools and interest of £500 to the Dorcas Society; Butterfield's gift, of £3 yearly, provides for certain sermons. Germans is the residence of John Stratton Fuller esq. J.P.; The Bury, built in the seventeenth century by William Lowndes esq. secretary to the treasury in the reign of Queen Anne, is the seat of William Lowndes esq. J.P.; during the excavations in 1853, for the foundations of a west wing, a quantity of human remains were found about four feet below the surface. Lord Chesham, John Stratton Fuller esq. J.P. who are lords of the manor, and the trustees of John Garrett esq. and William Lowndes esq. are the principal landowners. The soil is chalk, clay and flint. The area of the parish is 12,657 acres; rateable value, £22,553; the population of the parish in 1871 was 6,488 and in 1881, 6,502 and town 4,537.

Parish Clerk, none.

ASHERIDGE and BELLINGDON are hamlets, the latter commencing at the verge of the town and extending a distance of 4 miles north-west from Chesham; the former is 2 miles from the town in the same direction. At Asheridge was a monastic establishment of the Bonhommes friars, founded by Edmund, Earl of Cornwall, in 1283, and dedicated to St. Mary and the Holy Blood; at Asheridge is a small Congregational chapel.

BOTLEY is a hamlet commencing at the verge of the town, on the high road to Hemel Hempstead: it is long and straggling, extending about two miles east from Chesham. The Baptists have a place of worship here.

CHARTERIDGE is a hamlet surrounded by woodland commencing at the end of the town and extending about 3½ miles north-west from Chesham on the road to Aylesbury. There is a Baptist chapel.

HUNDRIDGE is a hamlet commencing near the town and extending about 2½ miles west from Chesham, on the high road to Great Missenden.

WATERSIDE is a hamlet and separate ecclesiastical parish adjoining the town, formed in 1867, situated in a delightful valley through which the river Chess flows. Christ Church, a very handsome Gothic building of flint and Bath stone, has chancel, nave, south aisle and will seat 350 persons: it was consecrated on the 18th of August 1864. The benefice was endowed with a sum of £2,000 by the executors of the late Mrs. Morgan, of Cheltenham, out of the residue of that lady's personal estate, placed at their discretionary disposal for religious purposes; the late John Hale esq. J.P. of Chesham, was one of the number and, through his recommendation and instrumentality, the endowment was effected with the consent of the bishop of the diocese. The register dates from the year 1864. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £170 with residence, in the gift of Lord Chesham, William Lowndes esq. and the vicar of Chesham for the time being and held since 1880 by the Rev. Samuel Howard Hall M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge. Chesham Cottage Hospital, situated on an eminence at Waterside, was opened in 1869 and has beds for seven patients: it is managed by a committee of which Lord Chesham is president: patients must be recommended by one of the committee and pay 2s. 6d. weekly, but accidents are admitted at all times. There is also a chapel of ease situated at Tyler's Hill, which is served by the vicar and his curate. Here are four flour mills, outworkers in the making of straw plait, also wood turnery and the manufactory of shovels for brewers and maltsters, brush handles and boards and spoons of all sizes. The population in 1881 was 1,470.

Parish Clerk, John Moulder.

CHESHAM BOIS is a parish 2 miles south from Chesham and 1½ north-east from Amersham, in the hundred of Burnham, county court district of Chesham, union of Amersham, rural deanery of Amersham, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford; it is situated on a hill. The church of St. Leonard is ancient, in the Early English style; it has chancel, nave, porch, south aisle, and was restored in 1881 at a cost of £1,300; funds are much needed to replace the tower which formerly existed: there are three brasses, two to the Cheyne family and one to Roger Lee. The register dates from the year 1542. The living is a rectory, net yearly value £142 with residence, in the gift of the Rev. Alfred Peache and held by the Rev. Joseph Matthews. The Duke of Bedford is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are Lord Chesham, John Fuller esq. and Mrs. Mary Pegg. The soil is clay; subsoil chalk. The chief crops are wheat, oats and barley. The area is 905 acres; rateable value, £1,231; the population in 1871 was 351.

CHETWODE is a parish 5 miles south-west from Buckingham and 6 north-east from Bicester, in the hundred, union and county court district of Buckingham, rural deanery and archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. A feeder of the river Ouse separates the parish from Oxfordshire. The church of SS. Mary and Nicholas, the chancel of which belonged to the Conventual church, was made parochial in 1480; it consists of chancel, nave, north and south aisles or chapels and a low tower, at the north-west angle; the chancel is a fine example of Early English; the whole east end is occupied by five graceful lancets with bold mouldings and slender shafts; the north and south sides are lighted by triplets of similar character and on the south side is a rich arcade with light shafts supporting foliated caps and the toothed ornament in the mouldings; the remains of ancient stained glass in the eastern windows were some time since removed to the south window of the chancel and the windows refilled with new stained glass of no particular merit: during repairs to the church about 1868, portions of the original tiled paving of the church were discovered, both below the existing floor and in the yard in front, formerly covered by the nave of the Conventual church: in the middle of the south aisle, close to the wall, a slab was found, incised with an eight cusped floriated cross, and with a marginal inscription in Norman-French, which, when perfect, ran, "Sir Jon Giffard gist icey De sa alme Dieu pur sa pitie eit mercy," and supposed to refer to Sir John Giffard, of Twyford, c. 1350; one of the tiles found appears to bear the arms of this family, viz: 3 silver lions passant, on a field, gules: in or about 1822, the north chapel and the walls of the chancel, except part on the south side, were taken down and rebuilt: there is a tablet to the memory of Sir John Chetwode bart. who died in Dec. 1845 and was buried here. The register of baptisms dates from the year 1779, marriages, 1756. The living is a vicarage annexed to that of Barton Hartshorn, joint gross yearly value £115, in the gift of Walter Henry Bracebridge esq. and held since 1839 by the Rev. Edward Langdale Smith M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge. Here was a priory of Augustine canons, founded either by Bishope Grostete, of Lincoln, in 1240, or by Sir Ralph de Norwich, in 1244, in honour of St. Mary and St. Nicholas; it was dissolved on account of its poverty in 1460 and annexed to the abbey of Notley but in 1480, on account of the dilapidated state of the parish church, that of the priory was opened for divine worship. The old parish church of St. Martin, which stood a quarter of a mile east of the priory was pulled down in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. There was also here a hermitage, dedicated to SS. Stephen and Lawrence, founded by a member of the Chetwode family. The Rhyne toll of Chetwode, an ancient and singular right exercised by the Chetwodes, begins at 9 o'clock on the morning of the 30th of October, when a horn is blown on the church hill at Buckingham, and gingerbread and beer are distributed among the assembled boys, the girls, by custom, not being admitted to any share in the bounty; the bearer of the cakes and ale then proceeds through the village of Tingewick to the extreme boundary of the county towards Oxfordshire, where, in front of the Red Lion inn, near Finmere, 3 miles distant, the horn is again blown and a fresh distribution takes place, under the same customary limitation; on the conclusion of these formalities, the Rhyne is proclaimed to have begun, and two toll collectors are stationed, one in the town of Buckingham and another in the hamlet of Gawcott, a mile and a half distant, each empowered to levy a tax at the rate of 2s. a score upon all cattle or swine driven through any of the townships or hamlets from which the lord of the manor claims suit and service, until 12 o'clock at night on the 7th November, when the Rhyne closes: the farmers and occupiers of land in those parishes have been accustomed to compound for immunity from this toll by an annual payment of 1s. each, but in every case in which payment has been resisted, toll has been ultimately recovered, either by legal proceedings, or by the detention of an animal; the proceeds formerly reached about £20 a year, but since the completion of the Buckinghamshire railway the receipts have materially diminished. The Chetwodes have held this manor from the time of Henry II. and the custom is traditionally derived from the alleged slaughter of a great wild boar, long the terror of these parts, by one head of the Chetwode family, and this tradition was singularly corroborated in 1810, by the discovery of the remains of a boar of an enormous size beneath a large mound of earth, overgrown with gorse and underwood, in the parish of Barton Hartshorn and within a mile of Chetwode Manor House; the mound was surrounded by a ditch, known to the country people as Boar's Pond"; these remains, exhibited at Buckingham in 1855, are in the possession of Sir George Chetwode bart. Sir George Chetwode bart. is lord of the manor, and claims suit and service by prescriptive right over this place and the neighbouring townships and hamlets of Barton, Tingewick, Preston with Cowley, Hillesden, Gawcott, Lenborough, and Bucks Prebend End, and accordingly can require the constables of all these villages, which are said to be included within the limits of an ancient forest of 1,000 acres called Rockwood, to be sworn at his court, held here at Easter. The principal landowners are Sir George Chetwode bart. Captain Green and Mr. John Russell, Miss Kime, Mr. George Nelson, Mr. Richard Warr and Richard Holt esq. The soil is a heavy clay; the greater part of the land is pasture, the remainder arable. The area is 1,200 acres; rateable value, £1,840; the population in 1881 was 155.

Parish Clerk, George Ibell.

CHICHELEY is a small parish on the road from Newport Pagnell to Bedford, 2½ miles north-east from the former and 10 south-west from the latter, and 6½ from the Wolverton station on the London and North Western railway, in the hundred, union and county court district of Newport Pagnell, rural deanery of Newport Pagnell, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Lawrence is an edifice in the Early English style and consists of chancel, nave, north aisle, south porch, with a room over it, and a central tower containing 6 bells; the tower is of the time of Henry VII. the aisles dating from that of Henry III.: the chancel was erected in the 18th century; there are three stained windows in the aisle; in the church is a brass with effigy in armour, to Anthony Cave, a merchant of the staple of Calais, dated 1558, and another, representing a skeleton in a shroud, without date, but c. 1560; it bears a Latin inscription; there is also a monument to the Cranmer family, a brass, now lost, is recorded to Elizabeth Noke, 1658. The register dates from the year 1539. The living is a vicarage, yearly value about £105 with residence, in the gift of Charles Anthony Chester esq. J.P. and held since 1881 by the Rev. John Greville Chester M.A. of Keble College, Oxford. Chicheley Hall, a fine mansion in the Italian style, erected about the year 1715, by Sir John Chester, is of red brick faced with white stone and situated in extensive grounds: it is the seat of Charles Anthony Chester esq. J.P. who is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Among the treasures preserved here are the seals of Cardinal Wolsey and Archbishop Laud, and M.S. believed to be the original composition of Charles I. a Hebrew M.S. of the book of Esther, early editions of Ben Jonson and Hooker, and a curious collection of old tracts including the "Natural History of the Hanover Rat." One of the rooms of the mansion is wainscotted with oak panelling of a date antecedent to the rest of the house, and over the fireplace is a beam with the inscription "Cave ne Deum offendas, cave ne proximum lædas, cave ne tua negligentia familiam deseras, 1550," this wainscot and beam no doubt formed part of a house known to have been built by Anthony Cave, some of the foundations of which may still be traced. The soil is clay; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley and roots. Bricks are made here. The area is 1,620 acres; rateable value, £2,098; the population in 1881 was 181.

CHILTON is a small village and parish 4 miles north from Thame, 3½ south-east from Brill and 10 west from Aylesbury, in the hundred of Ashendon, union and county court district of Thame, rural deanery of Waddesdon, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Mary is an ancient edifice, built in mixed styles and consists of chancel, nave, south aisle, south transept and porch; on the north side of the nave is a low square tower and turret in which are 3 bells; in the church are some monuments and brasses of the family of the Crokes; that of Sir John Croke, who died in 1608, is very handsome and has his effigy in armour; the chancel has been thoroughly restored, and a handsome stained window (the gift of Mrs. Chetwode) has been placed in the east end; there is a good organ, the gift of Mr. Augustus Chetwode. The register dates from the year 1730. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £138, in the gift of Charles Aubrey Aubrey esq. of Dorton House, and held by the Rev. Andrew Hamilton M.A. of Sidney Sussex College, Cambridge. Here is a small Congregational chapel. The parish has the right of sending inmates to the almshouses of Beckley (Oxon). Almond's charity of £36 yearly is for fuel. Chilton House, at present unoccupied, is a beautiful mansion. Charles Aubrey Aubrey esq. is lord of the manor and principal landed proprietor. The soil is loam and clay; subsoil, clay. The land is principally pasture. The area is 2,080 acres; rateable value, £3,265; the population in 1871 was 336.

CHOULESBURY is a small parish on the borders of Herts, in the hundred of Cottesloe, union of Aylesbury, county court district of Chesham, rural deanery of Wendover, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, 4 miles north-west-by-north from Chesham, 4 from Tring railway station and 5 from Berkhampstead. The name is said to be derived from "Chill-wolds-bury," the "fort of the Chill wolds." The church of St. Lawrence is an edifice of dressed flint in the Early English and Decorated styles and was restored in 1878 and consists of chancel, nave, south porch and a turret at the west end, the date of the building being A.D. 1310; the east and west ends have good three-light windows, and the south porch an Early English doorway; the font is of the same date; and there is a piscina in the chancel. The register dates from the year 1583. The living is a rectory, endowed with great and small tithes, gross value about £50, and in the patronage of the trustees of Mr. Neale; a lectureship at Wigginton is attached to the living, worth £160 a year, derived from land at Cutlington; the Rev. Henry Playsted Jeston M.A. of Worcester College, Oxford, has been the rector since 1830. The parish of Cholesbury in the Domesday Survey appears to have been included in Drayton Beauchamp, and in all probability became a separate parish shortly after, for in 1091 Hamon, son of Shemfelin and William Peveril gave Cholesbury to the Knights Templars; upon their suppression it passed to the Knights of St. John, with whom it remained until the Dissolution, when probably Henry VIII. granted it to Sir John Baldwin, in whose family it continued in the reign of James I. The Neales, it is likely, purchased it from the Beauchamps. In the 38th year of Edward III. Cholesbury was called a hamlet of Drayton; this is in a grant from the King to Thomas Cheyne, of the manor of Drayton, "with the hamlets of Cholwaldesbury, Helpsthorp, Massworth and Saunderdon." Cole, in his MSS. from which these facts are taken, observes, "the manor of Chowlesbury, as well as the church, was, as I conceive, originally appended to Drayton Beauchamp." There is a tolerably regular succession of rectory from 1230 to 1416, after which the rectory and vicarage seem to have been swallowed up in the endowment of the Knights of St. John. Choulesbury obtained a very unenviable degree of notoriety under the old poor law; in 1833 its poor-rates exceeded 30s. in the pound, forced all the land out of cultivation, caused a parochial bankruptcy, and for more than eighteen months the poor of the parish were obliged to be supported by rates in aid—that is, rates levied on other parishes; it was redeemed from its degraded state of total pauperism by the application of the Allotment System. There is in the parish an ancient camp, apparently forming one of a chain of Danish encampments running from east to west across the country, and of its kind one of the most perfect in the kingdom; it encloses an area of about 10 acres, and although generally supposed Danish, its deep circular fosse, more than half a mile in circumference, with its high embankment amidst dense woods, answers minutely Cæsar's description of a British town—"Oppidum autem Brittani vocant quum silvas impeditas vallo atque fossâ munierunt, quò incursionis hostium vitandæ causâ convenire consueverunt" (De Bell. Gall. 5. 21.): within its limits is a pond, called "Bury pond," or "the pond of the fort," from which the camp was no doubt supplied with water, and is said never to fail. Rev. Edward Jeffrey M.A. of Hawkhurst, Kent, is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is clay; subsoil, chalk. The chief crops are wheat and barley. The area is 176 acres; rateable value, £332; the population in 1881 was 97.

EAST CLAYDON and BOTOLPH CLAYDON.

These are two villages half-a-mile apart, forming the parish of CLAYDON, in Ashendon hundred, Winslow union, Buckingham county court district, rural deanery of Claydon, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. East Claydon is 2½ miles south-west from Winslow, about 1 mile south from the Winslow Road station on the Aylesbury and Buckingham branch and about 1 from Verney Junction station and 7 south-east from Buckingham. The church of St. Mary, situate at East Claydon, is an ancient fabric consisting of chancel, nave, north aisle and lady chapel on the south side with square tower and 5 bells; it was thoroughly restored in 1871 by voluntary subscriptions, the chancel being restored at the sole expense of Sir H. Verney bart. M.P. the patron: there is a monument to the Abel family, also a handsome tablet recording the above restoration. The register dates from the year 1583. The living is a vicarage annexed to the rectory of Middle Claydon, joint yearly value £590 with 40 acres of glebe, in the gift of Sir Harry Verney bart. M.P. and held since 1879 by the Rev. Thomas Huntley Greene M.A. of Balliol College, Oxford, chaplain to the Bishop of Rochester, who resides at Middle Claydon: there is a good vicarage house, near the church, in which the curate, the Rev. Arthur Langdale Smith, resides. There are charities of £7 12s. yearly for distribution; a charity of £5 every six years to apprentice boys is paid by Sir Harry Verney bart. M.P. who is lord of the manor and sole landowner. The soil is clay and sand; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are grass, wheat and barley. The area is 2,160 acres; rateable value, £2,937; the population in 1881 was 341.

MIDDLE CLAYDON

is a village and parish 4 miles south-west from Winslow, 6 south-east from Buckingham and 13 north-north-west from Aylesbury, in Ashendon hundred, Buckingham union and county court district, rural deanery of Claydon, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The Oxford and Bletchley branch of the London and North Western railway passes through the parish; the nearest stations are Steeple Claydon about 1 mile distant, and the Verney Junction station about 2 miles, and 56 from London. The church of All Saints is a small stone structure, comprising chancel and nave with a square tower and 3 bells, and was thoroughly restored in 1871; it contains monuments and brasses to the Verney and Giffard families; among them is a monument to Sir Edmund Verney bart. standard-bearer and Knight Marshal to King Charles I. who fell at the battle of Edgehill 1642. The register dates from the year 1632. The living is a rectory, with East Claydon annexed, joint yearly value £540 with residence and 40 acres of glebe, in the gift Sir Harry Verney bart. M.P. and held by the Rev. Thomas Huntley Greene M.A. of Balliol College, Oxford, vicar of East Claydon and chaplain to the Bishop of Rochester. Here are almshouses for six aged persons. Sir R. Verney's charity of 21 acres produces £34 yearly, expended by the trustees for poor persons living in this parish and Mrs. Verney's £24 yearly for labourers of East, Middle and Steeple Claydon. Claydon House, the seat of Major Sir Harry Verney bart. M.P., D.L., J.P., F.R.G.S. lord of the manor and owner of all the land with the exception of the glebe and a small portion belonging to the railway, is a noble stone mansion with brick additions, surrounded by a beautiful park of about 200 acres in which is a fine piece of water. The soil is clay, with beds of sand and gravel; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are grass, wheat, barley and beans. The area is 2,528 acres; rateable value £3,680; the population in 1881 was 225.

CLIFTON REYNES is a small parish on an eminence overlooking the river Ouse and the town of Olney, which is adjoining, 5 miles north-north-east from Newport Pagnell and 11 west from Bedford, in the hundred, union and county court district of Newport Pagnell, rural deanery of Newport Pagnell, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Mary the Virgin is a stone edifice of the time of Edward the First, and is chiefly in the Decorated style, consisting of chancel with north chapel separated from it by an arcade of two arches, nave, aisles and a western embattled tower containing 5 bells: the chancel retains a piscina, in the north chancel aisle is a low table tomb of Decorated work placed under a canopied arch, with good hanging tracery, upon which recline two figures rudely carved in oak and representing a knight in thirteenth century armour and a lady in the costume of the same period; the monument has neither date, inscription, nor armorial bearings, but is assumed to commemorate Simon de Borard and Margaret his wife; he was lord of this manor and died c. 1260: under the easternmost arch of the chancel arcade is an extremely elegant altar tomb of soft white stone, supporting two recumbent effigies, boldly and elaborately executed in the same material; the figure of the knight is habited in chain and plate armour, over which is a jupon emblazoned with the arms of Reynes and bears a shield, the lady in reticulated headdress and veil and a long flowing robe; there is neither date nor inscription, but the tomb is supposed to be that of Sir John Reynes and his first wife, Catherine (Scudamore); each side of the tomb is richly sculptured and divided by buttresses into eight lofty niches with canopies, over which runs a hollow cornice: under the westernmost arch is a third table tomb ornamented on each side with five shields surrounded with tracery, upon which are two other recumbent effigies carved in oak and much resembling the first two; this tomb, like the former, is undated and has no in inscription, but has been assigned, from the armorial shields upon it, to Ralph de Reynes, who died about 1310 and his second wife Amabel, daughter of Sir Richard Chamberlain, of Petsoe, since the tomb bears on the south side quarterings of the arms of Green and Drayton and on the north side the arms and quarterings of the Chamberlain family; there are also brasses to Sir John Reynes in armour, with inscription dated 1428, and to a man and his wife unknown, c. 1500; there is also an extremely fine stone font, of an octagonal form, having each side ornamented with a saint under a Gothic canopy; in the church are several marble tablets to the memory of the Small family, who formerly possessed this place. The register dates from the year 1653. The living is a rectory, yearly value £420 with residence, in the gift of and held since 1863 by the Rev. William Sutthery M.A. of St. Catharine's college, Cambridge. Kite's closes, containing 17 acres, annexed to the rectory, were originally given to maintain a lamp burning in the church; the income about £17 a year, is subject to a charge, varying in amount, for bread, cheese and ale, supplied to the parishioners on beating the parish boundaries in Rogation week; this custom is still in force and the residue of the rent, usually estimated at £11, is retained by the rector; the church allotment produces £2 10s. yearly. Joseph Robinson esq. is lord of the manor and the principal landowner. The soil is gravel, stone and loam; subsoil, chiefly stone. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats, beans and turnips. The area is 1,444 acres; rateable value, £2,358; the population in 1881 was 203.

COLNBROOK, formerly a market town, is a township and ecclesiastical parish, formed in 1853 out of the parishes of Stanwell, in the county of Middlesex and Horton and Langley St. Mary, or Langley Marish, and Iver, in Bucks; it is 3½ miles from the Great Western railway station at Slough and 2 from Langley station, 5 east from Windsor and 22½ from Reading, in the rural deanery of Burnham, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, county court districts of Windsor and Uxbridge. The river Colne runs through the town, dividing the counties of Middlesex and Bucks. The Staines and West Drayton Railway Co. have nearly completed a line to connect the South Western Railway at Staines and the Great Western Railway at West Drayton, which will have a station here. The church of St. Thomas, erected by subscription in 1849, is in the Early English style; it has chancel, with oak stalls, nave of four bays and north aisle, with a bell gable: the original chapel was erected in 1344, rebuilt in 1644, again rebuilt on a new site in 1790 and in 1849: the original clock, supposed to be of considerable antiquity, is on the bell gable of the existing church: the chancel is divided from the nave by a carved oak screen of Flamboyant design, erected in 1880, by Mr. Basil Champneys: there are 3 stained windows, also 3 stained lancet windows. The register dates from the year 1760. The living is a vicarage, of the yearly value of £103 with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1876 by the Rev. Robert Charles Francis Griffith M.A. of Jesus College, Cambridge. There is also a lectureship, value £150, connected with the Townshend foundation at Pembroke College, Oxford, in the gift of certain trustees and held by the Rev. Hudson Boyce Prnen M.A. who is vicar of and resides at Twyning, Gloucestershire. Here is a Baptist chapel built in 1708 to seat 275, also Congregational and Primitive Methodist chapels. Here is a fire brigade of 12 members, having a manual fire engine. The charities for distribution amount to £45 yearly. The town was incorporated in the reign of Henry VIII. 1543; the charter was renewed in 1632; the corporation and market have long since become obsolete, but there are two fairs for cattle, on the 5th April and 16th October. Maj-Gen. Owen Williams M.P. Sir R. B. Harvey bart. M.P. and Sir John Gibbons bart. are lords of the manor. The principal landowners besides the lords of the manor are Charles Mecking esq. and Francis Dr. Alfred Meadows. The soil is loam; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are wheat, oats and barley. The area is 864 acres; the population in 1881 was 1,312.

Poyle is a hamlet adjoining, but in the county of Middlesex.

NORTH CRAWLEY is a parish and village on an eminence on the borders of Bedfordshire, 3 miles east from Newport Pagnell, 10 south-west from Bedford, 18 from Northampton and 6 from Olney, in the hundred, union and county court district of Newport Pagnell, rural deanery of Newport Pagnell, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Firmin, first bishop of Amiens (supposed to be the only one in England so named), is a very ancient stone edifice, and consists of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, porch and an embattled western tower with a small spire, and containing a clock and 5 bells; the whole external appearance of the nave is Perpendicular: the chancel is Early Decorated, with an east window of three lights and geometrical tracery, on the south side is a small piscina and near it a fine doorway, with shafts and mouldings; the roofs of both nave and chancel are open-timbered and of the Perpendicular period with moulded ribs and bosses: the piers and arches of the nave arcades are Early Decorated, some of the former being octagonal and others clustered. The chancel is said to have been built by Peter de Guildford, rector, who died in 1321: on the outside wall, under the east window is this inscription.—

"Petrus cancellum tibi dat Firmine novellum Ut cum lauderis Deo, Petri memoreris."

A finely carved oak screen remains in a very perfect state and is a rich specimen of open screen work of the Decorated period; the whole screen is divided into sixteen compartments and in the panels at the base are painted as many figures, well drawn and in excellent condition, representing royal and ecclesiastical personages, and all carry inscribed scrolls; also an ancient stone octagonal font: on the north wall of the chancel is a very fine brass to the memory of John Garbrand D.D. 1589, a former rector, also one in the floor to Thomas Hackett esq. 1689; a third is recorded to Robert Latymer esq. 1548, and Catherine his wife, and one other to Elizabeth, wife of Nicholls Hackett esq. 1690. The register of baptisms and burials commences in 1558 and contains the names of the rectors from 1294 to 1856; marriages 1565. The living is a rectory, yearly value about £450 with residence, in the gift of William Selby-Lowndes esq. and held since 1856 by the Rev. Charles William Selby-Lowndes M.A. of Christ's College, Cambridge. Bryan's charity of £10 yearly is for apprenticing and there is £6 from the same charity for clothing. There are other charities of £20 a year for public uses and one of £5 for bread. There are Congregational and Wesleyan chapels here. Bricks and tiles are made here. The principal landowners are John Bosworth esq. who is lord of the manor, the trustees of Miss Williams and the rector. The soil is strong clay; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, oats and beans. The area is 4,060 acres; rateable value, £4,413; the population in 1881 was 699.

Letters through Newport Pagnell arrive about 7 a.m. WALL LETTER BOX cleared at 5.40 p.m. on week days & 10.40 a.m. on sundays. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Newport Pagnell CRESLOW is a parish 1 mile from Whitchurch, about 4 miles south-east from Winslow and 11 miles from Buckingham, in the hundred of Cottesloe, union and county court district of Aylesbury. Creslow at the present time contains but one dwelling house, which is the ancient manor house of the time of Edward III.; formerly in possession of the Knights Templars of the order of St. John of Jerusalem. Here was formerly a church, which is now used as a stable and coach house. The rectory was suppressed by Queen Elizabeth and was desecrated by Cornelius Holland in the time of the Commonwealth. Creslow returns one guardian to the Aylesbury union and appoints its own parish officers. The inhabitants attend Whitchurch church. Mr. William Rickford Rowland is the occupier. Lord Clifford is sole landowner. The soil varies, the uplands are rich loam resting on beds of limestone, the valleys are strong clay. The area is about 860 acres of excellent pasture land; rateable value, £1,725; the population in 1881 was 10.

CUBLINGTON is a village and parish 6 miles south-west from Leighton Buzzard, 7 south-east from Winslow and 7 north-north-east from Aylesbury, in the hundred of Cottesloe, union and county court district of Aylesbury, rural deanery of Mursley, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, situated on a rising ground and commanding an extensive view of the surrounding country. The church of St. Nicholas consists of chancel, nave, with tower and 2 bells, and was partly restored in 1861: in the vestry is a copy of "Foxe's Book of Martyrs," chained to the desk in 1568 and in good preservation. The register dates from the year 1556. The living is a rectory, yearly value £360 with residence, in the gift of the Rector and Fellows of Lincoln College, Oxford, and held since 1853 by the Rev. William Bousfield M.A. formerly fellow of that college. The Wesleyans have a chapel here. The late J. Westcar esq. of the adjoining parish of Creslow, by his will, dated 1832, left £500 in trust, the interest to be given away in clothes to the most necessitous and deserving poor, to be distributed by the resident clergyman and the occupier of Creslow jointly. The Cavendish trustees, who are lords of the manor, the Rev. William Bousfield M.A. Mr. Rogers, of Buckingham and Westcar's trustees are the chief landowners. The soil is loam; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats. The area is 1,290 acres; rateable value, £2,139 13s. 4d; the population in 1871 was 283.

CUDDINGTON is a parish within the parliamentary borough of Aylesbury, about 5 miles north-east from Thame, its nearest railway station, 6 south-west from Aylesbury, in the hundred, county court district and union of Aylesbury, rural deanery of Aylesbury, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, situate on the river Thame. The church of St. Nicholas is an ancient structure in the Early English style and consists of chancel, nave and aisles, with a square embattled tower in which are 5 bells and a clock; it was thoroughly restored in 1857; the chancel is raised four steps and contains a very elegant alabaster reredos and some handsome stained windows, erected in memory of John Franklin esq.: it has a fine organ and a good choir: the font is very ancient and of the Early English period; the church is paved with Minton's tiles, those in the chancel being very rich. The register dates from the year 1653. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £200 including 14 acres of glebe with residence, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Rochester and held since 1855 by the Rev. James Mansel Price M.A. of All Souls College, Oxford: the vicarage house is a brick structure, pleasantly situated about a quarter of a mile from the church and was erected in 1857 by the present vicar. The Wesleyans and Baptists have each a chapel, the latter built in 1831 to seat 180. The Rev. John Willis, a former vicar of the parish, left the interest of £600 Consols to be laid out in coals to be distributed to the poor of the parish every January. A piece of land about 6 acres, producing £15 10s. a year, clear of tithes and rates, was left to the poor of the parish by Nathaniel Almond esq. of Thame, who died in 1643; in the church is a tablet to his memory: the land is freehold. The chief landowners are Sir T. T. Bernard bart. J.P. Joseph Napier Higgins esq. Q.C. Mrs. Rose, Rev. J. J. Goodall, Rev. J. Graves, John Guy Dover esq. William Boddington and Lincoln College, Oxford. The soil is mostly light loam; subsoil, mostly ragstone. The chief crops are wheat, barley and turnips. The area is 1,281 acres; rateable value, £2,589; the population in 1831 was 476.

Parish Clerk, John Scott.

DATCHET (or DATCHET ST. HELEN'S) is a parish and station on the Windsor branch of the South Western railway, 24 miles from London and 2 east from Eton and one mile and a half from Windsor, in the hundred of Stoke, union of Eton, county court district of Windsor, rural deanery of Burnham, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford; it is prettily situated on the north bank of the Thames, which is spanned here by two elegant iron bridges—the Victoria Bridge, connecting it with Windsor, and the Albert Bridge with Old Windsor; the view from either is of great interest and beauty, comprising Windsor Castle, Eton College, the Royal Park and the windings of the river. The village is lighted by oil lamps. The church of St. Mary is a very elegant building designed by R. Brandon esq.; it was rebuilt on an enlarged plan on the former site in 1857-60 at a cost of £6,000, £100 of which was presented by Her Majesty the Queen and £2,000 by the then vicar, the Rev. H. F. U. Hall; it is in the Decorated style and consists of a chancel, nave with 5 bays, aisles, north transept and an octagonal tower on the east side of the north transept containing 5 bells and surmounted by a spire: all the windows are beautifully executed in stained glass and there are three memorial windows to the Prince Consort: there are brasses in memory of Richard Haubury (1593) and the Rev. Augustus Maunsell (1878). The register dates from the year 1559. The living is a discharged vicarage, gross yearly value £200 with an elegant vicarage house, in the gift of the Dean and Canons of Windsor and held since 1868 by the Rev. Joseph Henry Thompson M.A. of Queens' College, Cambridge and rural dean of Burnham. There is an endowed Baptist chapel, built in 1786 to seat 100. A Working Men's Club has been erected by public subscription, and contains large reading room, library, entertainment room and caretaker's apartments, and was opened November 7, 1881, by H.R.H. Princess Christian; Mr. Stephen W. Wyborn, of Windsor, architect. The Bridge House Trust consists of houses and 6A. 2R. 29P. producing £90 yearly for repairs of bridges and causeways; the poor's land of 15A. 2R. produces £25 yearly, and there are several small charities amounting to £25. Near the Albert Bridge is the site of an old monastery, formerly St. Helen's, the walls of which are still standing. Datchet Mead is rendered famous by Shakespeare in his "Merry Wives of Windsor," and it has long been a favourite resort of anglers. The Duke of Buccleuch, who is lord of the manor, the Earl of Harewood and the Dean and Canons of Windsor are the principal landowners. The soil is a very fertile loam; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are wheat, oats and barley. The area is 1,630 acres; rateable value, £8,069; and the population in 1881 was 1,203, in 1871 was 990.

DENHAM is a parish and village 2¼ miles north-west from Uxbridge and 7 south-east from Beaconsfield, in the hundred of Stoke, union of Eton, county court district of Uxbridge, rural deanery of Amersham, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford; the Grand Junction canal passes through here and the river Colne separates the parish from Middlesex. The church of St. Mary is a Perpendicular building with Norman tower, and has been restored: it consists of a chancel, clerestoried nave with three bays, aisles and western tower containing a clock and 8 bells, stained east window and 2 lancet windows: the font is ancient: there are several monuments of the Peckhams, one dated 1564 to Sir Edmund Peckham and Anne his wife, with recumbent figures; also one to Sir R. Peckham, privy councillor to Queen Mary, who died in 1569, being then on his travels, and was buried in the church of St. Gregory at Rome, his heart being deposited at Denham, pursuant to his own request: there is a monument to Sir Roger Hill knt. 1729 and there are several tablets to the memory of the Bowyer family; a brass in memory of Agnes Jordan, the last abbess of Zion, who was buried here in 1545, also one of the fifteenth century to Thomas Deyrdent, two wives and 21 children. The register dates from the seventeenth century. The living is a rectory, yearly value £975 with residence and 62 acres of glebe, in the gift of Benjamin H. W. Way esq. and held since 1879 by the Rev. Robert Henry Lathbury B.A. of Emmanuel College, Cambridge. Here is a Wesleyan chapel. Biddle's charity is £5 10s. and Stanley's £6 yearly. Denham Court is the seat of Nathaniel Grace Lambert esq. D.L., J.P.: it is remarkable as being the place where Charles II. was concealed by Lady Bowyer. Denham Place, the mansion of Benjamin Henry Walpole Way esq. is a large but plainly built structure erected in 1667. B. H. Walpole Way esq. is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are N.G. Lambert esq. D.L., J.P. Lt.-Gen. Goodlake and the trustees of the late Lady Emily Drummond. The soil is loam and gravel; subsoil, chalk. The chief crops are oats, barley, grass and wheat. The area is 3,905 acres; rateable value, £8,316; the population in 1881 was 1,254, including Denham New Town.

DINTON (in Domesday Danitone) is a parish within the parliamentary borough of Aylesbury, 6 miles north-east from Thame and 4 south-west from Aylesbury, in the hundreds of Aylesbury, Ashendon and Desborough, union and county court district of Aylesbury, rural deanery of Aylesbury, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, and is 17 miles in circumference. The church of St. Martin is an ancient structure, chiefly in the Early English style, consisting of chancel, nave and south aisle and a massive western embattled tower containing 5 bells, an arcade of five Early English arches; an octagonal pier separates the nave and aisle; the south doorway is Norman, uniquely ornamented with intertwined guillochi and spiral shafts: in the tympanum is a rude carving of two dragons devouring fruit from a tree, and St. Michael thrusting a cross into the mouth of one, with the inscription:—"Præmia pro meritis si quis desperit habenda Audiat hic præcepta sibi quæ sint retinenda:" the porch is Perpendicular, the font Early Decorated: in the churchyard are remains of a cross: the whole edifice was restored in 1868 and the chancel almost entirely rebuilt, the east window, a fine triplet of lancets filled with stained glass, partly under the direction of Lady Eastlake, to the memory of the Rev. John Harrison, vicar, 1865, and other members of his family, 1853-68, and presented by Mrs. Acton Tindal, of the Manor House, Aylesbury, his daughter; the west window was erected by Mr. Sackville Phelps to his wife Matilda (Goodall) 1867; a stained window in the chancel was placed by the Rev. Charles Henry and Lydia Helen Burton to their daughter, Emiline Lydia, 1871; the ancient monuments, formerly in the chancel, were re-erected in the tower; the brasses, now in the vestry, include one to Simon Mayne esq. and Colubery his wife 1617-28; there are others to John Sutton and Agnes his wife 1518, and to the families of Compton, Grenewey, and to John Lee of Morton and Wiliam Lee and Alice, his wife, and Elenor, wife of Sir Thomas Lee, of Morton, 1633; the communion plate includes two flagons, given by Sir John Vanhattem knt. 1772, and a salver given by Thomas Ingoldsby and Benjamin Gatton, vicar, 1721: the old pews were replaced by fine open seats; the work was carried out under the superintendence of G. E. Street esq. R.A., F.S.A. diocesan architect, and the church reopened December 8, 1868, by the late Bishop of Oxford. The register dates from the year 1562. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £500 with residence, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor and held by the Rev. Samuel Flood D.D. of Queens' College, Cambridge. Elizabeth Lady Hoddesdon, who died March 11, 1637-8, by will, dated November 1, 1637, left £15 to the churchwardens of Dinton in trust for the benefit of the poor. The Wesleyans have a small chapel here and the Baptists one erected in 1847. Dinton Hall, the seat of the Rev. James Joseph Goodall M.A. is picturesquely situated near the church and surrounded by a garden closely planted for the purposes of botanical study; the mansion exhibits various styles of domestic architecture and its western end is evidently of very ancient date, while the north front, with its gables, mullioned windows and noble chimney shafts seems to indicate a Jacobean origin, the south front is still later; this house is an object of great interest both from its historical associations and its varied collection of fossils and antiquities which have been discovered in the neighbourhood; the ancient mansion house and manor were formerly in the possession of Simon Mayne, representative of Aylesbury in the Long Parliament and one of the judges of the Commission Court at the trial of King Charles I. to whose death-warrant he affixed his signature and seal; at the Restoration he concealed himself in Dinton Hall, but afterwards surrendered, and was tried with other regicides at the Old Bailey, October 16, 1660, and committed to the Tower, where he died in the following year, and was buried in the church, April 18, 1661; in 1727, Simon Mayne, his grandson, sold the manor to John Vanhattem esq. father of Sir John Vanhattem, knighted by George III. January 23, 1761, from whom the Rev. James Goodall M.A. is descended; amongst other curiosities in the collection is a basket-hilted sword used by Cromwell at the battle of Naseby, besides numerous specimens of armour, and three brass models of ancient guns: in the windows are the heraldic bearings of William Warham, archbishop of Canterbury, 1503-33 and those of Dazell, Henry VIII. and another unknown. John Bigg, better known as the Dinton Hermit, is believed to have been employed as joint secretary to Simon Mayne, the regicide, and Col. Dick Ingoldsby of Walridge and Park End; he had been a man of tolerable wealth and possessed no contemptible parts, but after the Restoration he grew melancholy, and betaking himself to a recluse life, dwelt for many years in a cave underground in this parish without ever changing his clothes, which he mended by placing pieces of cloth or leather over the decayed parts; one of his shoes preserved at the hall was thus mended till the leather became more than tenfold its original thickness; the fellow to it is in the Ashmolean Museum at Oxford. The Dinton Album, commenced in 1772 by Sir John Vanhattem, contains a statistical account of the parish from the MSS. of Browne Willis and others, together with paintings by Mr. Britten, architect, and the Rev. William Goodall. Near the Aylesbury and Thame road is a small ruin called Dinton Castle. The fritillaria milleagris, or snake's head, grows here abundantly. There are seven sub-manors in the parish; the Rev. J. J. Goodall M.A. is lord of the manor paramount. The chief landowners are the Rev. J. J. Goodall M.A. Mrs. Rose, Frederick Abbott esq. Mrs. Francklin, Mrs. Raper and Edward Clarke esq. During the summer of 1852 excavations were made on the site of Sir John Vanhattem's summer house by the late J. G. Akerman esq. and on 14th June a number of skeletons were discovered with their heads lying north-west; the spot is supposed to have formerly been part of an extensive cemetery, and was further explored on the following October by the Rev. J. J. Goodall, and other skeletons were met with as well as a quantity of broken pottery and a kind of well, 5 or 6 feet deep, closely packed with stones; in digging round the foundations of the ruinous building called "Dinton Castle," a number of skeletons, arms of various descriptions, a very beautiful Saxon drinking glass, and a glass bottle of the time of Edward II. were exhumed. The soil is clay, sand and limestone; subsoil, limestone and clay. In many parts of the parish, between the surface and the rock, is a deposit of friable lime varying from one to several feet in thickness, generally known as the "wych earth," but more commonly called "Dinton marble;" when puddled with water and chopped straw it is used for the walls of cottages and outhouses. The chief crops are wheat, barley, beans and turnips. The area is 4,100 acres; rateable value, £6,148; the population in 1871 was 790.

FORD is a scattered hamlet belonging to this parish, situated 1½ miles south of the village, and contains a Baptist chapel erected in 1716. There was anciently a chapel here, now destroyed.

UPTON is also a small hamlet, on the road from Aylesbury to Dinton.

DRAYTON (or DRAYTON BEAUCHAMP) is a village and parish in a retired situation on the borders of Herts, 6 miles south-east from Aylesbury and 2 north from Tring, in the hundred of Cottesloe, union and county court district of Aylesbury, rural deanery of Ivinghoe, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of the Virgin Mary was erected in the year 1213; it is in the Early English style and consists of a chancel in which are several monuments of great beauty and interest, nave, aisles, with a square tower at the west end, the font, which is Norman, with a series of round-headed arches panelled on it, is considered to be far more ancient than the church itself; the arch of the porch of the north door is also Norman: on the north side of the chancel is a large and elegant monument to William Cheyne, Viscount Newhaven, to which has been added the statue of his lady, by Woodman; the reclining figure of the Viscount, attired in his robes and in the full-bottomed peruke and lace ruffles of the period, is a piece of beautiful statuary; in the background is a pyramid of veined marble, between two pilasters, supporting a pediment with the arms of Cheyne; on a pedestal lower than the monument here described is a statue of the Viscountess Newhaven, resting on the verge of the mattress on which reposes the statue of her lord, her face reclining on her hand; the expression of the face is finely portrayed, and the execution of the drapery, particularly the fur mantle which falls from over the shoulders, exquisite; on a cushion near her feet is a large coronet in white marble: a tombstone, with brass effigy nearly four feet in length, and inscriptions to the memory of Thomas Cheyne esq. who for his faithful and valued services as armour-bearer to Edward III. had the grant of Drayton Manor conferred upon him in the year 1368, which remained with his descendants till 1732, rests against the opposite wall of the chancel; there is also a brass to William Cheyne esq. dated 1375, and other memorials of the same family: over the communion table is a very fine stained window (of the fourteenth century), representing, in compartments, eight of the Apostles, with one of the articles of the Creed over each. The register dates from the year 1538. The church and parsonage of Drayton was the first living held by the "judicious Hooker," in 1584, to whose memory a beautiful carved oak pulpit has been erected. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value £300 with residence, in the gift of Stewart William and Arthur Henry Jenney esqrs. of Drayton Lodge, and held since 1860 by the Rev. Henry Harpur Crewe M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. An ancient and peculiar custom formerly existed here called Stephening; on St. Stephen's day the inhabitants repaired to the rectory and there partook of as much ale and bread and cheese as they chose at the rector's expense; the practice was discontinued during the incumbency of the Rev. Basil Woodd, who was instituted in 1808. The charities are £9 14s. yearly. Drayton Lodge, the seat and joint property of Stewart William and A. H. Jenney esqrs. is a large brick building, standing in a park of 70 acres, situate on the old turnpike road from Aylesbury to Tring. S. W. and A. H. Jenney esqrs. who are joint lords of the manor, and the Countess of Rosebery are the principal landowners. The soil is chalk and stiff loam; subsoil chalk and clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley, turnips and clover. The area is 1,874 acres; rateable value, £2,347; the population in 1871 was 227.

DRAYTON PARSLOW is a parish 5 miles north-east from Winslow, 5 south-west from Fenny Stratford, 13 miles from Buckingham, 2½ south-east from Swanbourne and 4½ south-west from Bletchley railway stations, in Cottesloe hundred, Winslow union, Buckingham county court district, rural deanery of Mursley, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of the Holy Trinity is a stone structure, having a chancel and nave, with square tower and four bells: it was enlarged and thoroughly restored and re-seated in 1863, a considerable portion of the expenses being defrayed by the Rev. Benjamin Spurrell M.A. the late rector. The register dates from the year 1560. The living is a rectory, yearly value about £600 with residence and including 370 acres of glebe, 34 acres of which the rector has let out in allotments, in the gift of Mrs. Spurrell, and held since 1877 by the Rev. Arthur Cyril Pearson M.A. of Balliol College, Oxford. Here is a Baptist chapel built in 1830 to seat 100, also a Primitive Methodist chapel. There are 36 acres of land allotted at the Enclosure in 1798 for the benefit of the poor which is now let in allotments to the poor in the parish. Lord Carrington, who is lord of the manor, Dr. McWhinnie and Mr. Thomas Willison are the principal landowners. The soil is mould and clay; subsoil, sand and clay. The chief crops are wheat, oats, beans and barley. The area is 1,680 acres; rateable value £1,958; the population in 1881 was 473.

DROPMORE is an ecclesiastical parish formed in 1867 out of the civil parishes of Burnham, Dorney, Hitcham and Taplow, near the river Thames, 4 miles north-east from Maidenhead, in the county court district of Windsor, rural deanery of Burnham, archdeaconry of Buckingham, and diocese of Oxford; the nearest railway station is at Taplow; the church of St. Anne, erected and consecrated in 1866, is in the style of the fourteenth century: it consists of a chancel and nave, with a handsome chancel screen and organ recess in the south of the chancel, and a font of various English and foreign marbles; it is named in memory of Anne, Lady Grenville, and Anne, daughter of the founder and late patron of the living, the Hon. G. M. Fortescue; there are two stained windows, and a brass in memory of Anne Lady Grenville.

The register dates from the year 1866. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £140, in the gift of Captain Cyril Dudley Fortescue, and held since 1881 by the Rev. Francis Saunderson Sclater B.A. Christ Church, Oxon. Dropmore, originally the property of the statesman Lord Grenville, is the seat of Lady Louisa Fortescue, situated about two miles from the village and stands in a finely-wooded park, with its pinetum containing a fine collection of most species of pines, pleasure grounds and gardens of 600 acres; on the north-west side of the mansion is a noble avenue of cedars, and the view from the south front extends over 30 miles of beautifully wooded country. Captain Cyril Dudley Fortescue is the principal landowner. The soil is gravel; subsoil loam. The area is 1,753 acres; rateable value, £3,048; the population in 1881 was 321.

EDLESBOROUGH is a village and parish one mile in width and 9 miles in length, comprising the hamlets of DAGNALL, HUDNALL, NORTHALL and part of HORTON, in the hundred of Cottesloe, union and county court district of Leighton Buzzard, rural deanery of Ivinghoe, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. Edlesborough is 3 miles west from Dunstable, 3 miles north-east from Ivinghoe, and 5½ miles south-east from Leighton-Buzzard, on the borders of Beds. The church of St. Mary, originally belonging to the monastery of Bonhommes at Asheridge, founded in 1283, is a noble edifice of the Perpendicular period, situated upon elevated ground and consists of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, north porch, and a massive western tower about 70 feet high, containing a clock and 6 bells; the spire was destroyed by lightning Friday, March 21, 1828, when the whole interior work of the tower, and all the bells but one, became a complete wreck; the chancel is well fitted with desks and stalls, some of the latter having carved misereres, and it contains a trefoil-headed piscina, and a plain recessed sedile; the nave is separated from the aisles by arcades of four arches on either side, springing from octagonal pillars; the rood screen exhibits some good tracery, and the pulpit, 14 feet high and lately restored, retains a fine pyramidal canopy and hour-glass stand; there are brasses to John Rufford esq. with effigy in armour, 1540, and three wives, Bryggatt, Anne, and Elynove; John Pigott and wife, 1592, and an inscription only to Henry Brugis, 1647, and Frances (Pygott) his wife, on the wall of the vestry. At Ashbridge House are two brasses, one of a rose, with inscription to John Killingworth, 1412; and another of John de Swynstede, 1395, formerly rector here, both of which originally belonged to this church. There are other monuments to Margaret, wife of the Rev. Thomas Bayley S.T.P. Principal of New Inn Hall, Oxford, 1701, and to various members of the Theed family 1686-1701; the north chancel aisle is the burial place of the Ruffords, and besides the brass named above there are memorials to Thomas Rufford esq. 1572, and Philippa, his wife; and Thomas Rufford esq. 1599, and Anne his wife; in the east wall, on a large stone corbel or bracket, is the sculptured figure of a dragon, and near it a man in armour holding a shield; there are some monuments also to the families of Hutchinson and Granger, 1632-1819. The register dates from the year 1567. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £450 with residence and about 16 acres of glebe land, in the gift of Earl Brownlow, who is the impropriator of the great tithes, and held since 1880 by the Rev. Chas. Ring Hutchinson M.A. of Brasenose College, Oxford. On the 21st September, 1858, during the digging out of flint which obstructed the plough, in King's Field, at Terrick, in this parish, the foundations of a building were discovered, lying north-east and south-west; the whole spreading over an area of about 1,600 square feet, in a kind of cesspool at the north-east corner. Some remains of earthen jars were found; Roman coins have been met with in this field on several occasions. The larger part of the inhabitants are employed in the straw plait business. The charities include Burghope's of about £2 for distribution, and Colemare's of 10s. for education, now expended in prayer books for deserving children. Randall's charity consists of 49 bushels of wheat yearly. Earl Brownlow, who is lord of the manor, and Arthur Macnamara esq. are the principal landowners. Edlesborough Green contains several acres and the copyholders possess the right of pasture. The soil is clay; subsoil chalk. The chief crops are barley, wheat, and beans. The area of the parish is 4,579 acres; rateable value, £9,120; the population in 1871 was 1,814.

HUDNALL is a small hamlet of Edlesborough, on the borders of Herts, nearly one mile east of Little Gaddesden and 5 miles south-east from Edlesborough. The area is 668 acres; rateable value, £804 18s. 8d.

Northall is a hamlet 1½ miles north, on the Beds border. Here is a Baptist chapel, erected 1812 to seat 200. Here is a residence for the curate and a National school with master's house; service is performed in the schoolroom. The area is 1,127 acres; rateable value, £2,264.

Dagnall is a scattered hamlet belonging to the parish of Edlesborough, situated between the Dunstable downs and Ivinghoe hills, 2½ miles south from Edlesborough and 3½ east from Ivinghoe. Here is a residence for the curate and a schoolroom with house for the mistress, both erected by Earl Brownlow; the school-room is licensed for divine service on Sundays, and a Sunday school is held morning and afternoon; a Night school is also held twice a week for men and once a week for women, reading, writing, arithmetic are taught. Here is a Wesleyan chapel in which Sunday school is held. Earl Brownlow is lord of the manor. The soil is generally poor, with a few exceptions of good arable land. The inhabitants are principally employed in the straw plait trade. The rateable value is £2,427.

ELLESBOROUGH is a parish within the parliamentary borough of Aylesbury in the hundred and county court district of Aylesbury, union of Wycombe, rural deanery of Wendover, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, 5½ miles south from Aylesbury, 2½ west-by-south-from Wendover, 3½ north north-east from Princes Risborough railway station and 1 mile east from Little Kimble station. The church of SS. Paul and Peter, which was restored in 1871, is an ancient structure in the Early English and Perpendicular styles, situated on a hill close to the old Roman road—Icknield Way; it comprises chancel, nave, south aisle, porch and lofty embattled tower containing 6 bells; there is a piscina in the south wall of the chancel, also handsome stained windows: on the north wall of the chancel there is a handsome marble tomb in the Italian style of the seventeenth century, recessed, with recumbent figure, to the memory of Brigetta Croke: on the south wall are some fine brasses in memory of the Hawtrey family dated 1500; the font is Decorated and lined with lead; there is a fine organ. The register dates from 1659. The living is a rectory with residence and 350 acres of glebe, yearly value about £350, in the gift of Mrs. Frankland-Russell Astley and held since 1863 by the Rev. John Henry Robertson Sumner M.A. and formerly fellow of University College, Durham. Here is a chapel used by the Baptists at Chalkshire, built in 1873, to seat 100. There are almshouses for four old men and four old women, founded by Margaret Lady Dodd and endowed with 40 acres and £2,000 Consols; each inmate receives 5s. weekly and a coat or gown every alternate year. The poor's allotment is 46A. 2R. 36P. The interest of £109 17s. 6d was left for the use of the poor by Sir Robert Greenhill. Chequers Court, the seat of Mrs. Frankland-Russell Astley, formerly inhabited by Oliver Cromwell, is situated in the midst of a well-wooded park of 718 acres. Velvet Lawn, so named from the soft texture of its turf, is a sequestered and pleasant recess in these grounds; it is much frequented by pleasure seekers, by the kind permission of its owner; admission by ticket. There is a small wooded dell a short distance north of the church, into which five springs of water issue from the hill, supplying a moderate sized lake used for the growth of watercress and below which are some fish pools. Mrs. Frankland-Russell Astley who is the lady of the manor, Sir Nathaniel Mayer de Rothschild bart. M.P. and Miss Rice-Trevor are the principal landowners. The soil is variable, principally chalk and flint on the uplands, and a dark loam on lower lands. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats. The area is 3,560 acres; rateable value, £4,542; the population in 1881 was 608.

EMBERTON is a parish and a pretty village on the road from Newport Pagnell to Olney, from the latter it is distant one mile south, 4 miles north from Newport Pagnell, 12 west from Bedford, 12 from Northampton and 10 from Stony Stratford, in the hundred, union and county court district of Newport Pagnell, rural deanery of Newport Pagnell, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford and is separated from Olney by the Ouse. The church of All Saints is in the Decorated style and consists of chancel, clerestoried nave and aisles, porches and a western tower; the east window is of five lights, with elaborate tracing in the head and there are piscina and sedilia in the south wall; the church contains six good stained windows and a brass (date 1400) to the memory of John Morden, alias Andrew, a former rector, c. 1410; the church was thoroughly restored in 1869 at a cost of about £2,000, half of which was given by the late Mrs. Hale and the remainder raised by the efforts of the then rector. The register of baptisms dates from the year 1659; marriages, 1674; burials, 1673. The living is a rectory, yearly value £550 with residence, in the gift of Campbell Halton esq. Whalley Range, Manchester and held since 1878 by the Rev. George Frederick Sams M.A. of St. Peter's College, Cambridge. The principal landowners are the trustees of R. G. W. Tyringham esq. who are lords of the manor, R. J. Denison esq. and Lincoln College, Oxford. The soil is gravel and clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley and roots. The area, with Petsoe manor, is 1,860 acres ; rateable value £3,489 ; the population in 1881 was 645.

PETSOE END is also in this parish.

PETSOE MANOR, formerly extra-parochial, is a parish and belongs to Lincoln College, Oxford ; it is a peculiar, but has been annexed, for ecclesiastical purposes, to Emberton. Here are several small charities; the feoffees' estate of 7 acres produces nearly £36 yearly, distributed in coal; Miss Hughes' charity of £1 10s. a year is distributed in fuel &c. ; Mrs. Knight Millar's charity of £1 10s. is for the benefit of widows, and Hill's of £1 10s. for education. In the village is a clock tower, erected by the Rev. Thomas Fry (a former rector) to the memory of Margaret, his wife. The population in 1881 was 8 ; rateable value, £462.

ETON is a union town and parish on the north bank of the Thames, an iron bridge over which connects it with Windsor, from which station it is half a mile distant, 21 miles from London vid Great Western railway and 25 miles from London by the South Western railway, 1½ south from the Slough junction (Great Western), 5 south-east from Maidenhead and 5 north-west from Staines ; it is in the hundred of St oke, county court district of Windsor, rural deanery of Burnham, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The town consists mainly of one long street ; it is well paved and lighted and under the superintendence of a Local Board of Health of nine members. The church of St. John the Evangelist is a structure in the Early Decorated style, erected and consecrated in 1854, in place of the old chapel of ease to the College chapel, built in 1769, by the Rev. William Hetherington, Fellow of Eton, the College chapel having up to that time served as the parish church ; in 1875, the connection between the parish and College of Eton being dissolved, this building was constituted the parish church and consists of chancel with aisle, nave, clerestoried aisles, north and east porches with arcades of six arches and a lofty spire and 1 bell. In the chancel is a reredos of alabaster and mosaic, piscina and sedilia ; the chancel is separated from its aisle by a traceried oak screen and a similar screen, designed by A. Y. Nutt esq. divides the chancel and nave : the east window was erected by subscriptions in 1865 in memory H.R.H. Prince Consort and there is another on the south side of the chancel in memory of Mrs. Forbes, a great benefactress to the parish. The register of Eton College chapel contains entries of baptisms from the year 1594 ; marriages and burials, 1603 and of banns from 1769 to 1808 ; there is also a register of persons touched for the King's Evil from 1686-1688. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £600 with residence, in the gift of the Provost and fellows of Eton College and held since 1875 by the Rev. John Shephard M.A. of Balliol College, Oxon.

Her Majesty in 1875 gave her assent to a scheme prepared by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for England in pursuance of the Public Schools Act, 1868, for relieving the Provost of Eton from the spiritual charge of the parish of Eton and for constituting the same parish a distinct vicarage, in the gift of the Provost and fellows of Eton, and providing an endowment for the same. The vicarage is endowed out of the revenues in the patronage of the college as follows : a rent-charge payable to the college in lieu of tithes, valued at £210, and £390 paid by the bursar of the college out of the revenue thereof, making together £600. All fees are paid to the vicar. The freehold of the church and chapel of ease at Eton Wick are vested in the vicar.

The Cemetery, with mortuary chapel at Cotton Hall, consists of about 1 acre and was consecrated in 1846.

The Eton Volunteer Fire Brigade consists of 16 members and has a manual engine and fire escape.

The Godolphin almshouses for 10 widows have an income of £114 yearly and there are charities amounting to about £298 yearly for apprenticing boys, £9 for bread and £310 yearly for distribution amongst the poor. The devisees in trust of the late G. J. Penn esq. are lords of the manor. The principal landowners are Eton College. The area is 783 acres ; rateable value, £17,752 ; and the population in 1881 was 3,986 ; the census was taken during the vacation.

ETON WICK, to the west, is a hamlet. The church of St. John the Baptist, at Eton Wick, a chapel of ease to the parish church, was consecrated in 1867 and is a building of red brick with stone facings, consisting of chancel, nave and turret with a bell, and will seat nearly 200 persons. Here is a small Congregational chapel.

Parish Clerk, George Fountain.

ETON COLLEGE.

Eton has long been celebrated for its great college, which has maintained its pre-eminence amongst the public schools of England since its foundation by Henry VI. 11th Oct. 1440, as "The King's College of Our Lady of Eton beside Windsor:' the Parochial church of Eton was declared on the 13th of the same month to be a Collegiate church and these formalities were ratified by Pope Eugenius IV. in January, 1441 ; George II. visited the school, Aug. 11, 1747, and George III. for the first time in September 1762 ; William IV. was very popular at Eton and in May, 1834, invited the whole school to witness the launching of a miniature frigate on Virginia Water ; in 1837 he attended the Eton and Westminster boat race : the buildings are mostly of red brick with stone dressings and consist of two large quadrangles communicating by a tower gateway ; the chapel occupying the south side of the front quadrangle, in the centre of which is a statue of Henry VI. the cloisters surround the second quadrangle, adjacent to which are the Provost's lodge and the hall, which, in 1858, was munificently restored by the Rev. J. Wilder ; three large fire places of Early date, discovered behind the sixteenth century panelling, were again brought into use, a new high pitched roof constructed, and a fine Perpendicular window inserted in the west wall, filled with stained glass representing scenes in the history of the college ; richly carved oak panelling, bearing the arms of successive Provosts, was placed immediately below this window and at the east end a carved screen was erected, and the portraits of many eminent men educated at Eton adorn the walls : a block of buildings containing fifteen class-rooms, music room, observatory &c. was erected in 1861, at the angle of the roads leading to Slough and Eton Common, at a cost exceeding £10,000, from designs by Mr. H. Woodyear ; the gun standing in the yard in front was taken at Sebastopol in 1855 and presented to Eton by General Peel, then secretary at war ; a Science School, with rooms for lectures and experiments, has been built near the Racket Courts erected in 1866, and in 1870 a second group of Fives Courts was built in the Timbralls.

In 1868 an Act was passed authorizing certain Commissioners to draw up new constitutions for Eton and other public schools, in pursuance of which a "Governing Body" to consist either of 9, 10 or 11 members, was appointed for Eton in 1870, and in 1872 the whole body of statutes drawn up by Henry VI. was repealed : the foundation now consists of a provost and 10 fellows : a head master of the school and a lower master ; at least 70 scholars, and not more than two chaplains or conducts ; the vice-provost and bursars are elected annually by the governors, and there are also seven lay-clerks and 16 choristers ; the total number of boys is upwards of 900. Attached to the college are thirteen poor men or alms-women, appointed by the Provost, who receive such emoluments as may be assigned them by the governing body. The endowment of the foundation is said to be over £20,000 a year, and the Provost and Fellows are the patrons of 45 livings. The scholarships and exhibitions tenable after leaving are the Newcastle scholarship of £50 for three years, tenable at either University, two Chamberlayne exhibitions of £50 for four years, the Reynolds exhibitions of £48 for four years at Exeter College, Oxford, the Berryman exhibition, two post-masterships at Merton College, Oxford, for four years, and some others, besides three or four scholarships yearly at King's College, Cambridge, open to Foundationers and Oppidans alike; the election to these takes place annually in July. The school expenses of Collegers are under £30 a year, other expenses being optional. Oppidans pay an entrance fee of £10 10s. and an annual fee of £24, board and lodging in masters' houses varies from 90 to 100 guineas.

The College Library contains a large and valuable collection of about 23,000 volumes of curious books and ancient MSS. The Boys' Library contains nearly 6,000 volumes, and there is a museum in Meadow lane. The College gardens and playing fields, situated along the banks of the river, are of considerable extent.

The chapel dedicated to SS. Mary and Nicholas, resembles in general outline that of King's College, Cambridge and is supposed to stand on the site of the old parish church which, on the foundation of the college, was enlarged and adapted to the requirements of the collegiate body, the chancel being almost entirely rebuilt; but the building as it now exists constitutes only the choir of the church projected by Henry VI. and was completed by Waynflete, Bishop of Winchester in 1476; it is 175 feet in length, 90 feet high and 40 feet wide and consists of ante-chapel, chapel and north porch, with a small vestry adjoining, the whole constituting a fine specimen of Perpendicular work; there are turrets at the angles with curious added cupolas and the building is surrounded by a pierced parapet with pinnacles; it was considerably altered in 1759 at a cost of £1,900; in 1769 the ante-chapel was repaired and the whole interior was restored in 1847-9 under the direction of Mr. Deeson; in the course of the work, the walls of the five western bays on both sides were found to be covered with paintings, executed between 1479 and 1487 and intended to exemplify the gracious protection afforded by the Blessed Virgin, the patroness of the college, to her votaries in all ages and countries; the upper portion of these, declared by the late G. E. Street esq. R.A. to be the finest yet discovered in England, was almost wholly destroyed and the remainder is now hidden behind the stalls. The church has since undergone further restoration under the direction of H. Woodyear esq.; all the windows are stained, the great east window being presented by the boys in 1847 at a cost of £2,000, two others in the ante-chapel are memorials to the Etonians who fell in the Crimean War, and a series of 14 memorial windows has been contributed by the Rev. J. Wilder, who also caused the reredos and the whole east end to be tastefully decorated; the two easternmost windows on either side the choir were contributed by the Assistant Masters and Mr. W. A. Carter and each cost £800; another fine window has been given by Dr. and Mrs. Balston; and Provost Lupton's chapel has undergone careful repair; the 4th and 3rd Forms now attend service at a temporary chapel near the Mathematical schools. At the west end of the chapel a memorial screen of Caen stone, designed by the late G. E. Street esq. R.A. richly carved with coats of arms and adorned with memorial brasses to those officers who were killed during the Afghan and South African campaigns, was unveiled on Commemoration Day (June 5, 1882), by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. The colours of the 14th Buckinghamshire (Prince of Wales' own) regiment were deposited here in 1877. In the ante-chapel is a marble statue of King Henry VI. by Bacon and a beautiful monument to Provost Goodall, by Weekes, that of Provost Sir Thomas Murray is in the chapel; there is also a black marble slab with singular inscription to Sir Henry Wotton, ambassador to Venice and Provost of Eton (1639) and memorials to Sir Henry Savile, Provost and Warden of Merton College, Oxford (1622), and John Hales, divine and critic (1656); a cenotaph has recently been erected, under which is a marble recumbent figure of Provost Hawkey, who died in 1862. The ante-chapel and other parts of the building contain a large number of brasses of the fifteenth, sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, including those of Dr. Thomas Barker, provost, 1489, Henry Bost, provost, 1503, Roger Lupton, provost, 1536, and Richard, Lord Grey, 1521.

ETON MONTEM.—The ancient and singular annual ceremony known as "Eton Montem" is first recorded in a Consuetudinarium, or description of then prevailing customs, written in 1561 by William Malim, at that time head master, and preserved at Corpus Christi college, Cambridge; its principal features consisted in a procession to Salt Hill, a mound near Slough, the affectation of military discipline, and the exaction of tribute, latterly called "salt," from the spectators, in receipt for which little tickets were presented; the total amount collected varying from £450 to £1,250, which, after payment of expenses, was given to the Captain of the School to help him in his university career; the festival, held since 1758 on Whitsun Tuesday, was abolished in 1847, and the 4th of June, George III.'s birthday, is now the great gathering-day of old Etonians and is marked by a procession of boats to Surley, and a supper al fresco in a field, opposite Surley Hall, with an exhibition of fireworks on the Brocas. The College Boat Club numbers 92 members, with three upper and seven lower boats.

FARNHAM ROYAL is a parish 3¼ miles north from Eton, 3 from Slough junction and 4½ miles from Windsor, in the hundred of Burnham, union of Eton, county court district of Windsor, rural deanery of Burnham, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford: the church of St. Mary has an ancient chancel, which is the only remaining part of the original edifice, supposed to be of the date of the twelfth century, and a modern nave of three bays and aisles: this church was restored in 1868 and enlarged by an increase of 130 sittings, when a western tower was built which contains the good old peal of 6 bells which were in the old tower before its destruction; in the church a brass memorial remains of the interment of Eustace Mascall, Clerk of Accompts for 17 years for all the buildings of King Henry VIII. his places within 20 miles of London, and departed this life Pistell reader in Windsor Castle, 31st day of January, 1564: there are five stained windows, font of Perpendicular character and an organ. The register dates from the year 1635. The living is a rectory, in the gift of the Provost and Fellows of Eton College and held since 1854 by the Rev. Stirling Frederic Marshall M.A. of Wadham College, Oxford; at the time of the enclosure more than half the parish was exonerated from tithe and 327A. 1R. 5P. partly woodland, allotted in lieu thereof; the remaining tithes are commuted at £304 17s. 8d. A Mission Room was built in 1882 on the Common for services and lectures; there is a Baptist chapel, built in 1843, to seat 130; also a Free Methodist chapel and an Evangelical Mission hall. The principal landowners are the Duke of Leeds, who is lord of the manor, and Lewis D. Hall esq. J.P. and Miss Wakeham. The charities are £5 10s. yearly value. The soil is gravel and loam; subsoil, gravel, loam and sand. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats. The population, including the hamlet of Hedgerley Dean and a portion of Salt Hill, the remainder of which is in Stoke Poges and is given with Slough, in 1881 was 1,042; the area is 2,910 acres; rateable value, £7,843.

HEDGERLEY DEAN is a hamlet in this parish 3 miles north; rateable value, £668; the population in 1881 was 204; the area is 480 acres.

FAWLEY is a parish of scattered houses in Desborough hundred, Henley union and county court district, rural deanery of Wycombe, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, situated on the borders of Oxfordshire and bank of the Thames, 3 miles north from Henley-on-Thames and 7 west from Marlow. The church of the Virgin Mary is a very small plain building, with ancient tower containing 3 bells: the tower was restored in 1807: the nave is now (1883) undergoing a thorough restoration, and a north transept with organ chamber and vestry is being added: the south transept, which was formerly used as the vestry, being now added to the seating accommodation of the church: the churchyard contains a handsome mausoleum for each of the families of the Freemans and Mackenzies: the church contains a fine black marble canopied monument, erected by Sir Bulstrode Whitelocke, in memory of his parents, Sir James and Lady Whitelocke, who are represented by two recumbent figures in stone; the heraldic quarterings within and on top of the monument are coloured, and it is surmounted on either side by the figures of Mercy and Justice (emblematic of the qualities he exercised in his duties as a judge) The register dates from the year 1573. The living is a rectory, yearly value £397 with residence, in the gift of W. D. Mackenzie esq. and held since 1846 by the Rev. Henry Almack D.D. formerly fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. Fawley Court, standing in a small well-timbered park, the seat of William Dalziel Mackenzie esq. M.A., J.P. is a noble specimen of Sir Christopher Wren's style and was erected in 1684; the house has four fronts and contains many elegant apartments; the principal or western entrance to the hall is by a colonnade of the Ionic order and commands a view of the Chiltern Hills on the north-west; the river Thames is on the south-east, Hambleden on the north and Henley on the south; in the dining-room is the celebrated picture, by Salter, of the Waterloo banquet at Apsley House and on the staircase are numerous portraits of the gallant guests; the possessor of this estate in the reign of Charles I. was Sir James Whitelocke, one of the judges of the Common Pleas, whose son sold it to the ancestor of W. P. W. Freeman esq. who sold it to the late Edward Mackenzie esq.; an extensive wing is now (1883) being built on the north-east corner in the same style of architecture, and which will contain study, billiard and smoking rooms, lavatories and numerous bedrooms; a handsome terrace with balustrade is also being constructed round the whole mansion, forming two levels, and much enhancing the beauty of the place; the walls of the mansion have also been renewed in brick, following out the design as originally left by Sir C. Wren. Lord Camoys is lord of the manor and William Dalziel Mackenzie esq. M.A., J.P. is the principal landowner. The soil is of a chalky nature: subsoil, chalk and gravel; the chief crops are wheat, barley and pasture; the area is 2,216 acres; rateable value, £2,450; the population in 1881 was 302

FENNY STRATFORD, originally a hamlet and chapelry of Bletchley, but now an independent parish and a small market town and a polling place for the county, is situated on the old Roman Watling Street, and close to the station of Magiovintum, 7 miles south-east from Stony Stratford, 13½ east from Buckingham, 5 south from Newport

Pagnell and 6 north from Leighton Buzzard: it is a station on the Bedford branch of the London and North Western railway, one mile from Bletchley Junction (which is in the parish) and 47½ miles from London by rail and 44½ by road, in the hundred, union and county court district of Newport Pagnell, rural deanery of Bletchley, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The northern side of the High street is in Sympson parish. The Grand Junction canal and river Ouzel pass through the town: the church of St. Martin is a plain building of red brick, with stone dressings, in a debased Gothic style, erected in 1724 and six succeeding years, chiefly through the exertions of Dr. Browne Willis, the antiquary, on the site of a chapel dedicated to St. Margaret, consisting of two or three aisles and an embattled tower, which was destroyed, and its burial ground desecrated during the Civil War; the church was consecrated by the Bishop of Lincoln, 27th May, 1730, and was originally 67 feet in length and 25 in width; in 1823 it was enlarged by the addition of a south aisle, and in 1866 by the erection of a new nave and large chancel, the former nave becoming a north aisle, separated from the later work by an arcade of three bays; the church, therefore, now consists of chancel, nave, aisles, and an embattled tower containing 2 bells; in the chancel, which is enriched with diaper work, are several stained windows; the ceiling of the aisle, which is in forty compartments, is painted and ornamented with the arms of the various original contributors; Dr. Willis died on the 5th February, 1760, aged 78, and was buried in the chancel of this church, beneath a slab of white marble inscribed with an epitaph written by himself. The register dates from the year 1730. The living is a vicarage, yearly value about £170 with residence, in the gift of and held since 1881, by the Rev. Francis de Lacy White B.A. of Sidney Sussex College, Cambridge. The parsonage house is a Gothic building, erected in 1869. There is a Baptist chapel in Aylesbury street, built in 1800 to seat 450; a Primitive Methodist chapel in Aylesbury street; and a Wesleyan chapel in High street. The cemetery, opened in 1865, is situated to the south of the town, and contains two Gothic mortuary chapels. There are charities of about £30 per annum for bread, blankets, and clothing, and £1 for distribution. The celebration of St. Martin's day, November 11th, regularly maintained by Browne Willis during his life, is still observed here, Divine Service, with a sermon, being held in the chapel in the morning, and in the afternoon a dinner takes place at the Bull Inn, the occasion being also marked by repeated salvoes from six little pieces of ordnance of curious size and shape, used from time immemorial, and known as the Fenny Poppers. There is a small weekly corn market on Monday; the fairs are held on April 19th, July 18th, October 11th and November 28th. A considerable trade is carried on in the manufacture of bricks and tiles: straw plait and lace are also made here. Dropshort, to the east of the town, is supposed to have been the Roman station Magioventum, numerous Roman coins and other remains having been discovered there. Sir P. D. P. Duncombe bart. who is lord of the manor, and Spencer Harrison esq. are the principal landowners. The area of the parish is 928 acres; rateable value, £9,085; in 1881 the population was 1,670, of which 449 is in Sympson parish.

Parish Clerk, Shadrach Biggs.

FINGEST is a parish on the verge of Oxfordshire, in the hundred of Desborough, union and county court district of Wycombe, rural deanery of Wycombe, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, 8 miles south-west from High Wycombe, 7 north from Henley and 7 north-west from Great Marlow ; it is surrounded by steep hills and dense woodlands ; a farmhouse and a few cottages constitute the village ; the principal part of the houses are at Cadmore End in Oxfordshire, a mile and a half east, where an ecclesiastical village has been formed ; an account of this is given in Oxfordshire. The church of St. Bartholomew is an ancient stone building in the Norman style, consisting of chancel and nave and square tower with two semicircular arches ; between the nave and chancel is a carved oak screen with a pediment supported by Corinthian pilasters ; the font is octagonal and the east window is stained. The register dates from the year 1607. The living is a rectory with that of Ibstone annexed, joint yearly value £350, the two being in the alternate gift of the Bishop of Oxford and Merton College, Oxford, and held since 1878 by the Rev. Henry Joselyne M.A. of New Inn Hall, Oxford, who resides at Ibstone. The charities for distribution are £9 15s. yearly. Colonel Williams is lord of the manor and the principal landowner. The soil is chiefly chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley and pasture. The population in 1881 was 533, including the districts of Lane End and Cadmore End ; 50 only are in the district attached to the mother church. The area is 1,304 acres ; rateable value £1,530.

FOSCOTT (or Foxcott) is a parish in the hundred, union and county court district of Buckingham, rural deanery and archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, situated nearly 2 miles north-east from Buckingham. The church of St. Leonard is a small ancient edifice, consisting of chancel, nave and south porch, with a small wooden turret and 1 bell ; there is a brass in the chancel to Edward Grenville esq. who died in 1661 : a handsome mural plate has been placed in the chancel by Lawrence Robert Hall esq. J.P. to the memory of his father, Lawrence Hall esq. J.P. ; there is a Norman archway at the south entrance and a lepers' window. The register dates from the year 1587. The living is a rectory, yearly value £200 nett, in the gift of Lawrence Robert Hall esq. J.P. and held since 1843 by the Rev. Eusebius Andrewes Uthwatt B.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge, who resides at Buckingham. Here is a small Congregational chapel. In 1840 the remains of a Roman villa were discovered, with tesselated pavements, a bath and leaden pipe, very thick, also some boars' tusks and antlers of large stags. The Manor House (formerly the residence of the Grenvilles) was rebuilt in 1639 and underwent a thorough restoration in 1868 : it is now the seat of Lawrence Robert Hall esq. late Captain Royal Bucks (King's Own) Militia J.P. lord of the manor and sole landowner. The soil is clay ; the land pasture and arable. The whole area, including 50 acres of woodland, is 714 acres ; rateable value £1,215 ; the population in 1881 was 72.

FULMER is a parish 4½ miles south-east from Beaconsfield, 4½ north from Slough station, 6½ miles from Windsor, in the hundred of Stoke, union of Eton, county court district of Uxbridge, rural deanery of Amersham, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. James is a small plain structure chiefly in the Perpendicular style, and was rebuilt in 1610 at the expense of Sir Marmaduke Darell, whose remains are therein interred: there is in the chancel a monument to him, beautifully carved in marble with recumbent figures of himself and Dame Ann his wife, 1631; in 1877 Mrs. Dent, then of Fernacres, erected at her expense a new chancel and added a vestry and organ-chamber, as a memorial to her son Lancelot William Dent; a south aisle has more recently been added and the whole church re-seated in solid oak at the expense of the members of the family of the late Mrs. Dent, in her memory; the church now consists of chancel, nave with 3 bays, south aisle and western embattled tower containing 4 bells. The register dates from the year 1610. The living is a rectory, yearly value £285 with residence, in the gift of the Dean and Canons of Windsor and held since 1875 by the Rev. Charles Joyce M.A. of Exeter College, Oxford. Fulmer was anciently a chapelry to the vicarage of Datchet, but was separated therefrom and made a distinct parish in the reign of Edward VI. Sir M. Darrell left £20 yearly for the poor and the repairs of his monument: there are other charities of £23 yearly value. A large portion of Bulstrode Park is situated in this parish; for particulars see GERRARD'S CROSS. Fulmer Hall is the seat of the Dowager Lady Willoughby; Fernacres of Edward Dent esq.; Fulmer Place of Vice-Admiral Lord John Hay K.C.B. The Duke of Somerset is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is light; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are oats, wheat, barley and grass. The area is 1,886 acres; rateable value £3,202; the population in 1881 was 428.

GERRARD'S CROSS, which is partly in this parish, will be found under a separate head.

GAYHURST is a parish and village on the road from Newport Pagnell to Northampton, 2¾ miles north-west from the former and 11¾ south from the latter and 4 south-west from Olney, in the hundred, union and county court district of Newport Pagnell, rural deanery of Newport Pagnell, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The river Ouse separates the parish from Tyringham. The church of St. Peter is a small stone edifice in the Grecian style, finished in 1728, at the cost of George Wrighte esq. keeper of the Great Seal, who purchased the estate in 1704, and consists of chancel and nave with a low square tower surmounted by a cupola and containing 1 bell. The register dates from the year 1728. The living is a rectory annexed to that of Stoke Goldington, gross joint yearly value £480 with residence, in the gift of James William Carlile esq. J.P. and held since 1865 by the Rev. Charles Jerdein M.A. of Trinity College, Dublin, who resides at Stoke Goldington. Gayhurst House, the seat of James William Carlile esq. D.L., J.P. High Sheriff for Herts 1882-83, is a mansion of stone in the Elizabethan style, one side of which was rebuilt by Lord Keeper Wrighte: the house contains a picture by Hogarth, a portrait of William Pitt and some seventeenth-century tapestry; here was born the famous Sir Kenelm Digby, imprisoned and exiled by the Parliament of the Commonwealth; Sir Everard Digby, one of the conspirators in the Guy Faux plot, concealed some of his accomplices here, but their hiding place has been removed by irruption of modern improvements; the mansion stands in a delightful and well-wooded park of 250 acres, having three large fishponds, and in view of the main road between Newport Pagnell and Northampton. James William Carlile esq. J.P. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is various; subsoil, limestone. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and turnips. The area is 840 acres; rateable value £1,438; the population in 1881 was 91.

GERRARD'S CROSS is an ecclesiastical parish formed in 1862 out of five adjoining parishes—Fulmer, Chalfont St. Peter, Iver, Langley Marish and Upton-cum-Chalvey, in the hundred of Burnham Stoke, union of Amersham, county court district of Uxbridge, rural deanery of Amersham, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford; it is 5 miles north-west from Uxbridge. The church of St. James is situated on the south side of the London and Oxford road, on Fulmer Common, and was erected by the Misses Reid in memory of their brother Major-General Reid, formerly M.P for Windsor; the building is from designs by Sir William Tite, bart. and is very peculiar, its general character being Byzantine but with an Italian campanile; its form is that of a Latin cross, with an octagonal dome rising above the intersection surmounted by a gilt cross and flanked by four turrets; the semicircular arch prevails throughout; the ornamentation is principally by the use of bricks of different colours, the more prominent portions being in white brick and the recessed parts in yellow brick relieved by red, stone has only been used when actually necessary; the roof is of open timber: the chancel is raised four steps; there are sittings for 400 persons, half of which are level. The register dates from the year 1861. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £300 with residence, in the gift of trustees and held since 1878 by the Rev. Alfred Kennion M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. Here is a Reading-room supported by John Bramley-Moore esq. D.L., J.P. The Pilgrim's Home, for fifteen aged persons, is endowed with about £250 per year by Sir J.W. Alexander, bart. Bulstrode Park, in this district, dating from the Norman conquest, was the residence of the notorious Judge Jeffreys; the mansion was rebuilt by the present owner in 1870 in the Old English manorial style; the walls are of deep-toned brick relieved by facial ornaments of vitrified brick and Bath stone dressings; crowning the north tower a bronzed bull supports the weathercock; the park contains 400 acres; it is the seat of the Duke of Somerset K.G., P.C. who is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are the Duke of Somerset, William Blount esq. D.L., J.P. Rev. H. H. Way B.A., J.P. and John Bramley-Moore esq. D.L., J.P. The soil is gravel; subsoil, chalk. The chief crops are oats, wheat, grass and barley. The entire area is 1,150 acres; rateable value £5,203; the entire population in 1871 was 607 and in 1881, 573.

GRANDBOROUGH (or GREENBOROUGH) is a parish and village 2 miles south-west from Winslow, 8 south-east from Buckingham, 8½ north from Aylesbury, in the hundred of Ashendon, union of Winslow, county court district of Buckingham, rural deanery of Claydon, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. John the Baptist, originally dedicated to God and St. Alban, is an ancient edifice and consists of a chancel and nave and has a square tower and 5 bells; this church was formerly a possession of the Abbey of St. Alban and is so described in Domesday Survey; some parts are supposed to date from the time of Richard II. and the body from that of Edward III.; it was restored in 1881 from the plans of the late Sir G. G. Scott R.A. at a cost of £1,017. The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £280 with residence, in the gift of Sir Harry Verney bart. M.P. and held since 1871 by the Rev. Charles William Stubbs M.A. of Sidney Sussex College, Cambridge. There is a small Wesleyan chapel, erected 1871. The poor's land is 6 acres and that of the church 1 acre and 10 poles. The glebe has been let by the vicar in half acre allotments to labourers. The chief landowners are W. Selby-Lowndes esq. who is lord of the manor, Joseph Dodwell esq. the Rev. J. W. Hayward M.A. Mrs. S. B. Dudley, Mr. Henry Brazier and Mr. Henry Monk, and there are a few smaller owners. The soil is clay, with veins of gravel; subsoil, clay and marl. The chief crops are wheat, oats and beans. The area is 1,560 acres; rateable value £1,988; the population in 1881 was 301.

GRENDON UNDERWOOD is a village and parish 5 miles from the Claydon station on the Oxford and Bletchley branch of the North Western railway, 9½ south-west from Winslow, 6 south-east from Bicester and 11 north-west from Aylesbury, in the hundred of Ashendon, union of Aylesbury, rural deanery of Claydon, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Leonard is an ancient stone structure of mixed styles and consists of a chancel, nave and a western tower with turret containing 3 bells: the edifice dates generally from the latter half of the thirteenth century, except the tower, which is of the fifteenth century; it was restored in 1866 at a cost of £900, principally by the liberality of the rector, assisted by the landowners and parishioners under the direction of Mr. E. G. Bruton, architect, when a good five-light window, carefully renewed from the mutilated remains of its predecessor, was placed in the east end; the nave roof was also repaired, an open-timbered roof placed over the chancel, the chancel arch restored and the fittings in the chancel renewed; the pulpit, a Jacobean work, has been set up afresh on a pedestal of Bath stone, and the font repaired in a similar manner: the nave has also been seated with oak benches, and a lectern introduced; the church contains monuments to Lord and Lady Saye and Sele and to the family of Pigott; in the north-west corner of the nave, removed from the chancel, is a piscina in good preservation: on the south side is a very good Early English doorway. The register dates from the year 1653. The living is a rectory, yearly value £350 arising from 250 acres of glebe and tithe rent-charge, with residence, in the gift of William Harvey Pigott esq. J.P. and held since 1862 by the Rev. Randolph Henry Pigott B.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge. This living has been in the gift of the Pigott family from 1519. Hart's charity of £2 yearly is for apprenticing; and Dame Anne Pigott's of £4 for education. The Baptists have a small chapel at Kingswood, in this parish, erected in 1851. The Rev. R. H. Pigott J.P. is lord of the manor and principal landowner; other landowners are Mrs. Fitzgerald and W. H. Pigott esq. The soil is clay; subsoil, clay. The land is principally pasture. The area is 2,467a. 3r. 20p.; rateable value, £2,309; the population in 1881 was 365.

HALTON is a parish within the parliamentary borough of Aylesbury, 2 miles north-by-east from Wendover and 4 south-east from Aylesbury, in the hundred, union and county court district of Aylesbury, rural deanery of Wendover, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. A branch of the Grand Junction canal, also a portion of the old Roman road called the Icknield Way, run through this parish. The village is supplied with water from the Chiltern Hills by the company which supplies Aylesbury. The church of St. Michael is a small stone structure and consists of chancel, nave, aisles and square tower containing 4 bells and was rebuilt about 1806. The register dates from about the year 1606. The living is a rectory, the tithes have been commuted at £342 14s. 4d. a year, in the gift of Alfred de Rothschild and held since 1865 by the Rev. Charles Shilson M.A. of Emmanuel College, Cambridge, who resides at the Manor House in Weston Turville parish. Bradshaw's charity is £22 yearly and Turpin's 20s. Alfred de Rothschild esq is lord of the manor and owner of the land. The soil is chalky; subsoil, chalk, clay and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley, beans &c. The area is 1,455 acres, of which there are about 500 acres of beechwood; rateable value, £1,870; the population in 1871 was 155.

HAMBLEDEN is a pretty village and widely scattered parish, 10 miles south-west from High Wycombe, 5 west from Marlow and 4 north-north-east from Henley-on-Thames, in the hundred of Desborough, union and county court district of Henley, rural deanery of Wycombe, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, situated in a fertile valley, sheltered by extensive woods on the east and west and bounded by the Thames on the south. The church of the Virgin Mary is a handsome cruciform structure built of flint, well restored in 1858-59 and has chancel, nave, north and south transepts and tower containing 6 bells: the handsome stained east window representing the Crucifixion is in memory of Anna Susanna Nixon erected by her daughter Augusta Eliza Scott-Murray, of Hambleden House; there are three other stained windows in the chancel, also piscina and sedilia and a canopied freestone monument supported by two fluted pillars to Raffe Scrope esq. cousin unto Henry Lord Scrope, of Bolton, date 1572; in the north transept is a handsome alabaster monument to Sir Cope D'Oyley D.L. of the county of Oxon and justice of Oyer and Terminer, who died 1633 and Martha, his wife, died 1618, they and their ten children being represented by kneeling figures; also a marble monument to John Greene esq. lord and purchaser of the manor of Ewden, alias Greeneland, date 1687 and 3 stained windows; in the south transept is a handsome stained window in memory of Augusta Eliza Scott-Murray, erected by her daughter, Augusta Eliza Anna Murray, and 3 small stained windows and a marble monument to Edward Marjoribanks, of Greenlands, date 1868; in the nave are several other monuments and fragments of brasses: at the west end, under the tower, are some fragments of brasses and a large carved oak chest said to have once formed the head of Cardinal Wolsey's bedstead: the churchyard contains a mausoleum, in rather a ruinous condition, for members of the Kenrick family and a handsome marble memorial to the Rev. Canon William Henry Ridley, 41 years rector of this parish, in memory of whom the tower is about to be raised and embellished. Hambleden was the birth-place of St. Thomas of Hereford, who was baptised in the old Norman font which still exists in the church. The register dates from the reign of Queen Elizabeth. The living is a rectory, yearly value £1,200 with residence, in the gift of the Ridley family, to whom the advowson was presented by the late Lord Colborne, of Harling, Norfolk; present incumbent, Rev. Charles Maunsell Wetherall M.A. Emmanuel College, Cambridge. There is a chapel of ease at FRIETH in the north of the parish, erected by the late rector in 1848 and enlarged in 1872; in the chancel are two stained windows, one of which is in memory of Frederick Edward Cripps and one at the west end is in memory of the Rev. Henry Gothorne Ridley, formerly rector of the parish: parsonage house built 1869-70. The charities are about £40 yearly value. Greenlands, the seat of the Right Hon. William Henry Smith P.C., M.P., D.L., J.P. stands on the banks of the river Thames and has extensive flower gardens tastefully laid out; the grounds contain some fine Cedars of Lebanon and also the splendid Wellingtonia: this house was fortified during the rebellion and stood a six months siege in 1644; several cannon balls were dug up here during the enlargement of the house in 1853. The Manor House, built by the Earl of Sunderland in 1604, is the property of Charles A. Scott-Murray esq. and the residence of the Earl of Antrim: Charles the First in 1646 took refuge here after his escape from Oxford: the late Earl of Cardigan was born at this house. Charles A. Scott-Murray esq. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Yewdon Manor, which probably takes its name from the old yews, at least 300 years old, in its grounds, forming a series of avenues, is the property of the Right Hon. W. H. Smith P.C., M.P. and the residence of G. C. Schwabe esq. it contains a fine collection of pictures: Bacres is also the property of the Right Hon. W. H. Smith P.C., M.P. and the residence of Henry Riversdale Grenfell esq. J.P. governor of the Bank of England; it has been much enlarged by the present owner. The chief crops are wheat, barley and pasture. The soil is light and chalky. The area is 6,615 acres; rateable value, £9,330; the population in 1881 was 1,502.

SKIRMETT is a hamlet 2 miles north, where there is a school-chapel and a small Congregational chapel; Parmoor is 2 miles north-east; Frieth is 2½ miles north-east; Mile End one mile south; Rockwell End is 1¼ miles north-east; Pheasants' Hill is half a mile north, where there is a Congregational chapel, built in 1814 to seat 170.

GREAT HAMPDEN is a parish within the parliamentary borough of Aylesbury, in the hundred of Aylesbury, union and county court district of High Wycombe, rural deanery of Aylesbury, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, 5 miles south-south-west from Wendover, 6 miles north from High Wycombe and 3 south-east from Princes Risborough railway station. The church of St. Mary Magdalen is an ancient structure in various styles, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, large south porch furnished with stone seats and a small embattled tower at the south-west angle containing 3 bells: the chancel is Perpendicular in style and retains a piscina with shelf and drain: on either side of the chancel arch is a hagioscope: the piers and arches of the nave arcade are Decorated and the lower part of the tower is Early English, the upper stage Perpendicular: the porch retains a portion of the ancient stoup; there are many memorials to the Hampdens, including brasses to John Hampden esq. 1496 and Elizabeth his wife, with effigies of both, the former in armour and figures of 4 sons and 6 daughters; Sir John Hampden, knight, 1553, also in armour, with effigies of 2 wives and 3 daughters; Griffith Hampden esq. 1591 and Anne (Cave) his wife, 1594, with a quartered shield above the inscription; William Hampden esq. son and heir of above, 1597 and a shield with twelve quarterings; John Hampden, who received his death wound at Chalgrove Field, June 18th, 1643, and died at Thame, June 24th, was buried in this church the next day, June 25th, as appears from the parish register: a fine monument, representing the wounded patriot falling from his horse, with the church and village of Chalgrove in the background, was erected to his memory by the Hon. Robert Trevor, who succeeded to the estates on the death of Jn. Hampden esq. the last male heir, in 1754; on the 21st July, 1828, the body of Hampden was disinterred in the presence of Lord Nugent and other gentlemen, in order to ascertain beyond dispute the cause of his death, and from the evidences then presented it is believed that the statement of his having been mortally hurt by the bursting of his overcharged pistol is correct; some doubt has been expresed as to its being in reality the body of the Patriot which was disinterred: there are other monuments of this family 1634—1754, and others to Thomas Kempthorne esq. 1738 and Anne (Hampden) his wife; John Mosse LL.D. rector, 1785, and Jane and Anna Maria his wives; John Yate M.A. rector, 1719; Elizabeth his wife 1720; Thomas Yate, M.B. their son, 1716 and Elizabeth their daughter, 1729; to the family of Welch, 1722-3: in the churchyard are brick tombs to Robert Viscount Hampden, 1783 and Constantia, his wife, 1761. The lands for which the Patriot, John Hampden, refused to pay ship money are in Prestwood, in this county, which see. The register of baptisms and burials dates from the year 1557; marriages, 1559. The living is a rectory, yearly value £380 with residence, in the gift of the Rev. the Earl of Buckinghamshire and held since 1854 by the Rev. Thomas Wm. Dell Brooks M.A. of Christ Church, Oxford. Hampden House, formerly the seat of the Hampdens, now that of the Rev. the Earl of Buckinghamshire, is a stately mansion, chiefly in the Italian style, pleasantly situated on a commanding eminence, in extensive grounds in which are some very fine beech, cedars of Lebanon, chestnut and elm trees; the principalf ront, erected by Robert first Viscount Hampden, is 200 feet in length; the interior presents an arrangement of convenient rather than magnificent apartments and contains portraits of various members of the Hampden family, including one believed to be an original portrait of the Patriot, one of Oliver Cromwell, several others un-identified and some drawings by Mieris; the remains of the Hampden library includes a large 4to Bible, formerly belonging to Philip Cromwell and containing minute records of that family: the parish church is situated in the grounds nearly adjoining the house. The manor was originally granted by Edward the Confessor to the family of Hampden, in which it continued until 1754. The Rev. the Earl of Buckinghamshire, whose ancestor, Sir John Hobart K.B. married, c. 1655, Mary, 6th daughter of John Hampden, is now lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is clay and gravel; subsoil chalk. The chief crops are wheat, oats and barley; there is good stock land. The area is 1,710 acres; rateable value £1,660; the population in 1871 was 262 and 255 in 1881.

LITTLE HAMPDEN is a parish within the parliamentary borough of Aylesbury, in the hundred of Aylesbury, union of Wycombe, High Wycombe county court district, rural deanery of Aylesbury, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, 3½ miles south-south-west from Wendover, 6 miles north from High Wycombe and 5 east from Princes Risborough railway station. The church (dedication unknown) is a very small ancient structure consisting of chancel, nave, north porch and 1 bell; the chancel was rebuilt in 1859; the seats are of oak and open; on the south side of the chancel is a handsome piscina, also an ancient stone figure of a bishop with a crozier in his left hand and right hand uplifted in act of benediction. The register dates from the year 1550. The living is a rectory consolidated with the rectory of Hartwell, joint yearly value £226, in the gift of the Royal Astronomical Society of London and held since 1855 by the Rev. Charles Lowndes M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge, who resides at Hartwell. The manorial rights and the principal farm belongs to Miss Rice-Trevor. The soil is chiefly clay; subsoil chalk. The chief crops are wheat, oats and barley. The area is 508 acres; rateable value, £428; the population in 1881 was 46.

HANSLOPE is a large parish and village on the borders of Northamptonshire, 6½ miles north-west from Newport Pagnell, 5 north from Stony Stratford, 10 from Northampton and 4 north from the Wolverton station on the London & North Western railway, in the hundred, union and county court district of Newport Pagnell, rural deanery of Newport Pagnell, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. James the Great is an ancient edifice of the Norman and Early English periods, consisting of chancel, with south aisle, nave, with clerestory lighted by six windows on either side, of two lights each, aisles, porches and a lofty battlemented western tower, with panelled and crocketed pinnacles at the angles, and containing 5 fine bells; the spire, built of Ketton stone A.D. 1409 by Thomas Knight, then rector, and reaching, together with the tower, a height of 200 feet, was struck by lightning June 23rd, 1804, and subsequently rebuilt at a cost of £1,000, the total height now being 186 feet; flying buttresses, pierced with quatrefoils, support the spire, which has two tiers of windows and richly crocketed ribs: in the chancel are considerable remains of Norman work: a fine doorway in the north wall, with zigzag and other ornaments; the nave is separated from the aisles by arcades of four arches; the chancel arch is plain Norman, but rises from fine piers with good capitals: only two Early English windows now remain, and part of the church, including the tower, is Perpendicular: in the Troughton chapel are some memorials to that family, including a brass to the parents of Richard Troughton, and a second to Maria, daughter of Thomas Birchmore, 1602, besides four stones from which the brasses have been removed: the length of the church, including tower, is 131 feet, breadth 60 feet; the Corporation of Lincoln are the impropriators of the great tithes. In the King's Book Hanslope is rated as a rectory, with an endowed vicarage. The register dates from the year 1570. The living is a vicarage with the chapelry of Castle Thorpe annexed, joint yearly value £152 with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1851 by the Rev. Mark Anthony Nicholson M.A., L.Th. of Durham. Here are chapels for Baptists, one erected in 1800 to seat 200, and another in 1867 to seat 100; there is also a Wesleyan chapel. Hanslope was formerly a market town, the charter was granted in 1293 by William Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick, who at the same time had a grant of a fair at the same. The feoffees' estate of 61 acres produces £182 yearly for the poor and there is an allotment of 6 acres yielding £9 for fuel. Newman's charity of £6 yearly is for bread. The Hanslapes formerly possessed this manor and were succeeded by their representatives, the Maudnits, who inherited by a female heir and were of baronial rank, their fortified residence being at Castle Thorp, formerly a hamlet of this parish. Robert Lord Mauduit being in rebellion against King John, garrisoned the castle, but it was taken and demolished by Foulkes de Brent on the 18th December, 1215. Lord Mauduit returning to his allegiance in the succeeding reign obtained the manor which he had forfeited, and in 1222 made a park at Hanslope and had a grant of does to stock it out of the King's forest at Salcey. On the death of William Mauduit, earl of Warwick, his title and estate devolved on William Beauchamp, who had married his sister and heir; in 1291 he had a King's licence to embattle his manor house at Hanslope. On the attainder of Thomas Beauchamp, earl of Warwick, the manor of Hanslope was granted in 1397 to Thomas Mowbray, who about that time was created Duke of Norfolk, but being himself attainted within a few months afterwards it was granted in tail male to Edward, Duke of York, who was killed at the battle of Agincourt, he dying without issue, the manor reverted to the Crown; it was occasionally granted to branches of the Royal family and formed part of Queen Elizabeth's revenue before her accession to the throne; in 1663 it was granted in fee to Sir Thomas Tyrrell, one of the Justices of the Common Pleas; his son having obtained an Act of Parliament to vest this manor in the hands of trustees for the payment of debts, it was sold about 1707 to George Pierrepont, who was created Lord Pierrepont of Hanslope in 1714; on his death without issue, this estate devolved to the Duke of Kingston and was purchased of the late Duke's heirs by the guardians of Edward Watts esq. Hanslope Park, the seat of Edward Hanslope Watts esq. J.P. is about 70 acres in extent; the house is a substantial stone edifice. The manor of Tathall anciently belonged to the family of Tothall and afterwards to the Lanes; it was sold by Sir William Wake bart. who inherited it by female descent from the Lanes, to Edward Watts esq. who acquired also by purchase from the Howe family the manors of Stoke and Singleton, which formerly belonged to the Piggott family. Edward Hanslope Watts esq. J.P. who is lord of the manor, and the Corporation of Lincoln are the principal landowners. The soil is mixed; subsoil, stones, gravel and clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley and roots. The area is 5,636 acres; rateable value, £17,516; the population in 1881 was 1,584.

HARDWICK is a parish 4 miles north of Aylesbury, its nearest railway station, on the road to Buckingham, from which place it is 13 miles, in the hundred of Cottesloe, union and county court district of Aylesbury, rural deanery of Mursley, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Mary is in the Early English style and consists of chancel, nave, south aisle, south porch and a square tower at the west end containing 5 bells and a sanctus bell; a very curious monument to Sir Thomas Lee knt. is in the south aisle, bearing date 1616; there are also seven tablets to former rectors of this parish: at the east end of the aisle is a piscina: the church was restored in 1872-3 under the supervision of the late G. E. Street esq. R.A. at a cost of nearly £4,000: several stained windows were inserted, principally through the munificence of Peter Reid esq. of the Stock Exchange; a window representing The Compassion of the Good Samaritan has also been added in memory of the late rector, Rev. Christopher Erle M.A.: a brass eagle has been placed in the church as a memorial of P. Cazenove esq. by his son, and a painted window has been inserted on the north side of the nave to commemorate the silver wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Cazenove: in the churchyard, on the south side, is a monument recording the burial of 247 persons killed at the battle of Aylesbury, March 21st, 1643. The registers date from the sixteenth century and are very imperfect. The living is a rectory, net yearly value £1,000, derived from 477 acres of glebe with residence, in the gift of New College, Oxford, and held since 1870 by the Rev. William Henry Walter Bigg Wither M.A. formerly fellow of that college. £6 12s. from various charities is distributed yearly to the poor. Some gigantic Saurian and other fossil remains discovered here were presented by the late rector to the Museum of Practical Geology, in Jermyn street, London. New College, Oxford, are lords of the manor and with Lord Cottesloe and Leopold de Rothschild esq. principal landowners. The soil is clay and gravel; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, beans and hay. The area is 1,340 acres; rateable value, £2,138; the population in 1871 was 254.

Weedon is a hamlet of the parish of Hardwick, situate 3 miles from Aylesbury and 14 from Buckingham. The poor's allotment was the gift of Lady Nugent and consists of 30 acres of land. About two-thirds of Weedon and one-third of Hardwick belong to the Rothschild family. The poor of the hamlet have £20 yearly distributed. Lilies, the seat of Henry Cazenove esq. J.P. is a building of red brick with stone dressings, erected in 1870, standing in a well-wooded park and grounds of about 100 acres and containing fine trees and shrubs; it is a very old historical place and is reputed to have been a great many years ago a monastery. A service is held here every Sunday evening, in connection with the church at Hardwick, by the rector; there is also a Wesleyan chapel, to which a burial-ground is attached. The area is 1,860 acres; rateable value, £3,463; the population in 1871 was 463.

HARTWELL is a parish within the parliamentary borough of Aylesbury, in the hundred, union and county court district of Aylesbury, rural deanery of Aylesbury, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, 2 miles south-west from Aylesbury and 8 north-east from Thame. The church, named in honour of the Assumption of the Virgin Mary, stands in the grounds of Hartwell House and was rebuilt on the old foundations in the Gothic style after the model of the chapter-house at York, by Sir William Lee, fourth baronet, and completed in 1756: the structure is an octagon, of fine stone, with two square towers on the east and west, the former being the chancel, the latter forming a vestibule: in the east window are shields of the arms of Hampden, Lee and Harcourt, and in the intersections of the mullions the crests of Hampton and Lee: the north-east window has been filled with stained glass by the Misses Lee in memory of their eldest brother, Lee Percival Lee, who died at Versailles; the south-west window by subscription to the memory of John Lee LL.D. who died February 25th, 1866: the ceiling, finished in the style of the chapel at King's College, Cambridge, and richly ornamented with tracery, presents a splendid piece of workmanship: the font is stone and the pulpit and reading-desk are of oak, after designs by the late G. E. Street esq. The register dates from the year 1551. The living is a rectory consolidated with that of Hampden Parva, joint nett yearly value £226, in the gift of E. D. Lee esq. and held since 1855 by the Rev. Charles Lowndes M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. There is a charity, being the interest of £117 given by Louis XVIII. on leaving, to the poor of Hartwell. There are several remarkable springs in this parish, one of which has attracted much notice from the great taste and elegance displayed in the construction of a small building over it in the Egyptian style, from a plan by Mr. Bonomi, with inscriptions after the sacred hieroglyphics of the Mizraimites by Mr. Birch, of the British Museum; the cost of erection was defrayed by the late lord of the manor. Hartwell House, long the residence of the exiled King of France, Louis XVIII. came into the possession of the Lee family in 1617 through a female branch of the Hampden family; the present building, a spacious mansion, was modernised by Sir William Lee bart. and contains a large apartment used as a private chapel by the Lee family and subsequently by Louis XVIII.; the interior of the mansion is richly adorned with carved work, the grand staircase and monument room deserving particular notice; the museum contains several antiquities and fossil remains, chiefly obtained in the neighbourhood; in the grounds are several statues and monuments, one an equestrian statue of Frederick Prince of Wales; the present possessor is Edward Dyke Lee esq. J.P. the lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is rich loam; subsoil, sand, limestone and Kimmeridge clay. The chief crops are wheat, beans and oats, but the land is principally grazed. The area is 680 acres; rateable value, £2,033: the population in 1871 was 143.

HAVERSHAM is a parish in a fertile valley on the river Ouse, 14 miles from Northampton, 15 from Bedford, 3 south-west from Newport Pagnell and a mile and a half from the Wolverton station on the London and North Western railway, in the hundred, union and county court district of Newport Pagnell, rural deanery of Newport Pagnell, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Mary is an edifice of stone, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south porch and a western embattled tower containing 4 bells: the tower, porch, piers and arches of nave, and one or two windows, are Early English, some windows are Decorated, and the clerestory and remaining parts of the church Perpendicular: there are seven handsome stained windows: during the restoration in 1857 a highly decorated Norman arch, a piscina in the chancel and one in the lady chapel were discovered: attached to the pulpit is an old and curious iron frame, originally used as a holder of the hour glass and supposed to have been placed there about the time of Oliver Cromwell: on the north side of the chancel is an altar tomb of alabaster standing under a lofty and elegant double-feathered arch, enriched with crockets, and panelled tracery at the back; on the tomb is the recumbent effigy of a lady, her head resting on cushions supported by angels, and her feet on a lion; the side of the tomb is divided into six trefoil-headed niches, each containing a statuette, and above each, along the hollow verge of the tomb, a rose; the figure is believed to represent Elizabeth Lady Clinton, who died in 1423; the tomb was repaired by Dorothy, wife of Maurice Thompson esq. in 1665: there is a brass to Alicia Payn, 1427, wife of Thomas Payn esq. and one to John Mannsell gent. 1605: a very handsome carved oak eagle lectern was presented in 1867 by Miss Hooper. The churchyard was enlarged in 1869 by a portion of land, the gift of the lord of the manor. The register of baptisms dates from the year 1665; marriages, 1685; burials, 1760. The living is a rectory, yearly value £195 with residence, which was greatly improved in 1861-62, in the gift of and held since 1856 by the Rev. Arthur Bruce Frazer M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The Rev. John Albert Greaves is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are Capt. Sir Arthur D. Hayter bart. M.P. M. G. S. Knapp esq. Mr. Henry Pike, the Rev. J. A. Greaves and Mr. A. W. Greaves. The soil is mixed; subsoil, chiefly limestone. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and beans. The area is 1,571 acres; rateable value, £4,579: and the population in 1881 was 237.

HAZLEMERE is a scattered parish surrounded by a dense woodland of great beauty. In 1847 this parish was formed, under 1 & 2 Will. IV. cap. 38, from the adjoining parishes of High Wycombe, Penn and Hughenden, and is now, under Lord Blandford's Act, a separate ecclesiastical parish; it is 2 miles north-east from Wycombe station, in the county court district of High Wycombe, rural deanery of Wycombe, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of Holy Trinity is a very small edifice, built in 1845 in the Romanesque style, and has chancel and nave. The register dates from the year 1846. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £290 with residence, in the gift of the trustees of Miss Carter and held by the Rev. George Allan M.A. of King's College, Aberdeen. The manorial rights are vested in the Crown. The trustees of the late James Walker Williams, George D. Heatley esq. J.P. and John Newman esq. D.L., J.P. are the principal landowners. The soil is chiefly clay; subsoil, chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley and clover. The entire area is 4,480 acres; rateable value, included with that of the parish of High Wycombe; the entire population in 1881 was 780.

HEDGERLEY is a village and parish 5 miles north from the Slough station and 6 from Eton and 7 miles from Windsor, in the hundred of Stoke, union of Eton, county court district of Uxbridge, rural deanery of Burnham, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Mary the Virgin, in the Early Decorated style, consists of chancel, nave and western tower with 3 bells; it stands on the brow of a hill and was rebuilt in 1852 at a cost of £1,800: the pulpit, reading-desk and communion rails are made of yellow Sanders wood, which, for nearly two centuries, formed part of the parish church of Parham in Antigua, West Indies, which was destroyed by an earthquake in 1842, the gift of Henry Liggins esq.: the seats are all oak: King Charles II. is said to have visited this church and noticing once that the communion table was without a cover, took off his cloak and laid it on the table; part of the cloak is now in the possession of the Rev. Edward Baylis: there is a brass effigy of Margaret Bulstrode, dated 1540: the font is ancient. The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a rectory, yearly value £210 10s. with residence and 3 acres of glebe land, in the gift of and held since 1845 by the Rev. Edward Baylis M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge. Here is a small Congregational chapel. Traces of a Roman camp are to be seen here. Hedgerley Park is the seat of Mrs. Stevenson, the lady of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is rich loam and gravel; subsoil, chalk. The chief crops are oats, wheat and hay. The area is 1,065 acres; rateable value, £1,381; the population in 1881 was 132.

HEDSOR is a parish 3½ miles south-west from Beaconsfield, 6 south-east from High Wycombe and 5 north-east from Maidenhead, in the hundred of Desborough, Wycombe county court district, Wycombe union, rural deanery of Wycombe, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, situate on the rivers Thames and Wick. The Bourne End station is one mile from the church. The church of St. Nicholas, which is one of the smallest in the county, is beautifully situated within the grounds of Hedsor Park; the date of the original structure is uncertain, but it is on record that "John Stephens was presented to the living by the King, 1403": according to a somewhat eccentric inscription on a tomb at the west end of the church it was "re-edified" by Roland Hynd, the then owner of the manor, in 1575: a north aisle was added and the church restored generally by the 4th Lord Boston, in 1862: within the last few years the interior has been considerably beautified by the erection of a handsome reredos, surmounting a communion table of carved cedar with marble top: the front of the table is divided into five compartments by small walnut wood columns and Norman arches, filled in with paintings on china of our blessed Lord and the four Doctors of the Church: the chancel screen of carved oak and brass is, owing to the beauty of its workmanship, a striking feature and was erected to the memory of Florance, 5th Lord Boston: the organ is a remarkably fine instrument, combining great power and richness with sweetness of tone: there are some good stained memorial windows and also tablets to the memory of Roland Hynd and Nathaniel Hook, the celebrated Roman historian, who died in 1793 and is buried here. The churchyard presents an unusually neat appearance from the fact that all the tombstones are level with the turf, which custom has always prevailed here. The hours of service on Sundays are 8.30 and 11 a.m. and 6 p.m. The register dates from the year 1678. The living is a rectory, yearly value £84 with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford (one turn) and of Lord Boston (two turns) and held since 1880 by the Rev. Morgan Edward Kirkland M.A. of Exeter College, Oxford. There are charities of £2 annual value. Hedsor House, rebuilt in 1862, the seat of Lord Boston, is a noble mansion of white brick with decorated stone dressings, having a portico supported by pillars, in the Italian style, situated on an eminence, having on the south-west a fine view of the river Thames, and has extensive and tastefully laid out pleasure grounds: in the grounds, on the summit of a hill, stands an ornamental castellated building overlooking Cookham; the square tower was erected by Lord Boston in memory of George III. Lord Boston is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is gravelly loam; subsoil, sand. The land is wood, arable and pasture. The area is 526 acres; rateable value, £1,469; the population in 1881 was 166.

HILLESDEN is a parish within the parliamentary borough of Buckingham, in the hundred, union and county court district of Buckingham, rural deanery of Claydon, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, 3¾ miles south from Buckingham, 7 west from Winslow, 10 north-east from Bicester and 2 north-west from Steeple Claydon station. The church of All Saints, rebuilt in 1493 and in great part restored in 1875 by the late Sir G. Gilbert Scott R.A. who presented the fine ceiling of the porch and its four pinnacles, is a very fine specimen of the Perpendicular style, built both within and without of wrought ashlar, and is one of those rare churches which bear evident tokens of having been designed and erected under some special and superior influence, carried out in every part with such extreme care, as to excite the greater admiration the more closely it is examined, its greatest charm lying in its beautiful grouping and in the faultless elegance of its detail: it consists of chancel with chantry chapel on the north side, nave, aisles, north porch and a western embattled tower containing 6 bells: the whole building is surmounted by an embattled parapet, and at the north-east angle of the chapel is an octagonal turret, with a panelled and embattled parapet, from the angles of which rise crocketed pinnacles, and within these rises an open lantern, formed by crocketed ogee ribs, springing from each pinnacle, meeting in the centre and terminating in a finial; within is a staircase leading to a room above: at the east end of the chantry is an ancient stained window of eight lights, each of which is supposed to represent some incident in the legendary life of St. Nicholas, to whom, according to Lysons, the church was dedicated; another window of sixteen lights, to the Judge family, consisting of subjects from the Parables, was erected in 1875: the earliest portion of the church is the tower, which is much less rich than other parts: the nave has good piers and arches, and a clerestory lighted by a series of pierced panels extending across the whole length of the nave, the roof of which is panelled: the south porch has a canoped niche over the outer doorway: there is a fine alabaster tomb with full-length effigies of Thomas Denton and his wife, 1560; and monuments to Dr. William Denton, 1691, physician to Kings Charles I. and II.; to Sir Alexander Denton kt. one of the Justices of the King's Bench, 1739, and Catherine his wife, 1733; Alexander Denton esq. 1574 and Mary his wife, 1576; Alexander Denton esq. 1698 and others of that name 1701-14; Elizabeth, wife of Thomas Isham esq. 1667; Thomas Isham gent. 1676; George Woodward esq. ambassador to Poland, who died at Warsaw, 1735, and is here buried; the Hon. Godfrey Boate, one of the Justices of the King's Bench in Ireland, 1722, and Mary his daughter, 1772, wife of Godfrey Clayton esq. 1745; Francis Drake esq. 1701; Mary, Viscountess Hillsborough, 1742; Mrs. Elizabeth Hayes, 1702, and others: the church was re-opened after restoration, June 16th, 1875, by the Lord Bishop of Oxford: at the top of the chancel walls, under the ceiling, are a number of stone figures representing a choir of angels; those on the east have musical instruments, the others have music in their hands: on each wall is a piscina; a fine rood screen divides the chancel and nave, and in the tower are three old paintings of Moses, Aaron and the arms of William III.: in the churchyard is the octagonal fluted shaft of a fine cross, much mutilated, of the fourteenth century, rising from a bold and well designed base of three steps, and retaining part of the beautiful group of niches, the cross is 7 feet 7 inches high and derives additional interest from its standing near the grave of the Royalists who fell at the siege of Hillesden House, March 3rd, 1643. The register dates from the year 1594. The living is a vicarage, of the nett yearly value of £200 with residence, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Christ Church, Oxford, and held since 1868 by the Rev. Robert Holt M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge, and of Christ Church, Oxford. The vicarage house, a neat structure in the Domestic Gothic style, was built by the present incumbent in 1870. The parish consists of scattered farms and a few cottages. Hillesden House, a great part of which was taken down at the beginning of the present century, was during the civil war garrisoned in 1641 for the King, being then the seat of Sir Alexander Denton kt.; in 1643 it was attacked by and surrendered to the Parliamentary forces, Sir Alexander, Col. Smith, besides two field officers and divers captains being amongst the prisoners. In January, 1635, and again in November, 1822, this place and the neighbourhood are said to have been visited by shocks of earthquake: a portion of the old wall still remains; there are bullet holes in the church door and part of a bullet. George Morrison esq. of Hamptworth Lodge, Downton, Wilts, is lord of the manor, the Dean and Chapter of Christ Church, Oxford, are the owners of the great tithes and of about 286 acres of land; W. H. Domville and George Morrison esqs. are the principal landowners. The soil is principally clay; about three-fourths of the land is pasture. The area is 2,574 acres; rateable value, £3,809; the population in 1881 was 221.

HOGGESTON is a village and parish 3½ miles south-east from Winslow and 8½ north-east from Aylesbury, in Cottesloe hundred, Winslow union, Buckingham county court district, rural deanery of Mursley, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of SS. Peter and Paul, or the church of the Holy Cross (it is supposed that SS. Peter and Paul was a second dedication), is an ancient structure, in the Early Transition style of the thirteenth century, comprising chancel, nave and aisles with a square wooden tower and 3 bells; it has been recently restored, the chancel enlarged and fitted with carved oak stalls and the nave with oak benches: there are some memorials of the Mayne family and the tomb of the founder, of whom there is an effigy, much mutilated, holding in his hand a model of a church; Thomas Gataker, a great scholar of the reign of Charles II. was rector of this parish. The register dates from the year 1547. The living is a rectory, tithes commuted at £375 with residence and 80 acres of glebe, in the gift of the Provost and fellows of Worcester College, Oxford and held since 1873 by the Rev. Charles Henry Hole M.A. formerly fellow of that college. The Earl of Rosebery is lord of the manor and owns all the land with the exception of the glebe. The old Manor House, a picturesque building, is occupied by Mr. Morris as a farm house. The soil is clay and gravel; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are grass, wheat and beans. HORSENDON is a parish within the parliamentary borough of Aylesbury, in the hundred of Aylesbury, union of Wycombe, county court district of High Wycombe, rural deanery of Aylesbury, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, one mile west from Princes Risborough and 7 north-west from High Wycombe. The church of St. Michael is a small plain structure of stone, 38ft. long by 21ft. wide, in the Perpendicular style, built on the site of the chancel of the old church and consists of a chancel and nave under one roof, with a low embattled western tower containing 1 bell; the benches are of English oak with poppy heads; the lectern, reading-desk and pulpit are also of oak handsomely carved; in the south wall of the chancel is a piscina: the hexagonal font was shown in the Exhibition of 1851 and has emblematical carvings of the dove, lamb, lily, cross and monograms; there are mural tablets to the Grubb family, also one to Thomas Anderton esq.: the church was enlarged in 1869 by an extension eastwards, under the direction of Mr. W. White, architect; in 1765, the then existing church having become decayed, a faculty was obtained from the Bishop of Lincoln to take down the nave and tower and out of the materials to erect another tower at the west end of the chancel, and this was accordingly done at the expense of John Grubb esq. at that time patron: the old church extended as far as the stables, the eastern or front wall of which occupies the site of the western end of the church, or tower; the old church door key was dug up under the threshold of the stable in 1812; the lock is still upon the church door. The register of baptisms dates from the year 1663; marriages, 1707; burials, 1637. The living of Ilmire was united to Horsendon by an Order in Council in 1895: Horsendon is a discharged rectory, yearly value £188, in the gift of and held by the Rev. William Edwards Partridge B.A. of Brasenose College, Oxford J.P. who purchased the advowson in 1848 from the trustees of the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos, together with the manor of Horsendon in the manor house of which he now resides: this manor was formerly held by William Morton, Bishop of Ely and afterwards Lord Archbishop of Canterbury and passed from his representatives to the Cottons and Denhams. The Manor House was garrisoned for King Charles by Sir John Denham: from him it passed to the Pentons and afterwards to the Grubb family, who sold it in 1838 to the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos. The Rev William Edwards Partridge B.A., J.P. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is loamy; subsoil, rag. The chief crops are wheat, barley, turnips and mangold wurtzel; there is also good grazing land. The area is 519 acres; rateable value, £527; the population in 1881 was 46.

HORTON is a village and parish in the hundred of Stoke, union of Eton, county court district of Windsor, rural deanery of Burnham, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford; it is one mile and a half from the Wraysbury station on the South Western railway, 2½ from the Great Western railway station at Langley, 3½ east from Windsor and one mile from Colnbrook. A large portion of Colnbrook has been ecclesiastically separated from Horton and made part of the present consolidated chapelry of Colnbrook. The river Colne separates the parish from Middlesex. The church of St. Michael is a very old structure, in the Early English and Perpendicular styles, with fine Norman doorway and Tudor porch, and is supposed to be the mother church of Eton; the western tower, with three bays, contains a clock and 5 bells; it has chancel, nave and a south aisle and was thoroughly restored in 1877—the south aisle rebuilt, the church re-seated with oak benches and the entrance porch and chapel restored; the whole cost was £3,000: the church was re-opened on 2nd June, 1877: Milton's mother, who died in 1637, is buried here, and in the chancel there is a flat stone to her memory with this inscription—"Beneath this stone lie the remains of Sarah the wife of John Milton:" there is a stained window in memory of the Rev. R. G. Foot, 1876. The register dates from the year 1571. The living is a rectory, yearly value £400, derived from land allotted in lieu of tithes, with residence, in the gift of Maj.-Gen. Owen Williams M.P. and held since 1880 by the Rev. Henry Newton M.A. of Emmanuel College, Cambridge. The church estate of 3A. 2R. 16P. with houses produces £75 yearly. There are two charities, the interest of £420; £20 left by Mrs. Gossett and £400 by Mrs. Wagstaff. Milton resided here at one time on his father's estate; the house was pulled down about 1798. An apple tree in the garden of Avery Tyrrell esq. of this place, was planted by Milton, under which he is reported to have written a portion of his works. The principal landowners are Maj.-Gen. Owen Williams M.P. who is lord of the manor, and Avery Tyrrell esq. The soil is loam; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are wheat, oats, barley and roots. The number of acres is 1,610; rateable value, £4,685; the population in 1881, exclusive of the portion in Colnbrook, was 861.

GREAT HORWOOD (or HARWOOD-CUM-SINGLEBOROUGH) is a township, village and parish, 2½ miles north-east from Winslow, 6 south-east from Buckingham, and 6½ south-west from Stony Stratford, in Cottesloe hundred, Winslow union, county court district of Buckingham, rural deanery of Mursley, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. James is an ancient building, comprising chancel, nave, aisles and tower, containing 7 bells and a clock; the windows of the chancel are very fine Decorated and the style of the nave and tower Perpendicular; it contains four piscinæ, with a triple sedile and a brass (date 1487) to the Rev. H. Virgin, and two monuments of the Barker family: the church was thoroughly restored in 1874 and half an acre added to the churchyard at a total cost of £5,445. The register dates from the year 1600. The living is a rectory, tithe rent-charge £445 2s. and 135A. 2R. 30P. of glebe, in the gift of the Warden and Fellows of New College, Oxford, and held since 1839 by the Rev. Simon Thomas Adams M.A. formerly fellow of that college, rural dean of Mursley. There is a Congregational chapel built in 1823, with school: likewise a Primitive Methodist chapel, erected in 1875. The poor's land is 27A. 1R. 3P.; the other charities amount to about £13 a year. The Warden and Fellows of New College, Oxford, are lords of the manor and hold a court baron annually. The landowners are William Selby-Lowndes and Edward W. Selby-Lowndes esqrs. Right Hon. J. G. Hubbard M.P. Egerton Hubbard esq. Rev. S. T. Adams M.A. New College, Oxford, Mr. Samuel Dudley, Mr. R. W. Jones, Mr. G. H. Harrup and others. The soil is stiff clay, with beds of gravel. The entire area is 3,154 acres; rateable value, inclusive of Singleborough, £4,642; the entire population in 1881 was 712.

Singleborough is a hamlet, comprising six lordships, 3 miles north from Winslow and 5 east from Buckingham. The area is 809 acres; rateable value, £1,095; the population in 1881 was 101.

LITTLE HORWOOD is a village and parish, 2½ miles north-east from Winslow and 9½ miles from Buckingham, in Cottesloe hundred, Winslow union, Buckingham county court district, rural deanery of Mursley, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Nicholas is an ancient stone building; it has chancel and nave connected by an arcade of four arches with the south aisle, tower and 5 bells; the church has a hagioscope. The register dates from the year 1568. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £160, in the gift of the Church Patronage Society and held since 1877 by the Rev. Francis Robert Wellard Malpas B.A. of Trinity Coll. Dublin. Philip Dauncey esq. J.P. is lay impropriator and resides at Horwood House, an ancient building, surrounded by pleasant grounds. The church land is about 3 acres, now let for £6 a year. The herd of Alderney cows bred here was considered the finest in England and the butter was forwarded for the use of the Royal household. There is a very good herd here now. W. Selby-Lowndes esq. J.P. of Whaddon Hall, who is lord of the manor, and P. Dauncey esq. J.P. are the principal landowners. The soil is light and clay; subsoil, clay and gravel, but varies greatly in many places. The chief crops are wheat, barley and beans. The area is 1,950 acres; and the population in 1881 was 309.

Wood End is a part of this parish.

HUGHENDEN is a widely scattered parish partly in the hundred of Desborough and partly in the liberty of Brands Fee, which latter lies within the hundred and parliamentary borough of Aylesbury, union and county court district of High Wycombe, rural deanery of Wycombe, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, situate about 2 miles north from High Wycombe in a picturesque spot surrounded by woodland of extraordinary beauty. The church of St. Michael and All Angels, which dated from Norman times, having fallen into decay, was thoroughly restored in 1874-5, after designs by A. W. Blomfield esq.; the nave being entirely rebuilt in rough flint with Bath stone dressings; it consists of chancel, nave, north aisle, south porch, and a tower at the north-west corner, containing 8 bells, two of which date from the time of Edward III. and two from that of Charles II.; some portions of the tower are Early English, others Perpendicular; in the porch is a plain Norman doorway; the roof throughout is new; the chancel has been entirely remodelled, and is separated from the nave by an open wrought-iron screen; there are three stained windows to the memory of Mr. and Mrs. Norris, Sir W. Young and Sir G. Young and Mrs. Reynolds; in the north aisle are several extremely interesting monuments to the de Montfort and Wellesburne families; these include: (1) The effigy of a cross-legged knight in ringed mail beneath a low moulded arch, bearing on his shield the arms of Montfort, and on his breast those of Wellesburne, while on the scabbard of his sword are seven small shields with the arms, as supposed, of Bishopsden, Stafford, Bigod, Mellent, Manderville, Grentmesnil; and on the pillow supporting his head those of de Betun; this figure is believed to represent Richard, youngest son of Simon de Montfort, Earl of Leicester, who fell at Evesham, Aug. 4th, 1265; the date of the tomb being c. 1285; (2) A fine effigy of a knight, with a pointed helmet, and mixed plate and chain armour, probably representing the son of the foregoing Richard de Montfort; around the figure are the arms of de Montfort, Wellesburne and Bishopsden; (3) A well executed, but much mutilated and enmeated figure in a shroud, apparently that of a priest, on a plain altar tomb, raised on steps, and within a deeply recessed arch, at the back of which is a double recessed panel and obliterated shields; there are also three other monuments with figures rudely sculptured in low relief, of which the oldest has been a coffin lid, and exhibits a man in armour, bearing a quartered shield of Montfort, with four smaller ones near his head; the second is somewhat similar, but the third is better executed, and shows the profile of a man in armour, with a mace in his hand and bearing a shield with the arms of Wellesburne; this is conjectured to represent Thomas Wellesburne, burgess for Wycombe in 1477; there is one good brass to Robert Thurloe, priest, 1493, and other memorials to Ellen, Countess of Conyngham, 1806, by G. Garrard R.A. to the family of Widmer, 1782-1803, former owners of Rockholds, and to Sampson Roe, 1786: on the south side of the church are three stained windows to James Williams, his wife Henrietta Catherine, and to Ann, wife of James Walker Williams, of High Wycombe, to Sir William Norris Young, lieut. 23rd Fusiliers, killed at the Alma, September 20th, 1854, aged 21; and his brother, Sir George John Young (Royal Artillery) who died of cholera at Sebastopol, October 22nd, 1854, aged 19; and to James and Sarah Elizabeth Scaright: the cost of the restoration was about £6,300, of which £5,350 was given by James Scaright esq. of Lancaster gate, Hyde park, the remainder being raised by local subscription and grants: the churchyard has been levelled, fenced and tastefully laid out. Since the death of the Earl of Beaconsfield, April 19th, 1881, the interior walls of the chancel have been exquisitely decorated, several fine stained windows inserted, and other valuable gifts bestowed upon the church as memorials to that illustrious statesman; of these, the first, in order of time, consisted of two bells, presented by Robert Warner esq. and dedicated August 20th, 1881, thus completing a peal of 8 bells: the magnificent east window, erected by Lord Rowton, Sir Nathaniel de Rothschild bart. and Sir Philip Rose bart. was dedicated on Sunday, September 4th, 1881, and is remarkable for the richness and subdued delicacy of its colouring; its subject, the "Te Deum," forming the conclusion of a series specially arranged for the windows; and below is an inscription with the names of the donors: on Sunday the 23rd October, in the same year, the beautiful west window, erected by the subscribers to the Hughenden Memorial Fund, was similarly dedicated; this window begins the series of subjects just mentioned, and represents various incidents from old Testament history relating to angels, with figures of archangels, including St. Michael. The mural paintings in the sanctuary, also forming part of the memorial to the late Earl, and contributed from the same fund, were dedicated on Christmas Day, 1881, these beautiful frescoes occupied a number of skilled artists for a considerable period, and may worthily be ranked among the choicest specimens of ecclesiastical art; they include the figures of the four greater prophets, and of the Evangelists, with other figures illustrative of the nine orders of angels, the whole being surrounded and enclosed by gracefully arranged designs of Eastern fruits and flowers; every detail, however minute, is treated typically, and is intended, with the decoration of the church generally, to convey religious teaching, through the medium of art; on the south side of the church a very fine window has been placed by the undergraduates of the University of Oxford, illustrating the appearances of angels during the Ministry, Passion, and subsequent life of Our Lord, beneath which is an inscription on brass, recording its dedication: the decoration of the south wall of the chancel, representing the Adoration of the Magi, has also been completed, and contrasts admirably with the more elaborate work at the east end; other portions of the memorial plan are in course of execution; in the chancel, and near to the seat formerly occupied by Lord Beaconsfield, is the monument erected by Her Majesty the Queen; this is of white Sicilian marble, with a central quatre-foiled panel, enclosing a profile portrait in relief of the late Earl, by Mr. R. C. Belt; above are the arms of the deceased peer, and below, on a tablet surrounded by a wreath of oak leaves, beautifully wrought in marble, is the inscription following:—

TO THE DEAR AND HONORED MEMORY
OF
BENJAMIN, EARL OF BEACONSFIELD,
THIS MEMORIAL IS PLACED BY HIS GRATEFUL SOVEREIGN AND FRIEND, VICTORIA R.I.
"KINGS LOVE HIM THAT SPEAKETH RIGHT."—Proverbs xvi. 13.
FEBRUARY 27, 1882.

By command of the Queen, the banner and other insigna of the Garter from the Earl of Beaconsfield's stall in St. George's chapel, Windsor, have been removed to Hughenden, and placed over the seat formerly occupied by him in the chancel; the family vault of Lord Beaconsfield, in which his body is laid, is at the east end, but outside the church, and against the church wall are three granite slabs commemorating Mary Ann Disraeli, Viscountess Beaconsfield, wife of Rt. Hon. B. Disraeli, ob. Dec. 15th, 1872; James Disraeli esq. third son of Isaac Disraeli, ob. Dec. 3rd, 1858, and Sarah, relict of James Brydges Williams, ob. Nov. 11th, 1863, buried here at her desire, who bequeathed her property to the Earl. The register dates from the year 1552 The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £350 with residence, in the gift of the trustees of the late Earl of Beaconsfield and held since 1869 by the Rev. Henry Blagden M.A. formerly scholar of Trinity College, Cambridge. The Primitive Methodists have chapels at Naphill and Cryers Hill. The Dormer family gave the parish four cottages near the churchyard and Ellen, Countess Conyngham, who owned the manor in 1806, bequeathed £100 to put them in repair, and the interest of £500 to be paid to the poor residing in three of them, the parish clerk to occupy the fourth; the same benevolent lady also left £3,333 Stock, the dividends to be paid annually in sums of £20 each to the vicar of Hughenden and four poor clergymen of Bucks whose livings were respectively less than £100 yearly, she likewise left the interest of £1000 to be distributed in sums of £10 each to poor widows of deceased clergymen of this county: Gregory's charity of £2 yearly is for bread and there is also a sum of £10 yearly from a farm at Towerley, left by a Mrs. K. Pye, for school purposes. The manor of Hughenden was purchased by the Earl of Beaconsfield, and is now held in trust, during the minority of his devisee Coningsby Ralph Disraeli: the Manor House, at present in the occupation of Sir Samuel Wilson, stands on an eminence commanding a fine view of Wycombe Abbey; it is a modernized square building having in the west front the drawing-room in which is a portrait of Her Majesty, a royal gift to the Earl, and one of the Viscountess; the east front looks upon a terrace and contains the library, chiefly rich in historical works: portraits of friends of the late Earl are in the hall and staircase: the well wooded park of 140 acres is watered by a stream and on the crest of a hill is an ornamental obelisk erected to the memory of Isaac D'Israeli, father of the Earl, who resided at the Manor House in the adjacent parish of Bradenham; an inscription to his memory is on one slab and another is a memorial of the Viscountess Beaconsfield. The chief landowners are the trustees of Earl of Beaconsfield, the Rev. the Earl of Buckinghamshire, Sir Charles L. Young bart. John Newman esq. J.P. Major Hewett J.P. the Rev. Thomas Evetts, George Davis Heatley esq. Sir Philip Rose bart. J.P. and Miss Southwell. The soil is chiefly gravel; subsoil, chalk. The chief crops are wheat and barley. The area is 5,751 acres; rateable value, £7,230; the population in 1881 was 1,803.

NAPHILL and NORTH DEAN, where there is a small Baptist chapel, are parts of this parish. Part of GREAT KING'S HILL is included in the ecclesiastical parish of Prestwood.

HULCOTT is a sequestered village and parish in the hundred, union and county court district and parliamentary borough of Aylesbury, rural deanery of Aylesbury, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, nearly 3 miles north-east from Aylesbury, on the borders of Herts. The church of All Saints is an edifice in the Early English and later styles and consists of chancel, nave, south aisle, north porch and a low square wooden belfry turret, surmounted by a slated octagonal broach spire, at the west end, containing 3 bells, one of which is dated 1621; another is inscribed "God save theKing," and the third is plain: the chancel and nave are Decorated, but the piers and arches of the nave and some other parts are plain Early English: there are piscinæ in the chancel and aisle, from which a hagioscope, now blocked, once opened: in the aisle is a plain altar tomb said to be that of Benedict Leigh, one of the lords of the manor, buried in 1547, the inscription of which has been defaced and the brasses removed: a stained east window representing the Crucifixion, the gift of the Rev. Edward Bonus, the rector, has been placed in the chancel with a Latin inscription: the church was restored in 1862-3 under the direction of the late G. E. Street esq. R.A. when the roofs were renewed, the interior refitted with oak benches and the chancel with stalls; the reredos is of stone inlaid with circles of Devonshire marble; the pulpit semi-circular and pierced with open quatrefoils: in removing the plaster from the walls, the entrance to the rood loft was discovered built up in the south-east angle of the nave. The parish register dates from 1537. The living is a rectory, yearly value, gross £330, nett £288, with residence, in the gift of Leopold de Rothschild esq. and held since 1864 by the Rev. Edward Bonus LL.M. and M.A. of Corpus Christi college, Cambridge. The succession of rectors of this parish is traced up to the year 1270. Leopold de Rothschild esq. who is lord of the manor and Sir Nathaniel Mayer de Rothschild bart. M.P. are the principal landowners. The soil is strong clay; subsoil, same. The chief crops are wheat and beans, but the greatest portion of the parish is grazed by dairy stock. The area is 850 acres; rateable value, £1,210; the population in 1871 was 125.

IBSTONE is a parish partly in Oxfordshire and partly in Bucks, 9 miles from High Wycombe, 8½ north from Henley, 9½ north-west from Marlow, in the hundreds of Desborough and Pirton, union and county court district of Wycombe, rural deanery of Wycombe, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Nicholas is a plain building partly Norman, the east window and doorway only retain that character, the chancel and nave are Early English: the turret contains 2 bells: there is a fine old carved pulpit. The register dates from the year 1665. The living is a rectory united with Fingest, joint yearly value £350, in the alternate gift of the Bishop of Oxford and Merton College, Oxford, and held since 1878 by the Rev. Henry Joscelyne M.A. of New Inn Hall, Oxford. Ibstone House, the seat of Samuel Richard Brewis esq. J.P. is a modern stucco building erected on an eminence, having good views of the neighbourhood.

Merton College, Oxford, who hold the manor, are the principal landowners. The soil is chalky; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats. The area is 1,148 acres; rateable value, £1,080; the population in 1871 was 332 and in 1881 was 330.

ILMIRE (or ILMER) is a small retired parish situated on the borders of Oxfordshire, in the hundred of Ashendon, union of Wycombe, county court district of Thame, rural deanery of Aylesbury, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, 3 miles west-north-west from Princes Risborough, 9 south from Aylesbury, 5 east from Thame and 3½ north from the Bledlow station. The church of St. Peter is small, in the Perpendicular style, consisting of chancel, nave, porch and an unsightly wooden belfry containing 3 bells; the chancel is inlaid with encaustic tiles of various colours; the piscina still remains, also the old screen under the chancel arch; the nave is seated with open benches; there is an ancient stone font; in August 1860 the church was re-opened, the chancel having been rebuilt and the nave restored under the superintendence of the late G. E. Street R.A. diocesan architect, at the cost of the Rev. W. E. Partridge. The register dates from about the year 1600. The living, now united with Horsendon, under an Order of Council, November 1865, is a vicarage, yearly value £88, in the patronage of the vicar, the Rev. William Edwards Partridge B.A. of Brasenose College, Oxford, who resides at Horsendon House, and who was instituted in 1833 and purchased the advowson in 1856 from the Earl of Chesterfield, into whose family it passed 100 years ago through the Dormer family. Moreton John Edwin Frewen esq. and Mrs. Raper are owners of the manor and principal landowners. The soil is stiff loam and clay; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, beans and barley. The area is 164 acres; rateable value, £991; the population in 1881 was 63.

IVER is a large parish and scattered village on the Middlesex border, 3½ miles north-north-east from Colnbrook, 2½ south from Uxbridge, in the hundred of Stoke, union of Eton, county court district of Uxbridge, rural deanery of Amersham, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The river Colne flows through the parish, to the eastward of which passes the Grand Junction canal with a branch from Yewsley to Slough. The Great Western railway runs through this parish; the nearest station is West Drayton, distant 2 miles. The church of St. Peter was restored in 1848 at a cost of £2,800; it is in mixed styles, from Early Norman to Perpendicular, and has chancel, clerestoried nave, with two Norman bays on the north side and three Perpendicular bays on the south side, aisles, tower and six bells and a clock; there is a monument to Lady Mary Salter 1631 and the Rev. Edward Ward M.A. 1835 and a memorial stained window to Mary, wife of C. J. H. Tower esq. 1865. The register dates from the year 1505. The living is a vicarage, endowed with £1,723 grant, viz.: Queen Anne, £400; Parliamentary, £1,323; and tithe rent-charge, £39 10s. with residence, yearly value £110, in the gift of Charles Meeking esq. and held since 1835 by the Rev. William Sparrow Ward B.A. of Corpus Christi college, Cambridge. A village hall was opened in 1881 for lectures. A cottage hospital was opened in 1874 for the parishes of Iver, Langley and Denham, with beds for seven patients and is supported by voluntary contributions. The poor's allotments of 37 acres yield £23 16s. yearly for fuel; Sayers' charity of £30, interest of £1,000, is for bread, and others amount to £25 yearly. Iver is a place of some antiquity; a market (long since disused) was granted to Lord Neville in 1351 and confirmed by the Dean and Canons of Windsor in 1461, together with one fair. Courts leet and baron are held every two years. Richings Park, now the seat of Mrs. Meeking, was formerly in the possession of Lord Bathurst, also of the Duchess of Somerset, and was the resort of Pope and the wits of his age; one of the walks is known by the name of Pope's walk. The trustees of the late H. G. Sperling esq. are the lords of the manor. The principal landowners are C. J. H. Tower, Chas. Meeking, Edward Tompson, Edward Lovejoy and Tonman Mosley esqrs. The soil is loamy; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are wheat, oats, beans, barley and clover. This parish is in extent 10½ miles and contains 8½ square miles. The area is 6,149 acres; rateable value, £20,315; the population in 1881 was 2,298.

IVER HEATH is an ecclesiastical parish, formed in 1862 out of a portion of this parish. The church of St. Margaret is a very handsome building of brick, faced with flint, in the Early Decorated style; it has chancel and nave, with low, square embattled tower at the south side of the nave and 2 bells and a clock: there are two stained windows and four stained lancet windows. The register dates from the year 1862. The living is a rectory, yearly value £116 with residence, in the gift of Charles Meeking esq. and held since 1862 by the Rev. George Elton T.A.K.C.L. The area of thi portion of the parish is 2,000 acres; the population in 1881 was 758.

IVINGHOE is a small market town of considerable antiquity, a polling place for the county and a parish, comprising the hamlets of Ivinghoe Aston, Horton, St. Margaret's and parts of Nettleden and Little and Great Seabrook, in the hundred of Cottesloe, union and county court district of Leighton Buzzard, rural deanery of Ivinghoe, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford and is partly encompassed by the Chiltern Hills; it is situate 33 miles from London, 6 south-east from Leighton Buzzard, 3½ north-east from Tring and 9 east from Aylesbury. The Grand Junction canal passes near here. Cheddington Junction, on the London and North Western railway, is the nearest station, 2 miles north-west. The church of St. Mary is a cruciform structure of the Decorated period consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, north and south porches, and a central tower with spire containing a clock and 6 bells, the tenor bell, dated 1628, being inscribed "Sacra manet Christi plebisque religio vana;" the church has a fine timber roof, in parts much enriched with figures of angels; and some of the benches have tall poppy heads: it contains several monuments of the family of Duncombe, formerly the possessors of a seat in the parish, called Barley End House; there is also in the chancel a table tomb, with recumbent effigy in a priest's robes, formerly supposed to represent Henry de Blois, Bishop of Winchester, brother to King Stephen, but now thought to commemorate Peter de Chaseport, rector of the parish from 1241 to 1254: in the south transept is a brass to John and Alice Hungerford, 1594: the pulpit, a richly-carved and ancient piece of cinque-cento workmanship, is of oak and retains its hour-glass stand: a stained east window was erected in 1868 to the memory of the late Earl Brownlow. The register dates from the year 1559. The living is a vicarage, nett yearly value £300 with residence, in the gift of Earl Brownlow and held since 1874 by the Rev. Henry John Rawlinson M.A. of Oriel College, Oxford. The Town Hall is an elegant structure, where petty sessions are held on the third Saturday in every month; the Police Station adjoins. Here is a Baptist chapel erected in 1804 to seat 350; also a Wesleyan chapel. Two cattle fairs are held here, one on the 6th of May and the other on the 17th of October; also a market for the sale of straw plait and other produce, held every Saturday. A great many of the women and children are employed in the plaiting of straw. The charities, by different bequests, amount to about £31 annually, which are given in money to the poor on the first Saturday in November. The church lands produce about £17 a year. The beautiful lawn, the property of Earl Brownlow, that joins the town with the village of Pitstone or Pightlesthorne, has a very rural appearance. According to tradition, one of the Hampdens lost this manor for striking the Black Prince a blow with his racket when they quarrelled at tennis—

"Tring, Wing and Ivinghoe
Hampden of Hampden did forego,
For striking of ye Prince a blow,
And glad he might escapen so."

This tradition has, however, been disproved, the manors in question never having belonged to the Hampdens. A more interesting association connected with this place is the fact that from the above lines Sir Walter Scott took the name of one of the most celebrated of his novels, "Ivanhoe." Earl Brownlow is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Courts baron and leet are held annually for this manor. A large portion of the soil is chalky; subsoil, chalk. The area is 5,564 acres; rateable value, £8,181; the population in 1871 was 1,722.

Horton is a small hamlet belonging to the parishes of Ivinghoe, Edlesborough and Slapton, 2½ miles north-west from Ivinghoe, and half-a-mile north from the Cheddington station on the London and North Western Railway junction. Here is a small Wesleyan chapel.——Letters through Leighton Buzzard.

CARRIER.—William Horne, to Leighton Buzzard, tues

Ivinghoe Aston is a scattered hamlet of the parish of Ivinghoe, 1½ miles north-east. The Wesleyans have a chapel here, to which is attached a Sunday school. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the straw plaiting business. The area is about 1,641 acres.

Day School

St. Margaret's is a small hamlet of Ivinghoe, from which town it is 6½ miles south-east, and about one mile north-west from Great Gaddesden, on the Herts border, consisting of a farm-house and cottages.——Letters through Hemel Hempstead, which is the nearest money order and telegraph office.

Seabrook (divided in two parts, called Great and Little Seabrook) is a hamlet of Ivinghoe, Cheddington and Pitstone, lying between the London and North Western railway and the Grand Junction canal, one mile and a half west from Ivinghoe and one south from the Cheddington station. The soil produces good wheat crops.

Ringshall is a hamlet in this parish, situated about 4 miles south-east from Ivinghoe, on the Herts border.

LITTLE KIMBLE is a village and parish within the parliamentary borough of Aylesbury, having a station on the Aylesbury branch of the Great Western railway, 3 miles west-by-south from Wendover, 2½ north-north-east from Princes Risborough and 5½ south from Aylesbury, in the hundred and county court district of Aylesbury, union of Wycombe, rural deanery of Wendover, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of All Saints is a small and very ancient structure, chiefly in the Decorated style; it was restored and re-seated in 1875 at a cost of £1,200; it consists of chancel, nave, north and south porches and a modern bell-turret containing 2 bells; the chancel window is stained, representing The Ascension; on the north side of the chancel is a stained window to the memory of Samuel Thomas Chapman, formerly rector of this parish, subject, Christ the Light of the World; there is also another beautifully stained window at the west end of the nave and five other windows containing fragments of ancient stained glass; the pulpit and reading-desk are of carved oak and the open seats are oak; on the walls of the nave are some ancient fresco paintings, nearly obliterated; the floor of the chancel contains some ancient figured tiles, much defaced; there are two piscinæ, one in the east wall of the church, the other is placed in the south wall of the nave; there is an ancient font. The register dates from the year 1657; it is very imperfect. The living is a rectory, yearly value £200, derived from about 105 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of trustees, and held since 1862 by the Rev. George William Cruttenden M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge. Here is a Dissenting chapel, which serves for all denominations. The poor's allotment is 1A. 2R. Mrs. Frankland-Russell Astley is lady of the manor. The landowners are Mrs. Frankland-Russell Astley, Sir Astley P. Cooper bart. J. Plaistowe esq. J. Parrot esq. and others. The soil is chiefly loam and stiff clay; subsoil, principally clay. The chief crops are wheat, beans and barley. The area is 841 acres; rateable value, £1,208; the population in 1881 was 161.

LANE END is a village and ecclesiastical parish formed in 1832 out of the parishes of Great Marlow, Hambleden, Fingest and West Wycombe, chiefly situated in the first named, 3 miles south-west from West Wycombe station on the High Wycombe, Aylesbury and Thame branch of the Great Western railway, 5 west from High Wycombe and 4 north-west from Great Marlow, in the county court district of High Wycombe, rural deanery of Wycombe, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of the Holy Trinity, built in 1878 and consecrated by the Lord Bishop of Oxford in the same year, is in the thirteenth century style of Gothic architecture, and is a brick building with flint and bath stone dressings, consisting of chancel, nave and north aisle, and tower containing 6 bells, a vestry and an organ chamber: the roof of the nave is very ancient and was originally brought from Great Marlow, from an old ecclesiastical building near Marlow bridge, and is of the fourteenth century; there are 330 sittings the greater part of which are free: there are two stained windows; one in the north side was transferred from the old church: a new east window has lately been placed in the chancel in memory of the late James Lake esq. F.R.S. by his children: the total cost of the church was £3,000 raised by subscription, including a grant of £200 from the Oxford Diocesan Church Building Society. The register dates from the year 1832. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £300 with residence, in the gift of the rector of Hambleden and held since 1865 by the Rev. James Kershaw Best. There is a Wesleyan chapel built in 1865, the old chapel is now used as the school. The inhabitants are mostly engaged in the manufacture of chairs. There is an iron foundry and agricultural implement works. Wycombe Court, the seat of Professor Stokoe, is a handsome structure in the Mediæval style, standing in a well-wooded park and surrounded by beautiful undulating grounds, it is sheltered on the north by Fining wood and on the east by Widdenton Park wood which is the highest ground in the county, and from its elevated position commands extensive views over Berks and Surrey. Sir William Robert Clayton bart. is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are Elizabeth, Lady Dashwood, of West Wycombe house, and T. Taylor esq. of Great Marlow. The soil is sandy; subsoil, gravelly. The chief crops are wheat and barley. The area is 1,270 acres; the population in 1871 was 1,156.

LANGLEY MARISH (or ST. MARY'S) is a parish and station on the Great Western railway, 2 miles north-east from Slough, 16 from London by rail and 18½ by road, in the hundred of Stoke, union of Eton, county court district of Uxbridge, rural deanery of Burnham, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, and comprises a portion of the town of Colnbrook which is included in the ecclesiastical parish of Colnbrook. The church of St. Mary has a nave of about the year 1200; the north aisle and chancel are of about 1280; it has also a western embattled tower, 5 bells and clock, and 1 stained window and organ: the chancel is separated from the nave by an oak screen. In 1613 Sir John Kedermister, owner of the Langley estate, obtained a grant from the Dean and Canons of Windsor to erect a pew or chapel adjoining the church, and small library, containing books of divinity, which is for the free use of the clergymen of the county and parish: in this chapel is a monument to David Harvey, 1788, Robert Bateson Harvey, 1825, also brass in memory of Thomas Harvey, 1802, Lonisa Harvey, 1823, Sara Richardson, 1824, Sophie Harvey, 1836, Charles Harvey, 1845, Robert Harvey, 1863, Diana Jane Harvey, 1866. In the chancel is a monument with kneeling figures of John Kedermister, wife, 2 sons and 3 daughters, 1558, also Edmund Kedermister, wife, 3 sons and 5 daughters and 4 infants laid by their side, 1607. The register dates from the year 1643. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £270 with vicarage house, in the gift of the Dean and Canons of Windsor and held since 1856 by the Rev. William Dalton Scoones M.A. of Trinity College, Oxford. John Nash esq. is the lay impropriator. There are three sets of almshouses for 12 persons, and numerous charities producing about £100 for distribution. Courts leet and baron are held here annually. Langley Park, the seat of Sir Robert Bateson Harvey bart. M.P., D.L., J.P. was formerly one of the royal parks, and was granted by Charles I. together with the manor of Langley, to Sir John Kedermister, in whose custody it was, and who had previously at his own charge built the chief lodge therein; the present mansion is a spacious stone building, erected by the second Duke of Marlborough in 1755, from whom Sir R. B. Harvey bart. grandfather of the present owner, purchased the estate in 1788: it contains a fine suite of rooms and large entrance hall and a number of valuable pictures, amongst others a full-length portrait of Mrs. Siddons by Sir Joshua Reynolds, Lady Hamilton by Romney, and a large collection by Canaletti; there are also two interesting battle pieces, Ramillies and Bouchain, formerly the property of the Duke of Marlborough; the mansion stands in the centre of a varied and finely timbered park of about 300 acres, containing a lake, a noble avenue of oaks and some remarkably fine cedars and stocked with deer. The Black Park situated on rising ground at the northern extremity of Langley Park, comprises 530 acres and is almost entirely covered with firs, having a few sequestered walks cut through it, with a beautiful lake, and presents many of the beauties of Alpine scenery; it is the property of Sir R. B. Harvey. Sir Robert Bateson Harvey bart. M.P., D.L., J.P. who is lord of the manor, John Nash esq. and Charles Mecking esq. are the principal landowners. The soil is loam and clay: subsoil, clay and gravel. The chief crops are oats, beans and barley.

The area is 3,895 acres; rateable value, £17,781; the population in 1881 was 2,185.

LATHBURY is a parish and village pleasantly situated 5 miles north-east from the Wolverton station and three-quarters of a mile from Newport Pagnell, in the hundred, union and county court district of Newport Pagnell, rural deanery of Newport Pagnell, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The river Ouse encompasses the parish on three sides and separates it from Newport Pagnell and is crossed by a stone bridge of three arches and the parish is connected with Sherington by another bridge also of three arches. The church of All Saints is a stone structure of the Norman and later periods, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, south porch and a low western tower of Norman date, erected about A.D. 1120, with battlements added at a later period: the south aisle is of the time of Henry II. and the rest of the church belongs to the reign of Edward III.: one of the pillars on the south side of the nave exhibits a curious carving of an Oriental character, the design for which was perhaps brought home by some crusading knight: another Norman pillar in the south aisle has a capital with grotesque figures of birds pecking at foliage: a flat carved slab, representing an attack made by the serpent or evil spirit upon some animal, was found in 1869, carefully embedded in one of the square piers of the nave: the steps to the rood loft are in good preservation and there is a low side-window: there are sedilia and piscina and some good fourteenth-century glass in the south window of the chancel: in the nave and aisles and to a slight extent in the chancel are remains of mural paintings in "tempera," of the fourteenth and later centuries to the seventeenth century: brasses are recorded here to Richard Davies of Kynant, Montgomery, gent. 1661 and to Mrs. Mary Davies, 1686, wife of Isaiah Davis, rector of this parish and son of Richard Davies abovenamed. The church was thoroughly restored in 1869. The register of baptisms and burials dates from the year 1690; marriages, 1754. The living is a rectory, yearly value £400 with residence, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Christ Church, Oxford and held since 1838 by the Rev. Henry Bull M.A. of Christ Church, Oxford and rural dean of Newport Pagnell and honorary canon of Christ Church, Oxford. Lathbury House, the residence of Charles St. Quintin esq. is a handsome stone building situated in a small park, and has a fine lawn and shrubberies. Mary Viscomtess Hood, who is lady of the manor and Colonel Long are the principal landowners. The soil is gravel; subsoil, limestone. The chief crops are wheat, barley and roots. The area is 1,294 acres; rateable value £2,274; the population in 1881 was 121.

Parish Clerk, Robert Gee.

LATIMER is an ecclesiastical parish formed in 1868 out of the parish of Chesham, from which town it is 3½ miles south-east, 5½ from Rickmansworth, 3½ north-east from Amersham, situate on the borders of Herts and on the river Chess, in the county court district of Chesham. The church of St. Mary Magdalene is a structure in the Gothic style, built in 1841, at the cost of the late Lord Chesham, from designs by Mr. Blore and rebuilt in 1867 from the designs of the late Sir G. G. Scott R.A.: the work including the addition of an eastern apse, transepts and the lengthening of the nave at the west end by about 13 feet, beside the erection of a vestry and organ chamber on the north side of the chancel: there is also a tower with spire, and the chancel has a credence and stone sedilia on both sides and has been fitted, as well as the whole church, with new benches: the prayer desk and lectern were the gift of the rector and the kneeling carpet was worked and presented by Lady Chesham and other ladies: it has three stained memorial windows in the apse to the memory of Charles, first Baron Chesham; Catherine Lady Chesham and the Hon. Algernon Cavendish, son of the present Lord Chesham and three others on the south side: in the old chapel was a monument erected by George, Duke of Devonshire, to Miss Campion, a young actress, who died 19th May, 1706, aged 19: the land required for the extension of the churchyard, was given by Lord Chesham. The register of baptisms dates from the year 1782; marriages, 1755; burials, 1784; the previous registers are at Chesham. The living is a rectory, united with the vicarage of Flaunden, Herts, yearly value £300 with residence, in the gift of Lord Chesham and others and held by the Rev. Bryant Burgess M.A. of Exeter College, Oxford, surrogate and rural dean of Amersham. Latimer House, the seat of Lord Chesham, is a large building of red brick with stone dressings, in the Elizabethan style, and stands in a well-wooded park of 800 acres, through which runs the river Chess. Lord Chesham is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is gravel, flint and chalk; subsoil, gravel and chalk. The chief crops are wheat and barley. The area is 900 acres; rateable value, £2,262; the population in 1881 was 203.

LAVENDON is a parish and large village on the borders of Bedfordshire, 3 miles north-east from Olney, 9½ west from Bedford, 12 from Northampton and 8 north-east from Newport Pagnell, in the hundred, union and county court district of Newport Pagnell, rural deanery of Newport Pagnell, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Mary is a structure of high antiquity, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, north porch and a tower reputed to be of Saxon origin, containing 5 bells: the east window and the easternmost on the south side of the chancel are Perpendicular; under the latter are three plain seats and on the same side is a Perpendicular piscina: the chancel arch is plain: the south arcade of the nave consists of three acute but plain arches springing from round piers with square imposts: the arches in the northern arcade are similar, but less lofty and all of Transition Norman character: in the south aisle is a recessed niche and a piscina: the south doorway is Early English, with a Perpendicular porch and parvise over it: the font is octagonal, with panelled tracery and flowers on the sides of the basin: there are mural tablets in memory of two former rectors, dated respectively 1654 and 1670 and inscribed brasses to Katherine, wife of Thomas Newton esq. 1680; and to James, eldest son of Thomas Newton esq. and barrister of the Inner Temple, 1690: there are also two stained windows, one in the east of the chancel, given by Mr. Benjamin S. Brookes, of the Grange, the other given by Mr. H. Coles: the church was thoroughly restored in 1855 at a cost of £800, under the direction of W. Butterfield esq. architect. The register dates from the year 1574. The living is a rectory with Cold Bradfield annexed, joint yearly value £284 with residence, in the gift of the trustees of the late Francis Larken Soames esq. and held by the Rev. George Pochin Soames M.A. of Cains College, Cambridge. The Baptists and Primitive Methodists have chapels here. In this parish was an abbey of Premonstratension (Pratum monstratum) monks founded in the reign of Henry II. by John de Bidun, in honour of St. John the Baptist. At the Dissolution, there were 11 canons, 20 servants and 8 inferior servants and the revenues were estimated at £79 13s. 8d.; the building appears to have become ruinous before 1534, but the bells and lead from the roof, realised over £73: the abbey church is said to have stood in a close above the house, but no remains now exist: Joan of Bretagne, Lady Bassett of Drayton, sister of John, Duke of Brittany, who died in 1403, both directed their interment to be in the chancel of the abbey church. The rent of about 9 acres of land and three cottages was left by an unknown donor for the repairs of the church and amounts to about £24 yearly. B. S. Brookes, esq. is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are George Farrer esq. B. S. Brookes esq. and Charles Anthony Chester esq. The soil is mixed; subsoil, stone and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and turnips. The area is 2,320 acres; rateable value, £3,596; the population in 1881 was 783.

LECKHAMSTED (or LEKESHAMPSTEAD) is a parish on the borders of Northants, in the hundred, county court district and union of Buckingham, rural deanery and archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, 3½ miles north-east-by-north from Buckingham. A feeder of the Ouse flows through the parish. The church of St. Mary is an ancient structure, consisting of chancel, nave, north aisle, south porch with western tower and 3 bells: there are three sedilia and a piscina within the communion rails: affixed to a slab are effigies in brass of three children, with a Latin inscription to Reginald Tylney esq. who died in 1506; in the north aisle is a full-length recumbent figure of a knight in armour. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is a rectory, yearly value £517 with residence, in the gift of Mr. S. Tompkins and held since 1883 by the Rev. Herbert Chilton Tompkins M.A. of New College, Oxford. The Rectory, erected in 1836, is a handsome residence, situated on an eminence and surrounded by 9 acres of meadow and shrubbery. Henry William Bemsderk esq. who is lord of the manor, Richard Cotton Cavendish, William Hall esqrs. and Lord Penrhyn are the principal landowners. The soil is mixed, clay and gravel; subsoil, various. About two-thirds of the land is pasture, the remainder arable; there are about 103 acres of woodland. The area is 2,493 acres; rateable value, £3,093; the population in 1831 was 340.

LINSLADE is a parish adjoining Leighton Buzzard, bounded on the east by the river Ousel, which separates the counties of Bedford and Buckingham; it is in the hundred of Cottesloe, union and county court district of Leighton Buzzard, rural deanery of Ivinghoe, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Barnabas is a stone building, erected in 1849 and consisting of chancel with a vestry opening into it on the south side, nave, north porch and a south aisle and tower, added in 1858; the fine peal of bells from the old church have been hung in the new tower and the chancel has been enlarged. The register dates from the year 1690. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £170, net £157, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1880 by the Rev. Elgood George Punchard B.D. of New Inn Hall, Oxford, and surrogate. The old church of St. Mary, a building of the Decorated and Perpendicular periods, is now only used for burials and occasionally for divine worship in summer; it consists of chancel, nave, south porch and a western tower; in the churchyard are the remains of a cross; the church with the manor house and two cottages form the old village of Linslade. Here is a Baptist chapel, erected in 1843, also a Primitive Methodist chapel. The village, now rapidly assuming the proportions of a town, is built contiguous to the Leighton railway station on the London and North Western railway and adjoining the town of Leighton Buzzard. The Grand Junction canal passes through here, occupying 26 acres of the parish. The petty sessions for the Ivinghoe division of Cottesloe hundred are held here. There are two small charities, left under the wills of Mrs. Peacock and Sir A. Corbet bart. and producing £3 yearly, which is distributed in money to the poor. Here is a Police Station with three cells for prisoners, a house for the inspector and police court. The lord of the manor and principal landowner is Sir Arthur D. Hayter bart. The soil is principally sand; subsoil, sandstone and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, oats and barley. The area is 1,693A. 1R. 21P.; rateable value, £12,841; the population in 1871 was 1,633; and in 1881, 1,724.

LONG CRENDON is a large and scattered parish 9½ miles south-west from Aylesbury, 2 north from Thame 4½ south-east from Brill and 13 east from Oxford, in the hundred of Ashendon, union and county court district of Thame,rural deanery of Waddesdon, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford; the river Thame bounds the parish on the east and south and separates it from Oxfordshire. The church of St. Nicholas is a large cruciform stone structure consisting of chancel, nave, aisles and a square embattled tower, in which is a fine peal of 8 bells; the original style of architecture is Early English and the additions are in the Decorated style; in the chancel is a handsome table tomb to Sir John Dormer, who died in 1626, which has been restored at a considerable expense out of the charity funds by order of the judge of the county court, also two other monuments and brasses, to the Cannon family, dated 1459. The register dates from the year 1562. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £300 with residence, in the gift of Mr. Richard Coltman and held since 1821 by the Rev. Thomas Hayton M.A. of Queen's College, Oxford. There is a Baptist chapel founded in 1802; the present building was erected at a cost of £1,100; the Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have also chapels. The village was once noted for its needle manufactories. There are several charities, amounting together to upwards of £60 a year, which are distributed by the trustees according to a prescribed scheme. In the parish, on the bank of the Thame,are the remains of Notley Abbey,once belonging to the monks of the order of St. Augustine; it was built and endowed by Walter Giffard, the second Earl of Buckingham, and Emengard, his wife, in the year 1162, and dedicated to the Virgin Mary and St. John the Baptist; the chapel has been desecrated and converted into a barn and piggery; round the cornice of an ancient room in the farm-house is the Staffordshire knot, several times repeated, with the inscription in black letter, "En lui plaisance." The estate has been for three generations in the possession of the Reynolds family, who still reside there. The lords of the manor are All Souls College, Oxford, the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, the Duke of Buckingham and Mr. John Dodwell. Courts leet and baron are held annually. The principal landowners are Mr. John Dodwell, the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, Capt. Robert Stone, Henry Reynolds esq. All Souls College, Mrs. Stone and Messrs William and John Crook. The soil is loam and clay; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley and beans, clover is largely grown; the land is about two-thirds arable and one-third pasture. The area is 3,120 acres; rateable value, £5,572; and the population in 1871 was 1,365.

LOUGHTON is a parish and village 3½ miles south-east from Stony Stratford, 4½ from Bletchley station, in the hundred, union and county court district of Newport Pagnell, rural deanery of Buckingham, archdeaconry of Bucks and diocese of Oxford. The London and North Western railway has a siding for goods here. The church of All Saints is an ancient structure, chiefly in the Perpendicular style; it has chancel, nave, south aisle and western tower containing 4 bells: in the chancel are tablets to the Crane and Athawes families, and above the communion table is a painting, by Gonzalles, of the Two Disciples at Emmaus, which was presented by the Rev. John Athawes, a former rector: an organ was erected in 1864. The register dates from the year 1707. The living is a rectory, endowed with about 300 acres of glebe, net income £233 with residence, in the gift of Trinity College, Cambridge, and held by the Rev. Robert Charles Green M.A. formerly fellow of that college. A rectory house was built in 1868 on a site bequeathed with 33 acres by the Rev. John Athawes. There is a small Baptist chapel. The parish possesses three charities, one is called Parke's charity, founded by a former rector, yielding about £40 a year, half of which is appropriated to the repair of the church fabric and other church purposes and the other half to the poor: another is called Binyon's charity, yielding £5 a year, for the apprenticing of poor boys: a third founded by Mrs. Whitworth, of £3 28. 6d. yearly, to help to maintain a clothing and coal club. Mrs. Whitworth is lady of the manor, the rector, the Stratford and Broughton charity trustees, the Rev. Hugh Smith, the incumbent of Markyate Street for the time being, Mr. Samuel Hines and Mrs. Mercer are the chief landowners. The soil is strong clay; subsoil, limestone. The chief crops are wheat, oats, barley and beans. The area is 1,535 acres; rateable value, £9,315; the population in 1881 was 324.

LUDGERSHALL is a large village and parish on the Oxfordshire border, 6 miles south-east from Bicester, 2 north-east from Brill and about 12 north-west from Aylesbury, in the hundred of Ashendon, union of Aylesbury, county court district of Bicester, rural deanery of Waddesdon, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The 'Akeman' Street passes through the north of the parish. Two brooks, whose source is on Muzwell hill, flow through this parish. The church of St. Mary is an ancient structure, erected in the early portion of the fourteenth century, principally in the Early English and Decorated styles, and consists of chancel, nave and aisles, with a square embattled tower at the west end in which are 5 bells: the inner arch of the south porch is deeply recessed and has a shield at each corner: at the entrance of the south aisle is an ancient Norman font: in the chancel is a brass to Anne Englishe, wife of Mihil Englishe, who was sheriff of London in 1523 and died 29th May, 1565, at the age of 95 years. The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a rectory, yearly value £450 with residence, in the gift of Edward Grenville Gore-Langton esq. and held since 1877 by the Rev. Henry Stretch M.A. of Hertford College, Oxford. The rectory is pleasantly situated opposite the church. The celebrated John Wyclif was rector of this parish A.D. 1368-1374. The Wesleyans have a chapel here. W. Spiers' charity of £8 yearly is for coats and gowns given annually to six of the most deserving aged men and women in the parish. There was formerly an alien priory annexed to the monastery of Santingfield-in-Picardy; at the suppression it was given to King's College, Cambridge. The Duke of Buckingham and the Rev. Henry Stretch M.A. are the principal landowners. Thos. Martin esq. is lord of the manor. The soil is loam and clay: subsoil, clay. The area is 2,430 acres; rateable value, £2,936; the population in 1881 was 422.

KINGSWOOD is a hamlet, formerly forest land, situated about 3 miles from the parish church, included in the Royalty of Brill and appropriated to the Crown; the area is 291 acres; the population in 1881 was 25. Tetchwick, anciently called Touching-Wyke, is also a hamlet.

Letters received through Aylesbury at 10.30 a.m.; dispatched at 4.15 p.m. & on sundays at 10.15 a.m. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Brill

LUFFIELD ABBEY, formerly extra-parochial, is now a parish, partly in Northamptonshire, 7 miles north from Buckingham, in the Buckingham union and county court district.. A Benedictine priory was founded here in 1124 and owing to its poverty was suppressed in 1494 and annexed to the collegiate church at Windsor: no traces of it now remain. R. Loder esq. M.P. is lord of the manor and sole landowner. The soil is clay and gravel; subsoil, various. About two-thirds of the land is pasture; the remainder arable. The area is 125 acres; rateable value £241; and the population in 1881 was 5.

MAIDS MORETON is a parish within the parliamentary borough of Buckingham, one mile north-east from Buckingham, in the hundred, union and county court district of Buckingham, rural deanery and archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The river Ouse and a branch of the Grand Junction canal pass through the parish. The church of St. Edmund was built about the year 1450 by two maiden sisters, daughters of the Lord Peover, hence the name Maids Moreton; it is a very elegant structure, consisting of chancel, nave with two porches and western embattled tower containing 5 bells: the style is Perpendicular: the windows were once filled with stained glass, the greater part of which was demolished by the soldiery of Cromwell, who otherwise damaged and profaned the building: there is still the remnant of a representation of the Last Supper on the south wall of the chancel, under a richly carved canopy; the figures, however, have been sadly defaced: the roofs of the porches and tower entrance and vestry room are richly groined in stone: in the middle of the nave is a large marble on which were the effigies of the Maiden sisters in brass, but at present nothing but two small escutcheons of the fleur-de-lis remain: there are several ancient monuments and brasses; on the north side is a plain white marble in memory of the Hon. Mrs. Penelope Verney, first wife of Hon. Richard Lord Willoughby de Brooke, August 31, 1718; the inscription is as follows:—

"Under this stone doth lye
As much virtue as could die,
Which, when alive, did vigor give
To as much beauty as could live."

The chancel was restored and beautified in 1882, at a cost of upwards of £300: the whole of the floor was laid with Godwin's encaustic tiles; and the magnificent sedilia, one of the chief features of the church, were restored with new stone carving: the old stained glass has been collected from the windows and worked into the east window: open oak benches replace the old deal pews: and a new carved oak pulpit has been presented by the Bishop of Winchester (Dr. Harold Browne), as a memorial of his parents, who are buried under the tower. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is a rectory, net yearly value £400, in the gift of Mrs. Andrewes Uthwatt and held since 1877 by the Rev. Bolton Waller Johnstone M.A. of Trinity College, Dublin. Here is a Wesleyan chapel erected 1869. There are two charities, the interest of £158 2s. 6d. and £164 3s. 9d. £3 per Cent. Consols, the former to be given in bread to the poor on Sundays, the latter for apprenticing poor children of the parish. The poor's allotment consists of 26 acres of pasture land in lieu of "common rights," let at £94 a year. The Duke of Buckingham, who is lord of the manor, All Souls College, Oxford and Mrs. Uthwatt are the principal landowners. The soil is clay and gravel; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley and beans. The area is 1,298 acres; rateable value £3,057; the population in 1881 was 448.

Parish Clerk, Richard Nicholls.

GREAT MARLOW is a parliamentary borough and town, and station on the Great Western railway, 35 miles from London, 5¼ south-west from High Wycombe, 25 south-east from Oxford, 5 north from Maidenhead, 7 east from Henley and 3 west from station on the High Wycombe, Aylesbury and Thame branch of the Great Western railway at Bourne End, from which runs the line to this town; it is in the hundred of Desborough, union of Wycombe, county court district of High Wycombe, rural deanery of High Wycombe, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. It is pleasantly situated on the Thames adjoining extensive beech woods, and the surrounding scenery is remarkable for its beauty. The bridge over the river is on the suspension principle and connects the town with Bisham, Berks. Great Marlow formerly returned two members to Parliament, but by "The Representation of the People Act 1867," it now sends one only. The borough comprises Great and Little Marlow, Medmenham and Bisham (Berks.). The church of All Saints, rebuilt in 1834 on the site of the old church, on the bank of the river, is a noble structure in the Later English style of architecture, comprising a chancel and nave without aisles, and a fine lofty tower with crocketed spire containing a peal of 8 bells; it has a fine-toned organ; the pulpit is very handsome, on pillars of marble; the chancel was erected in 1876 and contains a handsome reredos and five stained windows, and the floor is paved with encaustic tiles; there are several tablets to the Clayton, Cocks and Norris families. In the churchyard is a lofty monument to Henry Hugh O'Donel Clayton esq. who died in 1857. Various alterations and improvements have been carried out in the church during the years 1881-2, comprising the removing of the galleries, addition of new vestry and south porch and the erection of pillars and arches in the nave ready to receive a new roof when the funds are forthcoming, and new gas fittings throughout the building: the improvements will be continued until the restoration is completed. The register dates from the year 1592. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £800, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford, and held since 1881 by the Rev. Arthur Fearon, St. John's College, Cambridge, and T.A.K.C.L. The Bishop of Oxford is owner of the great tithes, amounting to £670 yearly. The chapel of ease of the Holy Trinity, a stone building, consecrated in 1852, has chancel, nave, north aisle, bell turret with 1 bell, and a carved pulpit of Caen stone; on the south side of the nave is a handsome alabaster and marble monument to Colonel Alexander Higginson, who died in 1855: the chancel walls and roof are prettily decorated, one mural painting representing the presentation of the infant Christ in the Temple: the east window is stained and represents scenes in the life of our Lord, and there are two other stained windows on the south side of the chancel; the reredos is composed of alabaster and Caen stone with panels of gold and coloured mosaic; the chancel is paved with encaustic tiles; there is a stained window on the south side of the nave in memory of Jemima Anne Cocks: the large west window is also stained, and represents eight figures of saints of life size. The Catholic church dedicated to St. Peter, in St. Peter street, is a Gothic flint and stone building, from the designs of the elder Pugin, opened in 1846, founded by C. R. Scott Scott-Murray esq.: it has chancel, nave and north aisle, lady chapel and small spire containing 1 bell; the pulpit and font are of Caen stone; the chancel has a handsome stained window and reredos: on the south side of the nave is a canopied memorial to members of the family of Scott-Murray, whose vault is beneath; the lady chapel contains a stained window, and there are also two on each side of the nave, the remaining windows being partly stained; there is a pretty cemetery adjoining and also a convent and schools built by the younger Pugin. Ebenezer Baptist Chapel, Dean street, was erected in 1855 and has 150 sittings; the Congregational chapel, Oxford road, erected in 1768, was restored and reseated in 1863 and has 500 sittings; the Primitive Methodists have a chapel in Chapel street and the Wesleyans one in Spittal street. A Blue Coat school was founded by Sir W. Borlase (in memory of his son, M.P. for Marlow) in the year 1624 to provide education in reading, writing and arithmetic for 24 poor boys, and instructions in lacemaking for 24 poor girls, from the parishes of Great Marlow, Little Marlow and Medmenham. The education was carried on under the lines provided by his will until the year 1878, when the Charity Commissioners by a new scheme reorganized it as a second-grade grammar school: there are twelve foundation scholarships open to boys who have been educated in any of the elementary schools in Great Marlow, Little Marlow and Medmenham; an exhibition of £30 a year is also attached to this school: the course of education includes reading, writing and arithmetic, geography and history, English grammar, composition and literature, mathematics, Latin, French, natural science, drawing, drill and vocal music: it will hold 80 boys: the income from endowment is about £150 yearly, derived from land. The National schools comprise boys' school on the Causeway, girls' and infant schools in St. Peter's street and infants' school in Oxford lane. The boys' school was erected in 1851, and has an average attendance of 112; the girls' and infants' schools in St. Peter's street were erected in 1869 for 130 girls and 150 infants, and each have an average attendance of 100; the infant school in Oxford lane was erected for 130 children, and has an average attendance of 100. There is an endowment of £30 yearly for the boys' and girls' Sunday school, derived from funds invested for that purpose by members of the Wethered family. There are considerable charities distributed to the poor. Loftin's charity, left June 7th, 1759, by the late William and Benjamin Loftin esqrs., of Great Marlow, a farm known as Copy Green, and a sum of £308 2s. 8d. in the £3 per Cent. Consols for the apprenticing of 24 poor boys; also six almshouses, founded and endowed by John Brinkhurst esq. in 1608 for poor widows, with a weekly allowance of three shillings to each and a small piece of garden ground; the charity of Mrs. Peer Williams, amounting to about £45 a year, is distributed to the necessitous at Christmas in sums of five shillings each. Thomas Wethered esq. who died in 1815, gave the rents of two houses and his heir-at-law gave £200 £3 per Cent Consols for blankets to the poor at Christmas. Mrs. Sarah Wethered, in 1852, gave £700 £3 per Cent Consols to be given in beef to the poor widowers and widows at Christmas. Susannah Hone, in 1853, gave £190 14s. 2d. £3 per Cent. Consols, the dividend to be distributed by the vicar and churchwarden at Christmas to twelve poor men and twelve poor women. The Town Hall, situated at the top of High street, erected in 1807, is a stone building and has a turret and clock; the basement forms a market place for butchers, where also the Volunteer Fire Brigade keep their engine; the upper room is frequently used for assemblies and other public purposes, but it belongs to the Crown Hotel adjoining, and is generally in use as a billiard room. A police court and station was built in Trinity road in 1869 in which the county magistrates hold petty sessions. Here is a paper mill and the brewery of Messrs. Wethered, employing many hands, and a chair factory; lace, embroidery, satin stitch and baby-linen work are also extensively carried on. The manufacture of skewers for the London and other markets affords employment to numerous families. A fair for cattle is held on the 29th and 30th of October, which is generally well attended. A Literary and Scientific Institution was established here in 1853, which is patronised by the principal inhabitants; it contains 1,000 volumes of useful and standard works, newspapers and periodicals, with London and Provincial Directories; visitors are allowed admission for fourteen days on the introduction of one of the subscribers; there is also a lecture room in St. Peter's street. A savings bank is held fortnightly at the National schoolroom. The poet Shelley resided here in 1818. The Railway hotel and the 'Crown' are the principal hotels; the 'George and Dragon' and Greyhound Commercial Inn are much frequented by anglers in the summer and the fishing season. There is a substantial stone lock on the river. There are several good residences on the banks of the Thames. Amongst them are Harleyford House, the seat of Sir William Robert Clayton bart. D.L., J.P.: this was built in 1715 and is of red brick of the style of the reign of Queen Anne, situated on the north bank of the Thames, at the foot of a well-timbered park; in the rear of the house is a noble terrace overlooking the river and some fine woodland scenery: it contains some of the best productions of Sir Peter Lely, also family paintings by Sir Thomas Lawrence, Sir William Beechey and Sir Godfrey Kneller, and among the collection is a life-sized painting of Sir Robert Clayton, Lord Mayor of London in 1680: the present baronet has greatly improved the cottages on his estate. The Croft, the seat of Major-General George Wentworth Alexander Higginson C.B., J.P. west of the town, is very ancient, and in the entrance hall are many trophies of war; the arms of King Henry VIII. bearing date 1555, were visible on a painted window here. Remnantz, a little to the west of the town, the property of Thomas Owen Wethered esq. and the residence of Mrs. Fenwick, is a noble pile of building; the clock and bell tower are very ancient, as is also a remarkable yew hedge in a well-wooded park south of the house; this house was formerly occupied as the Royal Military College, established at Marlow in 1799 and removed to Sandhurst in 1811. Seymour Court, the residence of Thomas Owen Wethered esq. J.P. is one mile north of the town, situated on an eminence, and has been enlarged by its present proprietor: this is said to have been the birthplace of Lady Jane Seymour, one of the queens to Henry VIII. Highfields, the seat of Peter Borgnis esq. beautifully situated on an eminence commanding extensive views of the Thames, Bisham Abbey and fine woodland scenery, is surrounded by extensive and well laid-out pleasure grounds, planted with shrubs and evergreens. Spinfield, the seat of Major James Simpson Carson, is situated on a commanding height, having views of Bisham Abbey on the south-west and Cookham on the south-east; the style is Italian, and the north or principal entrance hall is tesselated; the south entrance overlooks a well laid-out lawn; the garden contains a fine conservatory and greenhouse well filled with choice exotics. Court Garden, now unoccupied, is shrouded in elms and evergreens; and Thames Bank, the handsome seat of Thomas Somers Cocks esq. D.L., J.P. is pleasantly situated on the banks of the Thames; the house has a south aspect, the drawing-room, library and anteroom facing the river: the part of the river which lies immediately above and below this is considered the most beautiful portion, and the abundance of sport afforded has always rendered it a favourite resort to all the lovers of angling, while the salubrity of the air, combined with numerous local advantages, has made it the resort of the highest classes of society. Sir William Robert Clayton bart. D.L., J.P. lord of the manor, Maj.-Gen. Owen Williams M.P., J.P. Thomas Wethered and Sons, Major-General Higginson C.B., J.P. Mrs. Hammond, Major Carson, the Ecclesiastical Commissioners and University College, Oxford, are principal landowners. The soil is flint, chalk, gravel and loam; subsoil, various. The area is 6,333 acres; rateable value, £19,501; the population in 1881 was 4,764 of the parish and 6,772 of parliamentary borough.

LITTLE MARLOW is a parish within the parliamentary borough of Great Marlow, in the hundred of Desborough, union and county court district of Wycombe, rural deanery of Wycombe, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, one mile and a half from Great Marlow market place; it is a widely scattered place, with a few farms and shops and bounded on the south by the Thames. The church of St. John the Baptist is a plain edifice consisting of chancel, nave, aisles and a western tower containing 6 bells, it was originally erected in 1190, but of the earlier building the Early English tower and chancel only remain; the nave and aisles, re-built in 1430, were reseated with open benches, an organ placed in the south aisle and the church carefully restored in 1866; a gallery and high square pews being removed, the timber roof of the chancel opened and two very elegant Early English windows in the chancel restored; the east window was also filled with stained glass and there are now three other stained windows: there are many marble tablets to the Nugent, Chase and Warren families and an altar tomb with brasses to Nicholas Ledwick 1430. The register of baptisms dates from 1562; marriages and burials 1559, is the oldest in the rural deanery and quite perfect; it also includes the baptisms and burials of Hedsor till about 1590. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £155 with residence, in the gift of Samuel Birch LL.D. and held since 1882 by the Rev. Arthur Hippisley Smith, formerly an officer in the army. There are charities of £24 yearly value left by Sir George Nugent and Messrs. Allanson and Birch, for distribution in bread and clothing. There was in this parish a small convent of Benedictine nuns, founded by Geoffrey Lord Spencer, in the reign of Richard I. in honour of the Virgin; Browne Willis describes the hall and chapel, which in his time were still standing; the hall, 60 feet in length, was pulled down in 1740, in its windows were the arms of King John, as Earl of Gloucester and of the families of Bernard and Cawodley: there are now no remains of the conventual buildings, which stood close to the river Thames, where the watercourse forms a bend to the north, upon a low lying piece of ground now comprised between Spade Oak Wharf, Coare's End, and Well End, which latter place seems to perpetuate the ancient title of the nunnery "de Fontibus de Merlaw." In 1534 the revenues of this abbey were valued at £23 3s. 7d. and it was then given to Bisham Abbey. The Manor House, the seat of John Pattison Ellames esq. J.P. is an ancient building, partly Elizabethan, standing in its own grounds on the north bank of the Thames; the south front overlooks well laid out pleasure grounds and contains many noble and ornamental trees. Westhorpe House, the residence of George Jackson esq. is a handsome modern building, situated in park-like grounds containing several noble cedar trees and surrounded by well laid-out pleasure grounds. J. P. Ellames esq. who is lord of the manor and Lord Carrington are the principal landowners. The soil is chalk, flint and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, and there is much woodland abounding with beech trees. WELL END and a great portion of Flackwell Heath are in this parish. The area is 3,430 acres; rateable value, £4,687; the population in 1881 was 976.

MARSH GIBBON is a parish on the borders of Oxfordshire, in a hilly district, 4½ miles east-north-east from Bicester, 9 south-west from Buckingham and 1 south from Marsh Gibbon and Poundon station on the Oxford and Bletchley branch of the London and North Western railway, in the hundred, union and county court district of Buckingham, rural deanery of Claydon, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of St Mary is an ancient structure consisting of chancel, nave, aisles and transepts and square tower containing 5 bells and a clock: the chancel was restored by the late rector in 1860; there are three piscinæ in the transepts and monuments to the Guy, Horwood and Townsend families: in 1880 the church was restored by subscription at a cost of £2,000, with new roof, the north aisle added and the tower rebuilt. The register dates from the year 1576. The living is a rectory, tithe rent charge £500 with 118 acres of glebe, nett yearly value £600 with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1869 by the Rev. Edward Molloy Holmes LL.B. of Trinity College, Dublin, rural dean of Claydon and surrogate. Here is a capacious Congregational chapel erected in 1824. Sheppard's charity of £34 yearly, founded in 1847, is for education, and there is another sum, the rent of a field in the parish of Piddington, yielding about £15 yearly, left by an unknown donor for apprenticing. A piece of land of about 5 acres was awarded under the Inclosure Act, 1841, as recreation ground and under the same Act another field was set apart, the rent of which is laid out in supplying coal to the poor. Dr. Acland, of Oxford, is lord of the manor, and the trustees of the Ewelme almhouses, Oxfordshire, are the principal landowners. The soil is clay; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, beans and oats; the land is about one-third arable and two-thirds pasture. The area is 2,752 acres; rateable value, £3,841; the population in 1881 was 743.

FLEET MARSTON is a small parish consisting of two farms and four cottages, in the union and county court district of Aylesbury, hundred of Ashendon, rural deanery of Waddesdon, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, about 3 miles north-west from Aylesbury, on the road to Bicester. The line from Aylesbury to Buckingham, by the Verney Junction, sweeps round the eastern boundary of the parish, passing very near the church. The parish lies in the low flat, where the watershed from Stewkley and Whitchurch receives the drainage from the high ground of Quainton and Oving, and passing underneath the elevated ridge of Upper Winchendon, forms a tributary of the Thames, hence the name of Fleet Marston, or "running marsh town." The church of St. Mary is a small building of stone, consisting of chancel, nave, north porch and western turret containing 1 bell and is chiefly in the Early Decorated style; it has been thoroughly restored and was re-opened April 11th, 1869: the east window is stained and was the gift of the late Mrs. Bickersteth, wife of the Dean of Lichfield: the roof of the chancel has been almost wholly renewed, and that of the nave, an original and massive structure of the Decorated period, for many years hidden by a low flat ceiling, has been laid open: in the sill of a window, on the south side of the chancel, an ancient piscina was discovered, and there is an aumbry or credence shelf in the north wall; externally the buttresses have been rebuilt from the foundations, the walls re-pointed and two elegant stone crosses placed on the gables; the pulpit and all the chancel fittings are of oak: the communion cloth was given by Mrs. Bickersteth, and the kneeling carpet was worked and presented by Mrs. C. Hooper. The total cost of restoration was between £700 and £800, to which Christ Church and New College, Oxford, were liberal contributors. The register dates from the year 1630. The living is a rectory, yearly value £220, in the gift of and held since 1875 by the Rev. Alfred William Howell M.A. of Worcester College, Oxford, who resides at Aylesbury. The land is freehold. The principal landowners are Christ Church and New College, Oxford. The soil is heavy, stiff clay; subsoil, same; the land is nearly all grazed. The area is 929 acres; rateable value, £1,636; the population in 1871 was 37.

Parish Clerk, Joseph Southam.

NORTH MARSTON is a parish 3½ miles south from Winslow, 10 south-east from Buckingham and 17 north-west from Aylesbury, in Ashendon hundred, Winslow union, Buckingham county court district, rural deanery of Claydon, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Mary, standing on an eminence, is an edifice of considerable architectural beauty; it consists of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south porch and a Decorated western tower containing a clock and 5 bells: the original style of the church seems to have been Early English: the whole of the south side is Decorated, with a hagioscope and a piscina in the south wall; the chancel, a fine specimen of Perpendicular work, is said to have been built from the offerings of pilgrims who frequented the shrine of the famous rector, Sir John Schorne; above the vestry is a chamber said to have anciently been used by the priest whose duty it was to watch the shrine, for which purpose a rectangular opening has been made through the north chancel wall: from this upper chamber a spiral stair gives access to the roof: Her Majesty has placed a handsome stained east window in the church, the subject being The Ascension, in memory of John Campden Neild esq. who left Her Majesty his property (about £250,000): the chancel has also been restored by Her Majesty at a cost of £3,000. The register of baptisms and burials dates from the year 1724; marriages, 1725. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £150 with residence, in the gift of the Dean and Canons of Windsor and held since 1869 by the Rev. Samuel Benjamin James D.D. of Trinity College, Dublin. Sir John Schorne, who is well known to archæologists, was rector here in the thirteenth century and the place, it is said, became populous and flourishing both on account of the numbers who resorted to a well which he had blessed, as well as of the pilgrims who visited his shrine; the well, which still exists, is fed by a spring rising on the spot and when filtered is beautifully clear, bright and sparkling from the quantity of free carbonic acid it contains; an analysis made in 1868 by Dr. Bernays, Professor of Chemistry at St. Thomas's Hospital, showed that one litre (1.76 pint) contained 1.081 grammes of salts, which, on being boiled, deposited 0.307 grammes of lime carbonate, with a minute trace of magnesia and iron carbonate. In addition, one litre of the water contained: chlorine 0.0276, sulphuric acid 0.1354, silica 0.0180, lime 0.0142 and magnesia 0.0900 grammes; somewhat more than ¼ gramme of lime-sulphate (gypsum) and magnesia-sulphate (Epsom salts) with magnesium chloride; the remaining salts are potash and soda carbonate. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel here. About 12 acres are held in trust by the vicar and six elected trustees for the poor, and about 14 acres, called "The Clock Land," producing £26 yearly, for and towards the maintenance of the church and repairing of the clock, and towards church expenses and the relief and sustentation of the poor of North Marston. The landowners are the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, Lord Cottesloe, certain colleges in Oxford University, the Ecclesiastical Commissioners (who are appropriators of the glebe) and others. The soil is loam and clay; subsoil, clay. The greater part of the land is in pasture. The chief crops are wheat and beans. The area is 1,910 acres, which are tithe free; rateable value, £3141; and the population in 1881 was 701.

MARSWORTH (or MASWORTH) is a village and parish on the Herts border, 3 miles north from Tring, 2 south-west from Ivinghoe and 6½ south-east from Aylesbury, in the hundred of Cottesloe, union of Berkhampstead, county court district of Aylesbury, rural deanery of Ivinghoe, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The London and North Western railway and the Grand Junction canal both intersect the parish, the latter having a large reservoir here covering many acres, which is a resort in the season for anglers. The Aylesbury and Wendover branches of the canal start from this place. The church of All Saints is a stone edifice in the Perpendicular style, consisting of chancel, nave, north aisle, continued to the whole length of the church and a western tower containing 6 bells; the tower is supported by two buttresses at each of its western angles; there is no chancel arch: the nave is separated from the south aisle by three plain arches, two others of similar character dividing the chancel from its aisle, all having octagonal pillars and caps, but the two eastern arches are lower than the others: it contains some ancient monuments to the West family, the last male heir of which died in the year 1700; on an altar tomb belonging to this family is an ancient brass dated 1681 on which is represented a man in armour lying on a bed and Death striking him with his dart, while his wife and children kneel by the bedside at the foot of which stands an ecclesiastic: the church was thoroughly repaired in 1868, under the direction of Mr. W. Slater, architect. The old registers were destroyed by fire and there are now none prior in date to the year 1720. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £200 with residence, and including about 80 acres of glebe, in the gift of the Master and Fellows of Trinity College, Cambridge, and held since 1880 by the Rev. Fredk. William Ragg M.A. of that college. The great tithes, vested in the Master and Fellows of Trinity College, Cambridge, are leased to Mr. Edward Horwood. There is a Baptist chapel. The charities for distribution are £4 yearly, there are other charities amounting to £7 10s. for church purposes and £6 10s. for education. The Earl of Rosebery, who is lord of the manor, and Trinity College, Cambridge, are the principal landowners. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and beans. The soil is clay and chalk; subsoil, chalk. The land is very good, principally arable. The area is 880 acres; rateable value, £4,650; the population in 1871 was 564.

MEDMENHAM is a village and parish within the parliamentary borough of Great Marlow, 4½ miles east from Henley-on-Thames, 8 south-west from High Wycombe and 3 west from Great Marlow, the nearest railway station, on the high road from Marlow to Henley, in the hundred of Desborough, union and county court district of Henley, rural deanery of Wycombe, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, situated on the north bank of the Thames, and by the river 60½ miles from London and 51 from Oxford; nearest bridges: up, Henley 4½ miles; down, Marlow, 3½ miles. The church of St. Peter is a building of flint, chalk and stone, in the Decorated and Perpendicular styles, restored chiefly at the expense of the late Charles Robert Scott Scott-Murray esq. J.P. in 1839 at a cost of nearly £1,200; and consisting of chancel and nave under one roof, modern south porch and a western embattled tower with turret and containing 3 bells; the east window exhibits three full-sized figures in stained glass representing Our Saviour, St. Peter and St. Paul: in the nave are mural tablets to the Murray family and a coloured memorial with arms to Mrs. Anne Danvers, 1677: in the churchyard, under the southern window, is a monument to Ellen, wife of Bransby William Powys esq. Henry William Caslon, the last of the well-known family of typefounders, is buried in the churchyard and there is a stained window to his memory on the south side of the nave: in the chancel are stained windows and brasses in memory of the Rev. F. W. Harris; 19 years vicar of the parish and of Eliza Eleanor Murray, daughter of Charles Murray esq. and Eliza Scott his wife. There are inscribed ledger stones to Francis Duffield esq. 1728 and to Francis Duffield esq. 1758, both were of Medmenham Abbey and each died in the month of May, aged 39; and there remains a brass to Richard Levyng, 1415 and Alicia his wife, 1419. The register dates from the year 1654. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £200 with residence and two acres of glebe land, in the gift of Charles Aloysius Scott-Murray esq. J.P. and held since 1872 by the Rev. Walter Hill M.A. of St. Edmund Hall, Oxford. Danesfield House, the seat of Charles Aloysius Scott-Murray esq. J.P. is pleasantly situated on an eminence commanding extensive views; contiguous is the Danish encampment which gave its name to the mansion; near and within its precincts is a Domestic Catholic church, dedicated to St. Charles Borromeo, to which the public are admitted; this edifice was the last work of the celebrated architect Augustus Welby Pugin and is a very worthy reproduction of the style of the thirteenth century; the altar is extremely beautiful, the carved stone reredos representing scenes from the life of St. Charles: beneath the altar, in a shrine and exposed to view, are the relics of St. Constantia and in the reliquary is the so-called incorrupt hand of St. James the Apostle, which, previous to the Reformation, is said to have been venerated at Reading Abbey. The vestments, which are numerous and very handsome, are of the old English Gothic shape, embroidered in silk by the Hon. Mrs. Scott-Murray. A cloister, decorated with representations of the fourteen "Stations of the Cross," composed of mother of pearl and brought from the Holy Land, connects the chapel with the mansion. The Very Rev. Canon George Osman is the priest. Between the Church and States farm is another ancient encampment. The remains of Medmenham Abbey, founded by Hugh de Bolebec and colonised from Woburn Abbey, Beds, are beautifully situated on the north bank of the Thames. King John, by a charter dated June 3rd, 1201, confirmed the foundation and in 1204 some of the Cistercian monks of Woburn settled here, but did not long remain; in 1212 a new colonisation was effected by monks of the same order from Cisteaux, in the diocese of Chalons, in France. The abbey, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, was annexed at the beginning of the sixteenth century to the Abbey of Bistlesham or Bisham, on the opposite side of the river, and its revenues, at the dissolution, were valued at £20 6s. 2d. the buildings being then ruinous. Browne Willis, describing the remains in 1718, speaks of the chapel of the abbey house as a low, tiled building, paved with brick; the walls of the north aisle of the abbey church then standing were 48 feet long and 12 wide, well wrought in ashlar, with spacious windows; in 1797 the chapel had disappeared and only one pillar of the north aisle remained; there is now little left of any interest. During the last century the abbey was tenanted by a band of men of wit and fashion, under the designation of the "Monks of St. Francis," whose habit they assumed, but better known as the "Hell Fire Club," these, led by Sir Francis Dashwood, John Wilkes and others, converted the abbey into a convivial retreat and here celebrated their impious and immoral orgies. The Abbot of Medmenham was ex-officio epistolar of the Order of the Garter on St. George's Day at Windsor Castle. This has for many years been a place of favourite resort and is now used in conjunction with the Ferry Hotel adjoining. Charles A Scott-Murray esq. J.P. is lord of the manor and the principal landowner. The soil is chalk, flint and clay. The chief crops are wheat and potatoes. The area is 2,327 acres; rateable value, £3,275; the population in 1881 was 336.

MENTMORE is a village and parish, 4 miles south-west from Leighton Buzzard and 2 north-west from Cheddington Junction station, in the hundred of Cottesloe, union and county court district of Leighton Buzzard, rural deanery of Ivinghoe, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Mary is in the Early Decorated and Perpendicular styles and consists of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, north & south porches, ancient vestry on the north side of the chancel and a western tower containing 5 bells; all the roofs are open, of good oak with carved figures: the nave is of three bays, the arches rising from piers with embattled caps and foliated mouldings at the bases; the north aisle extends westward parallel with the tower: the rood screen remains and a trefoil-headed piscina in the south aisle; the font is circular, with a stem and base: there are memorials to the families of Thud and Wigg: the chancel was rebuilt and the church restored in the year 1858 and was re-opened May 11th in that year: the cost of the work, executed under the direction of Mr. E. Stokes, architect, was £1,500: a fine toned harmonium was presented by the Baroness Mayer de Rothschild and a communion cloth by the vicar. The register dates from the year 1685. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £200, in the gift of the Earl of Rosebery, and held since 1862 by the Ven. Charles Septimus Grubbe M.A. of Jesus College, Cambridge, formerly archdeacon of Maritzburg. In the summer of 1862, as some excavations were being made for the foundation of a laundry at the back of the "Cottage," formerly the residence of Baron Mayer de Rothschild, a remarkably good mediæval jug was discovered which has been assigned to the fourteenth or fifteenth century. The poor share with the neighbouring parishes in Pratt's annual charity of £42. Mentmore Towers, the seat of the Earl of Rosebery, is a splendid mansion in the Anglo-Italian style, situated west of the village and commanding an extensive view of the Vale of Aylesbury; it contains a collection of works of art; the pictures are chiefly of the French school but there are some fine specimens of the Italian masters from the Manfrini Gallery at Venice: the cabinets and marbles are of great beauty; tapestries and other products of the needle and the loom and a fine collection of Limoges enamels are among the numerous articles of vertu. The Earl of Rosebery is lord of the manor and the principal landowner. The soil is stiff clay; subsoil, clay. The area is 1,240 acres, consisting mainly of dairy and pasture land; rateable value, £4,832; the population in 1871 was 408.

MILTON KEYNES is a parish and village, 3½ miles south from Newport Pagnell and 3½ north from Fenny Stratford, in the hundred, union and county court district of Newport Pagnell, archdeaconry of Buckingham, rural deanery of Bletchley, and diocese of Oxford. The river Ouzel separates the parish from Great and Little Wolston. The church of All Saints is a beautiful and pure specimen of the Decorated style and has been pronounced a gem of Middle-Pointed architecture; it consists of chancel with north aisle, nave, north aisle, south porch and a tower on the north side; there are very fine sedilia and piscina, with detached shafts and rich open tracery in the heads: the north chancel aisle has a piscina and two very remarkable side windows on either side of the door; it is separated from the chancel by an arcade with circular piers and fine moulded caps and bases: the porch is one of the most striking parts of the church, its inner door having rich hanging tracery and other parts the ball flower ornament: the sides are open and are divided into three compartments by circular shafts, above which is open tracery: in the church is the tomb of Lewis Atterbury, rector of this parish, who died in 1693; he was the father of the celebrated Bishop Atterbury, who was born here, 6th March, 1662: there is also a brass to Adam Babyngton, rector, ob. 1427. The register dates from the year 1559. The living is a rectory, yearly value £580 with residence, in the gift of George Henry Finch esq. M.P., J.P. and held since 1880 by the Rev. the Hon. Wingfield Stratford Twisleton-Wykeham-Fiennes M.A. late fellow of New College, Oxford. The Earl of Nottingham's gift of £2 is for educational purposes. George Henry Finch esq. M.P., J.P. is lord of the manor and owner of the land. The soil is clay; subsoil, sand and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, beans, barley and oats. The area is 1,842 acres; rateable value, £3,093: the population in 1881 was 244.

GREAT MISSENDEN is a large and populous village and parish within the parliamentary borough of Aylesbury, situated in a delightful valley, with much beech wood, on the high road from Wendover to London, 6 miles north-east from Wycombe station, 5 north-west from Amersham and 4 west from Chesham, in the hundred of Aylesbury, union of Amersham, Chesham county court district, rural deanery of Wendover, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The abbey church of St. Mary is an ancient cruciform structure in the Early English style, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, porches, transepts, and a low battlemented western tower containing six bells, the earliest being dated 1603; the tower was originally Early English but has been much modernized; the piers and arches of the nave are Decorated, with good moulded caps; there are various inserted Perpendicular windows, and the clerestory is of that date; on the north side of the chancel, about 7 feet from the ground, is an arcade of Pointed arches with small detached pillars: there are mural tablets to the Bois and Dormer families (1637, 1729), one of which exhibits a bust under a circular arch, composed of books; there are brasses to Margaret Metcalf, 1595; and John Iwardby and Katharine his wife, daughter and heiress of Bernard de Missenden, 1536; the east window is a memorial to G. Carrington esq. erected by his widow, Mrs. Carrington, who also placed one in the chancel to her father and mother; there is a stained window in the aisle to Frances Sarah, wife of the vicar, erected by her father, and a tablet to the Rev. Richards Marks, 24 years vicar of the parish, who was the anthor of "The Retrospect," a religions work of great merit. The register dates from the year 1694; burials, 1678. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £260 with residence, in the gift of trustees and held since 1852 by the Rev. Joshua Greaves M.A. of Trmity College, Cambridge, J.P. for Bucks. The Baptists have a small chapel, in the Grecian style, in the village erected in 1778, also one at Lee Common erected in 1854 and one at Hyde Heath. A Public Hall and Reading Room was erected in 1879 at a cost of £1,200. Mr. Carter, of Bury farm, laid out the money upon n gnarantee from the present vicar, W. H. Herbert esq. and Mr. M. Eggleton, that he receives 5 per cent. for 21 years. Fairs are held on Easter Tuesday and the Monday after Old Michaelmas day. Almond's charity of £18 yearly is for the poor of the parish and Gregory's of £5 for the same object; Boys' charity, £17, for apprenticeships; and W. Dent esq. gave £1,000 Consols, the interest £30 is annually devoted to the support of the parochial schools, in memory of his daughter, wife of the vicar of the parish. The Abbey of Austin Canons, according to an inquisition taken on oath, in 1331, was founded by Sir William de Missenden knight, about the year 1293, but an old register of the abbey fixes the date at 1133, and an ancient court-book of the manor assigns its foundation to the D'Oyleys, but that it was augmented by the Missendens in pursuance of a vow made on escaping from shipwreck in the fourteenth century; in the year 1787 the old buildings were the property of James Oldham Oldham esq. and are now the residence of Mrs. Carrington; a few fragments of the chapter house remain: the revenues were estimated in 1534 at £261 14s. 6½d. yearly. Woodlands Park is occupied by James Edward MacConnell esq. J.P. The trustees of the late George Carrington esq. are lords of the manor. The principal landowners are the trustees of the late George Carrington esq. J. E. MacConnell esq. J.P. the Rev. the Earl of Buckinghamshire, T. Tyrwhitt-Drake esq. Lord Dormer and the trustees of Thomas Honnor esq. and Mrs. J. Honnor. The chief crops are wheat, oats, barley and roots. The soil is alluvial, with a chalk base, abounding in the deposit of flint and shells. The area amounts to 5,731 acres, chiefly arable, with some meadow and woodland; rateable value, £8,612; the population in 1881 was 2,170. Part of this parish is included in the ecclesiastical district of Prestwood.

LITTLE MISSENDEN is a village and parish within the parliamentary borough of Aylesbury, 5 miles north-east from Wycombe railway station, 3 south-west from Chesham, 2½ from Great Missenden and 2½ west from Amersham, in the hundred of Aylesbury, union of Wycombe, Chesham county court district, rural deanery of Amersham, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, near the Misbourne stream. The church of St. John the Baptist is small and plain in structure and was repaired in 1853; it has chancel, nave, aisles, transept, lofty square tower and 4 good toned bells (two of which are reputed to have been given by King John about 1,200) and organ and a fine old Norman font in good preservation: it contains two brass inscriptions to the Styles family: it was reseated in 1881 at a cost of £372, £200 of which was subscribed by J. H. Bird esq. who also gave a stained east window in memory of his wife and two others in the transept. The register dates from the year 1559. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £290, encumbered with an annual charge which now stands at £46 and which decreases £1 annually) with 10 acres of glebe and residence, in the gift of Earl Howe and held since 1879 by the Rev. William ffolliott B.A.T.C.D. Here is a Wesleyan chapel; also two Baptist chapels, one at Holmer Green erected in 1877 and the other at Little Kingshill erected in 1814. In 1867 Miss Charlotte Raine left £140 to be distributed yearly among 10 poor people. James Henry Bird esq. who is now living, has vested in the vicar and churchwardens property, the rents to be applied as follows:—provided the tablet in the church to the memory of his wife (and himself at his decease) be kept in repair, 15 shillings each per annum to 16 deserving poor persons, for coals, 50 quartern loaves, on or near the eighth day of January and 50 ditto on the 3rd of March in each year; two commemoration sermons to be preached in the church yearly, the following sums to be given on each occasion, £3 3s. to the vicar, 6 shillings to the clerk, 6 shillings to the organist, 15 shillings to the choir and 15 shillings to the ringers for a muffled peal and £1 1s. per annum to keep the tablet clean; at the expiration of 1921 the property will yield double the present amount and after paying the above sums he hopes the trustees for the time being will distribute the surplus to the deserving poor. The Abbey is the residence of John Macmeikan esq. The principal landowners are Earl Howe, who is lord of the manor, T. Tyrwhitt-Drake, and Darby Griffith esqrs. The soil is clay and chalk. The chief crops are wheat, oats and barley; there is some woodland. The area is 3,065 acres; rateable value, £4,001; and the population in 1881 was 1,113.

Bray's Green, Holmer Green, Beaumont End and part of Little Kingshill, are in this parish; the remainder of Little Kingshill is in Great Missenden.

MONKS RISBOROUGH is a parish within the parliamentary borough of Aylesbury, in the hundred of Aylesbury, union and county court district of Wycombe, archdeaconry of Buckingham, rural deanery of Aylesbury and diocese of Oxford, 5 miles south-west from Wendover, 7 south from Aylesbury, 9 miles north-west from High Wycombe, 1¼ north-north-east from Princes Risborough station and 1 mile north from Little Kimble station. The church of St. Dunstan is a noble structure of flint and stone in the Early English and Perpendicular styles, and consists of chancel, nave with clerestory, lighted by eight six-light windows, aisles separated from the nave by arcades of four bays, with a small transept striking out of the north aisle, southern porch and tower containing 5 bells; the church is seated with oaken benches for 332 persons; a portion of the ancient rood-screen remains under the chancel arch; Archbishop Potter was formerly rector of this parish; there is a brass, bearing date 1431, in memory of the Rev. Robert Blundell, formerly rector: in the porch is a portion of the old stoup and in the north aisle the remnant of a canopied recess, evidently of fifteenth century work, richly carved, and a portion of the rood loft still remains: the font is a splendid specimen of Norman Transition: in May 1864 the church was re-opened, having undergone a complete restoration, at a cost of nearly £2,400, raised by subscription and grants; a small vestry and organ chamber, and a beautiful stained east window were added at the restoration; there is a stained window in the west side of the tower with the following inscription on a brass plate underneath: "Erected by the parishioners and a few friends to the memory of Rev. H. W. J. Beauchamp, who died January 23rd, 1863, 23 years rector of this parish;" also a stained window placed in the east end of the south aisle by the present rector to the memory of his family; there is also one in the transept to the late Bishop of Oxford. The register dates from the year 1587. The living is a rectory, yearly value £700 with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1863 by the Rev Thomas Evetts M.A. of Corpus Christi college, Oxford, who is rural dean of Aylesbury, and surrogate and honorary canon of Christ Church. Before the enclosure, which was completed in 1839, the inhabitants of the parish had the privilege of cutting beechwood from off a hill called the Scrubs, which right was at that time exchanged for 27A. 3R. 6P. of land allotted in different parts of the parish for the convenience of the poor parishioners, to whom it is let, and the rents are laid out in coal for distribution at Christmas. The trustees of the allotments are the rector, churchwardens and constable for the time being. The Rev. Humphrey Hody D.D. left £100 in 1706 for apprenticing poor boys of this parish, and the Rev. William Quarles D.D. further augmented this fund in 1727 by £150. The latter gentleman also left 40s. yearly for the education of at least four poor boys. The principal landowners are the Rev. the Earl of Buckinghamshire, who is lord of the manor, Sir Nathaniel Mayer de Rothschild bart. M.P. Mrs. Winslow, the rector and Merton College, Oxford. The soil is various, hard chalk, loam and clay; subsoil, clay and stone. The chief crops are barley, oats, turnips and beans. The area is 3,820 acres; rateable value, £3,952; the population in 1881 was 847.

Askett lies three quarters of a mile north, at which place there is a Baptist chapel, built in 1836, with a small burial ground attached.

Cadsdean is a mile east-north-east, at the foot of the Chilterns.

Meadle, 1¾ miles north-by-west; and Whiteleaf, three quarters of a mile east-south-east, near the base of the Whiteleaf Cross, a gigantic cross, 120 feet long by 80 feet wide, cut into the chalky side of one of the Chiltern Hills: by the Enclosure Act, 9 Geo. IV. this "ancient memorial or land mark" is declared to be public property, and the lord of the manor is required to keep it in repair; there is a similar cross in the parish of Bledlow.

Owlswick is a small hamlet of the parish of Monks Risborough, from which it is distant 2 miles north-west. At Owlswick there is a School chapel, erected by the rector with the aid of subscriptions from the proprietors of land. Letters are received through Tring. MOULSOE is a parish and village on the borders of Bedfordshire, situated on the top of a hill 3 miles south-east from Newport Pagnell, in the hundred, union and county court district of Newport Pagnell, archdeaconry of Buckingham, rural deanery of Bletchley and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Mary is an ancient stone building in the Decorated style and consists of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles and an embattled western tower containing a clock and 4 bells; the clerestory appears to be modern, as is the east window; some of the others are of very good design, but the tracery is not in every case perfect: there are brasses of a man in armour and a female, c. 1530, marginal inscription lost; it is assumed to be a memorial to Richard Rowthall and his wife. The register dates from the year 1559. The living is a rectory, net yearly value £370 with residence, in the gift of James William Carlile esq. J.P. of Gayhurst, and held since 1869 by the Rev. John Studholme Brownrigg M.A. of Magdalene College, Cambridge. James Wm. Carlile esq. J.P. of Gayhurst house, is lord of the manor and chief landower. The soil is mixed, principally a strong loam; subsoil, clay and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and beans. The area is 1,190 acres; rateable value, £2,061; the population in 1881 was 194.

MURSLEY is a village and parish, once a market town, one mile from Swanbourn station, 3½ miles north-east from Winslow and 9 north-west from Leighton Buzzard, in Cottesloe hundred, Winslow union, county court district of Buckingham, rural deanery of Mursley, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Mary the Virgin is a building of stone, in the Decorated style, and consists of chancel, nave, aisles and a western tower, of much older date, containing a clock and 6 bells; the stained west window in the tower is the gift of the late Mrs. Pitkin in memory of her husband; the nave is separated from the aisles by arcades of four arches on either side; the chancel is large and well proportioned, and has an elaborate reredos adorned with fresco paintings; in the chancel are monuments to Sir John Fortescue, Chancellor of the Exchequer, ob. 1607; Sir Francis Fortescue and others of that family; and there are some brasses: the church was thoroughly restored in 1867 at a cost of £1,950; in the churchyard is part of the shaft of a cross. The register dates from the year 1578. The living is a rectory, yearly value about £350 with residence, including 239 acres of glebe, in the gift of W. Selby-Lowndes esq. and held since 1869 by the Rev. John Cross T.A.K.C.L. A Baptist chapel stands at the bottom of the village, erected in 1830. W. Selby-Lowndes esq. (lord of the manor), Lord Carrington, Edward Athawes and Thomas Beecham esqrs. and the rector are the principal landowners. The soil is loamy with some gravel and clay; subsoil, clay and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley and beans. The area is 2,840 acres; rateable value, £3,728; and the population in 1881 was 363.

Salden is a hamlet one mile north-east from Mursley and 4½ miles east from Winslow; here was formerly a mansion of the Fortescue family, built by Sir John Fortescue, who was honoured by a visit here from James I. soon after his accession; the house was pulled down in 1743.

NASH is a hamlet in the parish of Whaddon, 4½ miles south from Stony Stratford and 6 east from Buckingham, in Cottesloe hundred, Winslow union, county court district of Buckingham, rural deanery of Buckingham, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of All Saints is a small but elegant structure in the Gothic style, consisting of chancel, aisle, nave, and north aisle; the east and west windows are stained; the building will seat 300 persons: the foundation stone was laid Nov. 5th, 1857, by the Hon. Richard Cavendish, of Thornton Hall, who both gave the sites for the church, churchyard and schools, and contributed £1,200 to the building fund; the chancel was consecrated and opened May 10th, 1858, and the rest of the church in 1861; the late G. E. Street esq. R.A. was the architect. The register dates from the year 1861. The living is annexed to the rectory of Thornton, joint yearly value about £259 with residence, in the gift of the Cavendish trustees, and held since 1878 by the Rev. William Thomas Wilson Lang. There is a Baptist chapel erected in 1798, with a small endowment. The poor's land is 3A. 3R. 19P. producing about £6 a year, which is distributed in money; Elmer's (Beachampton) charity of £3 yearly is for the support of certain pensioners. William Selby-Lowndes esq. is lord of the manor. The chief landowners are Lord Frederick Fitz Roy, the trustees of the late Thomas Cavendish esq. and W. Selby-Lowndes esq. The soil is stiff clay with beds of gravel. There is a chalybeate spring in the village called Bretch Well. The area is 1,430 acres; rateable value, £1,598; the population in 1881 was 340.

NEWPORT PAGNELL is an ancient market and union town, head of a county court district, parish and a polling place for the county and a station on the London and North Western railway, 50 miles from London, 5 south-west from Olney, 14½ from Northampton, 8¼ north-west from Woburn, on the Liverpool road, 14¼ north-east from Buckingham and 4 from the Wolverton Junction station on the London and North Western railway main line. Newport Pagnell gives name to the hundred and rural deanery in which it is situated, and is in the archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, pleasantly situated on a gentle elevation from the south bank of the river Ouse at its junction with the Lovat, which runs through the town: at the London entrance to the town is a light iron bridge over the latter river, and on the road from Northampton is a stone bridge with a long causeway crossing the Ouse. The buildings are good and many of them modern. The adjunct of Pagnell is derived from the family name of Paganel, the ancient possessors of the manor, whose castle here continued a place of great strength till the Civil Wars, when it was garrisoned for the Parliament two years and nine months, the force of occupation being under the command, from 1643 to 1646, of Sir Samuel Luke, supposed to be the original of Butler's "Hudibras." The church of SS. Paul and Peter is a noble stone building in the Early English and later styles, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, north and south porches and a western embattled tower, with pinnacles of Perpendicular date, containing 8 bells; the north porch, dating from the reign of Edward III. is the oldest part of the building, and over it is a priest's room; the chantry chapel at the east end of the south aisle is of the same date; the south porch has a fine Early English arcade, and there is an arcade in the south aisle, and in the chancel piscina and sedilia; the nave is of six bays; the first pillar of the arcades, with a square capital and different form of corbel, distinctly marks the original position of the rood loft: there are ten stained windows, seven being in the chancel, two in the south aisle, one of which is a memorial to Robert Collison, surgeon, who died April 3, 1860, erected by the Rev. George Morley, late vicar, and one in the tower in memory of the late Bishop Wilberforce; the pulpit, which was the gift of Mrs. Oliver Massey, is of carved oak supported on a stone pedestal; an open screen of carved oak separates the chancel from the nave; in 1867 an organ-chamber was built at the end of the north aisle and a new organ was placed in it, the gift of George Cooch esq. who also gave the oak choir stalls; the church was restored in 1828; in the churchyard, which is very beautiful, both for its situation and adornments, is an epitaph by Cowper to Thomas Abbott Hamilton, 1788, and there is a brass in the church, much worn, to a civilian, c. 1440. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £250, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1875 by the Rev. Charles Macmahon Ottley M.A. of Trinity College, Dublin. Here is a Baptist chapel, erected in 1824, also Wesleyan and Congregational chapels, the latter founded in 1660; there is also a small meeting-house for the Society of Friends in Silver street. The cemetery, completed about 1861, is situated near the church, a portion being allotted to Dissenters, for whom there is a brick-built mortuary chapel, the parish church being used otherwise. The Cemetery, formerly called Hill Close, is probably the site of the castle, not far from which it is said a Roman road passed from Linford through Newport Pagnell to Bedford. There is a Temperance Hall in the High street, which is let for public meetings; another building, situated in Silver street, and which is called the Masonic Hall, is also let for similar purposes, and in it are the Church Institute and Working Men's Club. The Police Station, situated at the southern extremity of the town, was erected in 1872; it is a red brick building consisting of a fine lofty chamber for the petty sessions, retiring rooms for magistrates and witnesses, cells, which are heated with hot water apparatus, and a dwelling for the inspector; the total cost of the building was about £1,500. A Savings Bank and a branch of the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge are amongst the establishments of this town. Two newspapers are published here every Saturday. In St. John's street is an ancient hospital, founded by John de Somery, in the reign of Edward I. and dedicated to St. John the Baptist and St. John the Evangelist; it was refounded by Anne of Denmark, Queen of James I. and is hence known as "Queen Anne's Hospital," the foundation being for a master, three males and three females, each receiving 8s. weekly and firing, the annual income is about £30, and the vicar is always master; there are also almshouses erected in 1763 and endowed by John Revis esq. for seven poor persons; the income of this charity is £190 yearly, derived from land, £10 of which is distributed in bread. The Congregational chapel almshouses in Union street, endowed by Miss Charlotte Beaty in 1851, have dwellings for four poor persons of that persuasion. Various sums amounting to £100 yearly are distributed, and there are charities of £26 for educational purposes and of about £9 for apprenticing, with 8 guineas yearly for the repair of the organ. The market day is Wednesday and fairs are held on the nearest market day to the 22nd day of February, 21st of March, 22nd of April, 29th of August and 22nd of October and on the 22nd of June and 22nd of December. Tickford Abbey, the residence of Philip Butler esq. is a handsome stone structure situated on the bank of the Ouse, and is said to be on the site of an ancient priory of Cluniac monks, founded in the reign of William Rufus, by Fulk Paganell, and dedicated to St. Mary; it was subordinate to the Abbey of St. Martin at Tours, and was seized as an alien priory by Edward III. during the war with France; on its surrender in 1525 its revenues were estimated at £126 17s. per annum; it stands in a small well-wooded park. The Misses Newby, of Castle Ashby, are ladies of the manor. The principal landowners are George Pike, Thomas Pike, G. O. Price, Joseph Evans Whiting, William Fleet and Edward Armstrong esqrs. The area is 3,220 acres; rateable value, £14,940; the population in 1881 was 3,686.

CALDECOT is a hamlet 1½ miles south-east.

OLNEY, in Domesday "Olnei," is a small market town with a station on the Bedford and Northampton Branch of the Midland railway, 59 miles from London, 5 miles north from Newport Pagnell, 12 south-east from Northampton, 12 west from Bedford and 12 south from Wellingborough, and is a polling place for the county, situated in a pleasant valley on the river Ouse, in the hundred, union and county court district of Newport Pagnell, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford; it principally consists of one long street, with a few others branching off the Market place in the centre of the town: the river Ouse bounds it on the east and south and is crossed on the south by a stone bridge to Emberton: the Midland railway crosses the river on the east and the station is north of the town. The church of St. Peter and St. Paul is a building of stone in the Decorated style erected, it would seem, during the period 1325-50, and consists of chancel, nave and aisles, with porch, and a lofty western tower with spire rising to a height of 185 feet, and containing a fine peal of 6 bells and clock with musical chimes; the nave is separated from the aisles by arcades of five arches on either side; the chancel, like many others, is planned so as mystically to refer to the inclination of our Lord's head upon the cross; the deflection from the central axis in this case is to the north, though more generally towards the south; it retains three sedilia rising eastwards and a piscina; opposite is an arched recess: the east window is singular in form, being very wide in proportion to its height, with a segmental head; the tracery is modern; a very fine Perpendicular roof was destroyed about 1800 for the sake of the lead which was sold to pay for repairs: the tower is massive and has octagonal pinnacles at the angles, and the spire is pierced with four tiers of windows, all with good tracery and canopies: brasses are recorded here to Elizabeth, wife of John Parker, and to Humphry Niccolls, 1654; the resemblance between Olney and Emberton churches is so close as to suggest that the same architect designed both: in 1870 the church was restored (the repairs of the chancel being undertaken by the Earl of Dartmouth at a cost of £1,200) under the direction of the late Sir G. G. Scott R.A. at a cost of nearly £2,000; there is a stained east window, given by Thomas Revis esq. in memory of his wife: the west end was restored in 1877: the old church stood at the north end of the town, the churchyard lying, by report, at the junction of the roads to Warrington and Yardley. The register dates from the year 1668. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £157 with residence, in the gift of the Earl of Dartmouth and held since 1856 by the Rev. John Piercy Langley M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge. Here is a Baptist chapel, founded in 1694 to seat 550, a Particular Baptist chapel, erected in 1863 to seat 150, and a Congregational chapel erected in 1717. The market day is Thursday. One fair is held on Easter Monday; another, called Cherry fair, June 29th, and a pleasure fair on the 13th October, but they have now fallen into disuse. There are 12 almshouses for single women and widows, erected and endowed in 1846 by Misses Ann Hopkins and Mary Smith, of Olney, two benevolent ladies of the Society of Friends, with an allowance of 5s. per week to each of the inmates; they also left £45 yearly for clothing to poor Dissenters, and £45 to a school; Peirson's charity of £46 yearly is also for clothing, and there is a Causeway estate of about £93 yearly value devoted to public uses. The trade of the town chiefly depends on the agricultural districts in the neighbourhood. Here is a large brewery; the manufacture of boots and shoes is also carried on here to a considerable extent. Cowper, the poet, came from Huntingdon and resided here from October 14th, 1767 to 1786, when he removed to the neighbouring parish of Weston Underwood; he occupied a large house in the market square with garden in the rear; the summer house, in which, according to tradition, the poet composed his ballad of "John Gilpin," is situated midway between the house and the rectory, the residence of Cowper's friend, John Newton, and is now covered with hundreds of autographs scribbled on the walls; some relics of the poet are preserved in the house, which, as well as the garden containing his favourite seat, is shown; it was while here that he had the three hares of which he writes: —"that the management of such an animal was just the sort of employment my case required;" the bridge over the Ouse, an ancient structure built before 1334, and rebuilt in 1819, is mentioned in Cowper's poems as one "that with its wearisome but needful length bestrode the wintry flood;" this bridge, with the exception of part of its north end, was moved about 1830; a house on the west side of the town street, though considerably damaged by the fire of 1854, retains carving of the Tudor period and a ceiling of oak; another house at the northern extremity of the town has some very curious stucco work, and in a room on the ground floor is the figure of a man on horseback with the inscription, "Anno 1624;" Mr. John Brunt, one of the king's messengers, was at the cost of this work. "The Great House," stood south of and near to the church and was built by William Johnson esq. of Olney, 1642-1669, and was for several generations in that family. The gibbet traditionally stood some distance out of the town, at the junction of the Lavendon and Warrington roads; a suicide was buried at this spot in 1790. Courts leet and baron are held here once a year at the Bull inn, under the Earl of Dartmouth. Olney is supposed to have been built by a colony of Flemings, and tradition says that lace-making was first introduced here. Not far north of the town is the site of a Roman station, and a field, now called "Ash Furlong," between the Lavendon and Warrington roads, is literally full of Roman pottery, and coins from the reign of Nerva to that of Constantine have also been met with in considerable abundance, besides a small bronze figure of Mercury. Olney Park farm, a royal property belonging to the Duchy of Lancaster, now marks the situation of the land which Ralph, Lord Bassett, was licensed to empark in 1374; formerly extra parochial, it was formed into a parish in the Newport Pagnell union in 1861, but for ecclesiastical purposes is attached to the parish of Olney. Olney Court, a farm about a mile north-east of the town, appears to be the site of the mansion of the feudal lords. The area of the parish is 3,078 acres; the population of the parish in 1881 was 2,429, and of the town 2,346; rateable value, £7,327.

WARRINGTON is a hamlet 1½ miles north, on the borders of Northamptonshire: the population in 1881 was 68; rateable value, £1,104.

Parish Clerk, James Stow.

OVING is a scattered village and parish 6 miles north-west from Aylesbury, 5 south-south-west from Winslow, situated on an eminence, in the hundred of Ashendon, union and county court district of Aylesbury, rural deanery of Claydon, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of All Saints is an ancient stone structure, principally in the Early English style and consists of chancel, clerestoried nave, south aisle, porch and a Perpendicular tower at the west end containing 3 bells: a brass is recorded here to Thomas Richardson, rector from April 20th, 1505, to December 13th, 1523 and there are some remains of mural painting on the south side of the chancel arch: the church was restored in 1867 and re-opened December 13th, in that year, by the Lord Bishop of the diocese; a new vestry was built on the north side, the clerestory windows renewed; the south and east walls of the chancel were rebuilt, a new open roof of oak fixed and a carved oak screen placed in the south arch; the reredos, of alabaster and marble, is also new, as well as the communion table, stalls and prayer-desks and the pulpit, an octagonal work in Ancaster stone: an arch on the north side, previously blocked up, was opened and now forms the entrance to the vestry: the restoration of the clerestory was effected at the cost of the Rev. W. H. Young, then resident curate and the members of his family; the communion cloth was given by the Hon. Mrs. Caulfield Pratt and the books by her sons and their tutor: the total cost of the restoration was about £800: a stained east window was erected in 1882. The register of baptisms and burials dates from the year 1733; marriages, 1789. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value £423, with residence and 23 acres of glebe, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor and held since 1880 by the Rev. Isaac Hill M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge. Here is a Primitive Methodist chapel. There was left to the parish of Oving, by will, a legacy from Mr. John Hill, of twenty shillings in money and a great coat of the value of twenty shillings, not to be given to any people in the parish that received collection, which legacy was first received, October 5th, 1752; this charity is of £3 yearly value, for the parish of Oving, the greater portion being shared by Wendover and several other parishes. Oving House, the residence of Colonel Walter Caulfeild Pratt D.L., J.P. Col. of Bucks militia, stands in a commanding situation overlooking the Vale of Aylesbury. The right to the lordship of the manor was disputed more than half a century ago, and the question is not yet definitely settled. Colonel Cartwright, Mr. S. B. Dudley, Mr. John Gates, Mr. J. H. Guy, Mr. John Vines, Leopold de Rothschild esq. and the trustees of Sir Anthony de Rothschild are the chief landowners. The soil is chiefly clay; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are grass and potatoes. The area is 971 acres, of which 144 only is arable, the remainder being pasture; rateable value, £2,040; the population in 1871 was 440.

PADBURY is a parish within the parliamentary borough of Buckingham, in the hundred, union and county court district of Buckingham, rural deanery of Claydon, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, pleasantly situated on a hill, with a station on the Banbury and Bletchley branch of the London and North Western railway, 4 miles north-west from Winslow, 2¾ south-east from Buckingham and 54 from London, on the London road. A feeder of the river Ouse, over which there is a stone bridge of three arches, separates the parish from Buckingham. The church of St. Mary the Virgin or St. Matthew is an ancient structure in the Early English and Perpendicular style; it consists of chancel, nave, aisles and a low square embattled tower, containing 6 bells, which have lately been rehung: the chancel has recently (1882) been restored from designs by the late Sir G. Gilbert Scott R.A. the interior fittings, choir stalls and communion rails are new, and made of oak: there are new black and white marble altar steps and the floor is laid with encaustic tiles of very elegant design. The register dates from the year 1671. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £190, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor and held since 1876 by the Rev. Thomas Henry Gregory M.A. of Brasenose College, Oxford; there is a new parsonage house, with 72 acres of glebe land. A large Wesleyan chapel was built in 1877; there is also one for Primitive Methodists. Lace making occupies the time of the poorer female classes. The Lodge, the seat of William Frederick Gore-Langton esq. is a small stone structure, surrounded by a lawn of 4 acres. The Warden and fellows of All Souls College, Oxford, are the lords of the manor. The principal landowners are Viscount Clifden, All Souls' College, Oxford, Langton Bennett and Joseph Webb esqrs. The soil is clay and gravel; subsoil, clay. The land is pasture and arable, the greatest portion being pasture. The area is 1,943 acres, about 1,388 of which are leasehold under the Warden and fellows of All Souls College, Oxford; rateable value, £3,611; the population in 1881 was 530.

PENN is a village and parish 3 miles north from Beaconsfield, 4 south-west from Amersham, 4 north-east from Wycombe and 2½ from Loudwater, the nearest railway station; it is in the hundred of Burnham, union of Amersham, county court district of High Wycombe, rural deanery of Amersham, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford and is situate near the river Wyck. The church of The Holy Trinity is extremely ancient and consists of chancel, nave, south aisle and a low massive square tower in the Perpendicular style; it contains several monuments to the Penn and Curzon families and ancient brasses to the Penn and Rok families; also a vault of the Penn (Pennsylvania) family and a stained chancel window. The register dates from the year 1560. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £350, including 47 acres of glebe and residence, in the gift of Earl Howe and held since 1860 by the Rev. John Grainger M.A. of Caius College, Cambridge. The Baptists have a chapel, erected in 1802, to seat 150 and the Wesleyan Methodists have also one. The village, which presents a very picturesque appearance, is situated on an eminence and is remarkably healthy; from the tower of the church may be seen Windsor Castle and portions of twelve counties. The principal landowners are Earl Howe, who is lord of the manor and T. B. Grove esq. The land is arable, wood (chiefly beech timber) and pasture. The soil is heavy, with chalk and flint. The area is 3,991 acres; rateable value, £4,583; and the population in 1881 was 1,096, of which 686 were in Penn Street.

PITCHCOTT is a village and parish 7 miles north-west from Aylesbury and 6½ south from Winslow, in the hundred of Ashendon, union and county court district of Aylesbury, rural deanery of Claydon, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, situated on an eminence overlooking Aylesbury and the surrounding country for many miles.

The church of St. Giles, a simple structure in the Early English style, was restored in 1863 and consists of chancel and nave, with a square tower at the west end containing three bells; a stained window was erected in 1852 to the memory of Miss Jemima Jane Noble. The register dates from the year 1680. The living is a rectory, yearly value £365 with residence, in the gift of the Saunders family and now vacant. The Dean and Chapter of Christ Church, Oxford, who are lords of the manor, J. G. Williams and W. Lowndes esqrs. the trustees of Abraham Wing esq. and Miss Archer are the principal landowners. The soil is loam; subsoil, clay. The land is principally in grass. The area is 919 acres; rateable value, £1,700; and the population in 1881 was 36.

Parish Clerk, John Evans.

PITSTONE (or PIGHTLESTHORNE) is a village and parish on the Herts border about 7 miles in length and 1 mile in breadth, 1 mile west from Ivinghoe, 2¼ miles from Cheddington Junction station and 9 miles east from Aylesbury, in the hundred of Cottesloe, union of Berkhampstead, county court district of Aylesbury, rural deanery of Ivinghoe, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The London and North Western railway and Grand Junction canal intersect the parish. The church of St. Mary is an elegant structure in the Decorated and Perpendicular styles; it consists of a chancel, nave and north aisle with a western tower in which are 3 bells; the font is Norman, the base and basin escalloped, with a bold cable moulding between them; the rim is ornamented with roses: the pulpit is of oak, elaborately carved, of the seventeenth century: there is a tesselated brick floor in the chancel, supposed to be Norman, which was formerly scattered about in various parts of the church. The register dates from the year 1653. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £190, with residence and about 18 acres of glebe land, in the gift of Earl Brownlow and held since 1881 by the Rev. Frank Heath M.A. of Trinity Hall, Cambridge. The parish has been enclosed and by the enclosure award the labouring poor have allotted to them in lieu of their right of commonage, 3A. OR. 10P.; also four acres for exercise and recreation. Ashridge Park, the seat of Earl Brownlow, partly in this parish and partly in Little Gaddesden, Herts, is situate in a deer park: the noble mansion of stone was built by John William, first Earl of Bridgewater; originally it was a rich abbey, founded by Edmund, Earl of Cornwall, nephew of Henry III. where Edward I. (1209) spent his Christmas and held a Parliament; in 1535 it was dissolved and Edward VI. granted it to his sister the Princess Elizabeth, and in 1604 it came into the possession of Sir Thomas Egerton, Lord Ellesmere, an ancestor of the present owner. About a mile from Ashridge park and within view of the house, is a monument erected in 1832 to Francis, third Duke of Bridgwater, denominated the father of inland navigation. Earl Brownlow is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are the Earl Brownlow and Mrs. Richard Bright. The soil is variable; considerable portions of it are chalky and unfit for tillage, but other parts are suitable for arable and pasture; subsoil, chalk. The entire area is 2,836 acres; rateable value, £3,809; the entire population in 1871 was 612.

Nettleden is a small hamlet of this parish, 6½ miles south-east from the village of Pitstone, 2½ miles north from Berkhampstead and 3 north-west from Hemel Hempstead in the Chesham county court district. The church of St. Lawrence is a stone structure, partly rebuilt by the late Duke of Bridgwater; it contains a fine brass of the sixteenth century and a mural monument of the Brassy family and a tablet in memory of John and Ann Maccaseree. The register dates from the year 1784; also burials from 1687-1711; entries from 1760 to 1769 are in Great Gaddesden register. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £58, in the gift of Earl Brownlow and held by the Rev. Richard Tynwald Ogden LL.B. and B.C.L. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The principal occupation of the women and children is the plaiting of straw. Earl Brownlow is lord of the manor and sole landowner. The soil is chalk and clay; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat and beans. The area is 420 acres; rateable value is included in Pitstone proper and the population in 1861 was 133, including St. Margaret's, which belongs to Ivinghoe parish.

PRESTON BISSETT is a parish within the parliamentary borough of Buckingham, in the hundred, union and county court district of Buckingham, rural deanery and archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, 4 miles south-west from Buckingham and 9 north-east from Bicester. A feeder of the river Ouse passes through the parish and here separates the counties of Buckingham and Oxford. The church of St. John the Baptist, standing on a rising ground at the entrance of the village, and almost entirely screened from view by surrounding trees, is an object of considerable interest to the archæologist, from the purity of its style and the unique beauty of its windows, the tracery in each of which exhibits a different design, it is supposed to have been built about 1340, and is all of one date: it consists of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles and a western tower containing 2 bells: all the details are of uniformly good Decorated work, the east window of three lights presenting features of a very excellent Flamboyant character, and all the remaining windows being graceful examples of the same style; the east windows of the aisles in particular exhibiting finely elaborated tracing: on the south side of the chancel there are double canopied sedilia with crocketed pinnacles and there are also three piscinæ, one in the chancel and one in each aisle; the clerestory windows, three on either side, are somewhat unique consisting of circular feathered lights within square panels, the tower is low and terminates in a plain parapet; on the west gable of the nave is a bell-cot of stone: in the chancel are branches with the effigies of a female and four children, to Ann, wife of Edmund Major the younger, gent 1613; and an inscribed slab to Edmund Major, rector of Whitchurch, Oxon, and Turweston, Bucks, 1685: from memoranda in the register it appears that c. 1720 Edmund Major, with Robert Richardson and others, rebuilt the churchyard wall; there are other memorials to Richard Banks, fellow of Lincoln College, Oxford, and formerly rector here, 1679; and John Ford M.A. minister of Hellesden, 1684; there is also an ancient slab with a cross, apparently of the time of Edward I.; an altar tomb in the churchyard, commemorates Daniel Whitby, eleven years rector here, 1674: Thomas Woodward, gent. by his will in 1528, appointed his burial in this church, before the image of St. John the Baptist: the church was repaired and improved in 1823 and again in 1853, when an unsightly gallery was taken down and on the institution of the Rev. J. S. Bolden, late rector, in 1863 the complete restoration of the church was undertaken, under the direction of Messrs. Habershon and Brock, architects of London; the walls have been either wholly or in part rebuilt, the chancel roof renewed and raised to its original height, the window re-set and new pavements laid down; the prayer desk, pulpit and fittings for the Holy Communion were likewise new and the south porch has been rebuilt: during the progress of the works many traces were met with of an earlier Norman structure, including portions of semi-circular window heads, the base of a large column of peculiar design and several fragments of stone with the zigzag pattern ; these have all been built up in the wall under the east window of the north aisle ; a large stone coffin slab, bearing a cross and of earlier date than the present church, has been re-laid in the chancel ; the total length internally is 78 feet. The register dates from the year 1662. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value £470 with residence, in the gift of and held since 1874 by the Rev. Charles Bolden B.A. of Christ's College, Cambridge. The Primitive Methodists have a small chapel here. Pearse's charity of £100, produces interest £5 yearly, which is at present assigned for the benefit of the parish, to the Radclyffe Infirmary at Oxford. Here is a Reading Room. The name Preston (Villa Presbyteri or Priest's town) points evidently to a period when these parts, now secularized, were in ecclesiastical hands, the suffix, "ton," the most prevalent of all English local terminations, indicating the site of an Anglo-Saxon settlement ; this manor, according to Browne Willis, quoted by Lysons, was held in the thirteenth century by the Bissetts, from whom the place takes its name, derived according to Skinner (Etymologicon Ang.) from the French bizet or biset, a species of wood-pigeon ; Manser Biset, in King Stephen's reign, was a baron tenure, and the barony continued in this family till it fell into abeyance between the three daughters of John Bissett, who died 1241 ; the Bissetts, in 1290, are said to have sold the manor to the Baddlesmeres, though on the authority of Dugdale it continued in their possession till the reign of Henry V. ; it was subsequently held through intermarriage by the families of Tibtoft, Roos, and Manners, Earl of Rutland, and after other transfers it remained in 1699 with Sir Ed. Denton, of Hillesden. The Duke of Buckingham and Chandos is lord of the manor ; the manor house was removed about 1850. The principal landowners are Charles Morrison esq. of Basildon Park, Berks, the Rev. Charles Bolden and Mrs. Seaton. The soil is clay ; subsoil, various. The land is pasture and arable. The area is 1,484 acres ; rateable value, £2,582 : the population in 1881 was 344.

COWLEY is a hamlet of Preston Bissett, situated about one mile south-east from the village, and 4½ miles south from Buckingham.

PRESTWOOD is an ecclesiastical parish formed in 1849 out of portions of Great Missenden, Hughenden and a detached portion of Stoke Mandeville parishes, 2 miles from Great Missenden, 11 south from Aylesbury, and 5 north from Wycombe railway station, in the hundreds of Brands Fee and Desborough, unions of Wycombe and Amersham, county court districts of Wycombe and Chesham, rural deanery of Aylesbury, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford : the houses are very scattered and nearly all of modern construction. The church of the Holy Trinity, erected by subscription at a cost of £1,400, consecrated and opened for divine service in 1849, is of flint with stone dressings, in the Decorated style, and consists of chancel, nave, aisles, small vestry, south porch and at the west end an open turret containing one bell : the roof is open and the pulpit is of stone : the chancel contains three stained windows and there is also one in the north aisle erected to the memory of his mother by the Rev. Thomas Evetts, first incumbent of this church, 1857. The register dates from the year 1850. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £87, with about 30 acres of glebe and residence, in the gift of the Rev. Thomas Evetts M.A. and held since 1875 by the Rev. Harry Morland Wells B.A. of Emmanuel College, Cambridge. The Baptist chapel is a small square building of flint and brick built in 1824, seating 250 persons. The Wesleyans have a chapel, erected in 1863, seating 130 ; and the Primitive Methodists one at Bryant's Bottom seating 120. A plain stone monument, surmounted by a Maltese cross, was erected in 1863 near to Honour End Farm and bears the following inscription :—

"For these lands in Stoke Mandeville
was assessed 20s. ship money, levied by command of the king without authority of law, 4th August, 1635. By resisting this claim of the king, in legal strife, he upheld the rights of the people under the law, and became entitled to grateful remembrance. His work on earth ended after the conflict in Chalgrove field, the 18th of June, 1643,
And he rests in Great Hampden church."

The principal landowners are Lord Dormer, who is lord of the manor, and the Rev. Thomas Evetts. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in lace making, chair turning and straw plaiting. Denner Hill stone is dug here. The soil is principally clay, with some loam and flints ; subsoil, chalk. The chief crops are wheat, oats and barley. The area is 2,113 acres and the population in 1871 was 1,000.

GREAT KINGSHILL, in the civil parish of Hughenden, is partly included in this parish.

PRINCES RISBOROUGH is a parish, railway station, and market town within the parliamentary borough of Aylesbury and is a polling place for the county, 37 miles from London by road, 42½ miles by Great Western railway, 8 north-north-west from High Wycombe, 8 south from Aylesbury, 6½ east-by-south from Thame and 11½ south-west from Tring, in the hundred of Aylesbury, union and county court district of High Wycombe, rural deanery of Aylesbury, archdeaconry of Buckingam and diocese of Oxford; the Great Western railway has a station here, the junction of the Aylesbury and Thame branches, about half a mile west of the town, and the Princes Risborough and Watlington railway starts from this town. The church of St. Mary was built in the reign of Henry VII.; it has chancel and nave, aisles, separated from the nave by arcades of seven bays with clerestory, lighted by ten foliated windows and south porch; in 1867-8 the church was enlarged and thoroughly restored, a vestry and organ chamber and new chancel arch built, new east window and a fine arch formed at the west end; in front of the communion table is a beautiful piece of mosaic pavement, the gift of Capt. Jones, of Gerrard's Cross; at the west end of the nave is a square tower surmounted by an octagonal spire, in height 100 feet, with ball and vane; in 1803 the old spire fell down and did considerable damage to the roof of the church; in the south aisle are the carved canopies of four recessed tombs, an old aumbry and piscina niche and a recess, evidently at one time occupied by a life-size statue, but now vacant; and a very ancient window consisting of three lancet-shaped lights with beautiful cornices supported by elegant columns of Purbeck marble; stained glass has been put into this window, a gift by Mr. F. Barraud, representing events in the lives of St. Barnabas and St.Bartholomew; the cost of restoration was upwards of £2,200; the architect was A. W. Blomfield esq. London; there are 410 sittings, all of which are free. The registers date from the year 1569, but during the period of the Commonwealth there are no entries. The living, formerly a perpetual curacy, is now formed into a rectory under the "Church District Tithes Act," gross yearly value £221 with residence, erected in 1865-6, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1879 by the Rev. Henry William Meeres B.A. of Clare College, Cambridge. Fairs are held annually on the 6th of May (St. John the Evangelist) and on the 21st of October; The Baptist chapel, in Bell street is a plain building, founded in 1707; the present chapel was built in 1864 to seat 600, with a small burial ground attached to it and residence for the minister adjoining. The Free church, situated on the Aylesbury road, is an iron structure built in 1870 and will seat 360. The Wesleyan Methodist chapel, at Parkfield, is a brick building, built in 1870 and will seat 100. The Princes Risborough Agricultural Association has an annual show of roots and vegetables, held at the 'Cross Keys' and 'George Hotel' alternately in the month of October. Gas Works were established here in 1865. A market is held on Thursday for corn and cattle. The Market House was built by John Grubb esq. formerly lord of the manor; the clock was placed there by subscription of the inhabitants. Steeplechases are held here on 4th April. The charities are £40 left by William Smith in 1616 for the poor; £13 yearly by Mrs. Chibnall in 1646; £100 by Thomas Meade, of Princes Risborough, for apprenticing poor children; a portion of an estate left by Mrs. Catherine Pye, of Bradenham, in 1713, for six poor widows; one nomination to Christ's Hospital, left by Richard Stratton in 1772; a meadow, bequeathed by Mrs. Elizabeth Eustace, to provide "lots of linen" for the poor; an allotment of 30 perches to provide funds for repairs to the church; 40 acres granted to the poor in lieu of common rights; the total amount is about £40 yearly. An encampment, which was considered to be that of the Emperor Servius, may (but with great difficulty) still be traced; on the west side of the churchyard are several trenches and banks, called The Mount, enclosed with a moat, which is supposed to be the site of a palace of Edward the Black Prince but by Mr. Wise called the Camp of the Saxons. King Henry III. gave the lordship of Risborough to Richard, Earl of Cornwall, his eldest brother and it was held by Edmund Earl of Cornwall until his death, which took place about the year 1300, when it again reverted to the Crown and was settled in dower on Queen Margaret; there is an iron chest in the possession of the rector with several very interesting documents, amongst which is the charter of the town and a mutilated copy of letters, bearing date June 12th 1597, under the great Seal of England, with the titles of the charters of Princes Risborough. The landowners are Sir Nathaniel Mayer de Rothschild bart M.P.; Rev. W. E. Partridge B.A., J.P.; Merton College, Oxford; W. A. Thomas esq.; Mr. Charles Brown and many small landowners. The soil is very variable, but generally light and chalky on the hills; on the low lands loamy, some parts strong clay; subsoil, chalk and clay. The chief crops on the light lands are barley, oats and turnips; low lands wheat, beans and barley. The area is 4,710 acres; rateable value £8,092; the population in 1881 was 2,418.

Longwick hamlet, situated 2 miles north-west, near the Icknield way, contains a flour mill, Baptist and Wesleyan chapels, and a day school, erected in 1874, is used on Sundays for Divine service, conducted by the rector.

QUAINTON, or, as it was originally called, Quainton Mallett, including the hamlets of Shipton Lee, Denham and Doddershall, is a township and large and widely scattered parish, in the hundred of Ashenden, union and county court district of Aylesbury, rural deanery of Claydon, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. Quainton is pleasantly situated 7 miles north-west from Aylesbury. The Aylesbury and Buckingham railway has a station at Quainton road 1 mile south-west from the village, whence the Wotton tramway starts. The church of St. Mary is a large and handsome structure in mixed styles, consisting of south porch, vestry, chancel, aisles and a western tower with turret containing 5 bells with chimes; and the chancel, which is large and in good repair, contains several marble monuments and tombs of great beauty and antiquity, amongst which is one to the learned Orientalist, Richard Brett, one of the translators of the Bible, who was rector here from about 1595 until his death, 1637; there is also a very magnificent tomb to Robert Dormer esq. one of the justices of the Court of Common Pleas, ob. 1726, supposed to be of Italian workmanship, with the effigy of the judge in his robes, while two other figures, life-size, are respectively at the head and feet, one standing and the other kneeling, both expressing grief; there are brasses in excellent preservation, to John Spence, rector, 1485; and a remarkable female half figure, which bears the name of Johane Plessi, 1360; in the vestry is a very finely executed table tomb of white marble to Richard Winwood esq. 1689, with a recumbent effigy in complete armour except the head, on the wall hangs his helmet surmounted by the crest, behind him rests his lady in an attitude of grief and on the sides stand his four children; on the base of the tomb is sculptured the figure of a human skeleton with an hour-glass; another monument of heavy design commemorates Sir Richard Pigott, 1635: the church was restored by William White, of London, in 1877. The register dates from the year 1599. The living is a rectory, yearly value £761 with residence, in the gift of the Rev. Thomas Chalk M.A. of St. Peter's College, Cambridge, and held since 1822 by the Rev. Edward Newton Young B.A. of Christ Church, Oxford, who resides at Herne Bay, Kent. Here is a Baptist chapel, erected in 1817, with 250 sittings, and a Primitive Methodist chapel. There are eight almshouses for poor widows and widowers, erected in 1687, by R. Winwood esq. son and heir to Sir Ralph Winwood knt. principal secretary of state to King James I.; these have an annual income of £258, but the charity is subject to a mortgage debt; there is also a charity left by Christabella Dowager Viscountess Saye and Sele for apprenticing poor boys of this and the adjoining parish of Grendon Underwood and for educational purposes, with an annual income of £401; and there are other educational charities amounting in the aggregate to £60, beside about £3 a year for bread. In the village, at the lower end of the square, are the remains of an ancient stone cross, consisting of a portion of the shaft, on a square base, elevated on three steps. Doddershall Park, the seat of the Pigott family from the year 1503, is a very ancient structure, situated in an extensive park and commanding a beautiful view of the surrounding country. The principal landowners are Corpus Christi college, Oxford, A. Mead esq. N. G. Lambert esq. the Duke of Leeds, the Pigott family and Mr. William Brown. The soil is stiff clay; subsoil, loam and clay. The land is principally pasture. The entire area is 5,368 acres; rateable value, £5,848; the population in 1871, including the hamlets, was 921.

SHIPTON LEE is about 1 mile north-west from the village; the population in 1871 was 64.

DENHAM is half a mile north-east and DODDERSHALL 1 mile west.

QUARRENDON is a secluded village and parish, one mile and a half from Aylesbury and lies between the Bicester and Buckingham roads, in the hundred of Ashendon, union and county court district of Aylesbury, rural deanery of Wendover, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. Here are the ruins of an ancient and once splendid chapel, dedicated to St. Peter, founded some time previous to 1294, and probably enlarged and restored by John Farnham about the year 1392: the chapel was greatly damaged about 1570 by a flood, and after the death of Sir Henry Lee in 1610 the building suffered much from neglect, and is believed to have met with injury in the Civil War, so that in 1650 it was entirely disused and had begun to fall into decay; the remains exhibit portions of the Early English and later styles; the fine old monuments and altar-tombs which it once possessed have been all removed: these included a large slab of Purbeck marble with brasses, believed to be the memorial of John Fareham named above; another monumental slab with brasses, supposed to commemorate Richard Lee, 1499; three Elizabethan altar-tombs in the chancel to Sir Anthony Lee (father of Sir Henry Lee) and Margaret his wife; Sir Henry Lee; and one with an alabaster female figure kneeling: a portion of the Purbeck slab referred to now forms part of the flooring of the cellar of the adjoining farmhouse, in the garden of which are still to be seen fragments of the carved figures belonging to the other monuments: though the sacred edifice is now completely dilapidated the arches which supported the nave roof are of fine stone and in excellent preservation; the remains of mullions and corbels, especially those of the eastern window of the chancel, prove it to have been originally adorned with great architectural skill: one of the last monuments remaining was to Sir Henry Lee of Ditchley K.G. Champion to Queen Elizabeth, who died 1610: the ruins, as they at present exist, situated in the midst of a small meadow, have an extremely picturesque appearance: the chapel was used for occasional services some time after 1720; a marriage was solemnized here Dec. 22, 1746, and burials have taken place in the adjoining churchyard till within the last sixty years. There is no church in the parish: The living is a vicarage annexed to that of Bierton. James Du Pré esq. is lord of the manor and sole landowner. The land is fine pasture and extends over an area of 2,080 acres, nearly the whole of which is devoted to grazing; rateable value, £3,604; the population in 1871 was 56.

RADNAGE is a parish and village on the borders of Oxfordshire, in the hundred of Desborough, union of Wycombe, county court district of High Wycombe, archdeaconry of Buckingham, rural deanery of Wycombe and diocese of Oxford; it is 5 miles from West Wycombe railway station, 5½ north-west from High Wycombe, 6 south-west from Princes Risboro, and is situated in a valley hemmed in by hills of a great height, from the summits of which there is a most extensive view of this richly-wooded country. The church of St. Mary was probably erected in the early part of the twelfth century, there being traces of Norman work, but the greater part is rude Early English: it consists of chancel, nave and south porch, with square central tower containing 4 bells: there are two old brasses, and piscina and hagioscope in the chancel. The register dates from the year 1574. The living is a rectory, yearly value £311 with residence, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor and held since 1851 by the Rev. George Phillimore M.A. late student (fellow) of Christ Church, Oxford. There are two small chapels for the Primitive Methodists. The inhabitants are occupied in the manufacture of chairs and in agriculture. There are 29A. 3R. 32P. the rent of which is for the church and distribution to the poor. The lordship of the manor is vested in the Crown. The principal landowners are the trustees of the late Mr. Sheldon, H. B. Reynardson esq. Rev. H. T. Young, Major Fane and Lord Carrington. The soil is chalky; subsoil, light loam and clay. The chief crops are arable. The area is 1,352 acres; rateable value, £1,756; the population in 1881 was 427.

RAVENSTONE is a parish and village on the Northamptonshire border, 2½ miles west from Onley, 8 north-east from Stony Stratford, 5 north-west from Newport Pagnell, 14 west from Bedford and 12 south-east from Northampton, in the hundred, union and county court district of Newport Pagnell, archdeaconry of Buckingham, rural deanery of Newport Pagnell and diocese of Oxford. The river Ouse bounds it on the south. The church of All Saints is in the old Norman style; it consists of chancel, nave, aisles and low square tower with clock, and contains a beautiful marble figure in a recumbent position, of exquisite workmanship, of Sir Heneage Finch, first earl of Nottingham and Lord Chanceller, ob. 1682: on the eastern side of the churchyard is a plain stone, date 1741, with Latin inscription to the Rev. Thomas Seaton, formerly fellow of Clare Hall, Cambridge, founder of the annual Seatonian prize at Cambridge: there is a stained window in the chancel, given by Mr. Finch, and another in the south aisle, a gift of Mrs. Godfrey in memory of the late vicar. The register dates from the year 1568. The living is a vicarage, yearly value, £106 with residence, in the gift of George Henry Finch esq. M.P. of Burley Hall, Rutland and held by the Rev. Hugh Allan M.A of Wadham College, Oxford. Here is a small Baptist chapel. Here are twelve almshouses, founded by the Earl of Nottingham, for six single men and six single women, with an allowance of 4s. 9d. per week each and firing. George Henry Finch esq. M.P. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is clay; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are wheat, oats and roots. The area is 2,230 acres; rateable value, £2,405; the population in 1881 was 370.

SAUNDERTON is a parish in the hundred of Desborough, union and county court district of High Wycombe, rural deanery of Aylesbury, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, a mile and a half south-west from Princes Risborough. The Wycombe, Aylesbury, Thame and Oxford branch of the Great Western railway runs through this parish; the nearest station is at Princes Risborough. The church of St. Mary is a plain edifice, chiefly in the Decorated style, having chancel, nave, south porch and a low wooden turret at the west end containing 3 bells: there is a brass with demi-effigies in memory of William Saunderton, 1430: the chancel has sedilia and a stained window. This place had formerly two churches, St. Nicholas and St. Mary's, each a distinct rectory with a separate endowment; though standing near each other, they were on separate manors belonging to different lords, each of whom had the patronage of the rectory on his own manor; about 1455 the two manors and advowsons passed into the hands of the same proprietor, and the two rectories were then united, the church of St. Mary alone being used for divine worship; St. Nicholas' church consequently became ruinous; no vestige of the structure now exists and even its site is uncertain. The register dates from the year 1729. The living is a rectory, yearly value £400 with residence, in the gift of the President and fellows of Magdalen College, Oxford, and held since 1876 by the Rev. Oliver James Grace M.A. of Jesus College, Cambridge. At SLOUGH, in this parish, is situated the Wycombe Union Workhouse, a large building of flint with red brick dressings; it has an average number of about 200 inmates. Lord Dormer is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is light and shallow; subsoil, rubble or chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley, peas, beans and oats. The area is 1,590 acres; rateable value, £2,134; the population in 1881 was 251, and 424 including the union.

The church of The Holy Trinity is built of flint and stone on a site given by J. Du Pré esq. in 1846, at a cost of about £1,700: it consists of chancel and nave and a turret with 1 bell: the seats and pulpit are of oak. The register dates from the year 1846. The living is a vicarage, in the gift of Eton College and of the yearly value of £136, being endowed with 108 acres, part of the glebe of the parish of Farnham and with £35 14s. 6d. being the rent-charge arising within the district; there is also a residence with 10 acres of glebe; the Rev. John Marratt Taylor M.A. of Magdalene College, Cambridge, has been vicar since 1870. There is a small Baptist chapel here, built in 1843, with 140 sittings. The Duke of Leeds is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is gravel; subsoil, chalk. The chief crops are oats, wheat and barley. The area is 590 acres; rateable value, £1,001; the population in 1881 was 331.

SHERINGTON, in Domesday "Seritone" is a parish and village on the road from Newport Pagnell to Olney, 3 miles south from the latter, 2 north from the former, 11 west from Bedford, in the hundred, union and county court district of Newport Pagnell, archdeaconry of Buckingham, rural deanery of Newport Pagnell and diocese of Oxford. The river Ouse separates the parish from Lathbury and Newport Pagnell and is crossed by a bridge of five arches. The church of St. Laud the Martyr (whose festival is celebrated on September the 21st) is an edifice chiefly in the Decorated style, seated on an eminence: it consists of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south porch with parvise, and a central tower with small spire; the nave arcades have circular pillars on the north and octagonal on the south side, in both cases with moulded capitals; the tower is good Perpendicular, and there is a fine west window of five lights of the same date; the east window is Decorated, others are Perpendicular; there is in the church a shield of white metal with the arms of Catesby, being all that remains of a brass to a civilian and his wife, children, and a marginal inscription, c. 1510; other brasses are recorded to Robert Yonge and Ada his wife, 1517; and Richard Mareot J.P. 1491: it was restored in 1870 at a cost of £1,200, mainly defrayed by the rector. The register dates from the year 1698. The living is a rectory, yearly value £430 with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1849 by the Rev. Alexander King M.A. of Oriel College, Oxford. Here are Congregational and Wesleyan chapels. A reading society for the working classes is maintained in the village. Fuller's charity of £5 yearly is chiefly distributed to the poor, £1 15s. being deducted for sermons. Mrs. Umney is lady of the manor and principal landowner. The Mercers' Company of the City of London also have land here. The soil is various; subsoil, limestone and clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley, beans and roots. The area is 1,780 acres; rateable value, £3,213; the population in 1881 was 604.

Parish Clerk, William Joyce.

SLAPTON (anciently Slepetone) is a village and parish on the river Ouse and Bedfordshire border, 3 miles south from Leighton Buzzard, in the hundred of Cottesloe, union and county court district of Leighton Buzzard, rural deanery of Ivinghoe, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The Grand Junction canal passes on the west. The church of the Holy Cross is in the Early English style, and consists of chancel, nave and south porch; the font is 600 years old; there are brasses to Reginald Manser, dated 1462; James Tornay, yeoman-at-arms to King Henry VIII. 1519; and to Sir Thomas Knyghton, 1522: the set of 5 bells in the tower were re-cast in 1680. The register dates from the year 1653. The living is a rectory, yearly value £282 with residence, in the gift of Christ Church, Oxford and held since 1874 by the Rev. Henry Anstey M.A. of University College, Oxford. The advowson of the church was separated from the manor in 1720 and purchased by the Duke of Chandos, who transferred the patronage in 1729 for £630 to Christ Church, Oxford. One of the rectors, John Kempe, resigned the living in 1407 and was afterwards appointed Archbishop of Canterbury. Here is a Methodist chapel. There are several charities; one left by Sir Thomas Knyghton, consisting of property, yearly value £66 6s. is for the repair of four tenements under one roof, called the Town House; 16s. 1d. called head silver, to the lord of the manor, defraying the expenses of labourers' funerals and the residue to be distributed on the Monday before old Christmas day among all the poor of the parish, in sums varying from 1s. to 8s. according to the size of the families. Slapton formerly belonged to the Convent of Berchinges (Barking), in the county of Essex, and was a royal manor in the time of Edward VI. and Elizabeth; it afterwards passed to Thomas Rowe, subsequently to J. Theed, and then in 1724 to the Duke of Bridgwater. Earl Brownlow is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is clay; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, beans and hay. The area is 840 acres; rateable value, £2,800; the population in 1871 was 325.

HORTON, a hamlet partly in this parish, will be found under Ivinghoe.

Parish Clerk, Alfred Rogers.

SLOUGH, with UPTON-cum-CHALVEY and SALT HILL.

SLOUGH, which but a few years since consisted of a few inns and other accommodation for traffic on the High road from London to Bath, is now a well-built and rapidly increasing town, a polling place for the county and an important station on the Great Western railway, being the junction of the Windsor branch, distance 18½ miles from London, 1½ north from Eton and 2 north from Windsor. The Grand Junction Canal Company, by Act of Parliament, July 1879, have constructed a branch from Cowley to Slough. A new station is now (1882) being built and the line widened from Paddington to Maidenhead. It is situated in the parish of Upton-cum-Chalvey (with the exception of some houses in the parish of Stoke Poges), in the hundred of Stoke, union of Eton, county court district of Windsor, rural deanery of Burnham, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford; it is remarkably salubrious, being built on a gravelly soil and is under the superintendence of a Local Board of 12 members; a weekly cattle sale is held in William street, opposite the "North Star," on Tuesday. The town is well supplied with excellent water from an artesian well bored through the chalk. The Local Board has completed an efficient system of drainage, at a cost, including the irrigation ground, of upwards of £20,000; the sewage reaches the pumping station at Chalvey by gravitation and is there pumped through an iron main a distance of 2 miles westward. The parish church of St. Mary, situated in Church street, was erected in 1837, the foundation stone having been laid by the present Duke of Cambridge; it has since been enlarged (from the designs of John Oldred Scott), by the addition of a handsome chancel, chancel aisles, transepts and vestry, at a cost of £12,500: the foundation stone was laid by H.R.H. Princess Christian, May 1876; and the enlarged church consecrated September, 1878, the old building still forms the nave of the church, but it is intended to rebuild it when funds can be obtained, and it is proposed to erect the tower in memory of Sir W. Herschel, the celebrated astronomer, whose telescope used to stand close to the spot. The old parish church of St. Lawrence, Upton, was restored in 1851 and a south aisle added at a cost of £2,000, raised by subscription; it is a small, very ancient edifice and consists of chancel, nave, with an arcade of 5 bays, south aisle and central tower and is supposed to have been erected about the middle of the eleventh century: the old portion of the building presents a very perfect specimen of the Norman style of architecture: the roof of the chancel is of groined stone, with much of the original colouring; the two small east windows are stained and there are four memorial windows to the Bonsey, Sullivan and Perette families and tablets to Sir William Herschel, his wife, and the Butstrode family: at the east end of the south aisle are some very old brasses with figures to Edwarde Bulstrode esq. his wife, and children, dated 1599: adjoining the church is the beautiful old house, Upton Court, the residence of Sir Thomas Douglas Forsyth C.B., K.C.S.I. once a cell of the monastery of Merton in Surrey. St. Peter's, at Chalvey, is a very elegant little building, erected from the designs of the late George Street R.A. in 1860-1, at a cost of £2,270, and consists of chancel, nave, north porch, with turret and 2 bells: it contains some very beautiful stained windows; the ground for the site was given by the late Mrs. Beauchamp of Finefield; it has sittings for about 300, all of which are unappropriated. The register dates from the year 1539. The living of Upton-with-Chalvey is being converted into a rectory, the great tithes having been purchased for that purpose by the gift of Mr. F. Charsley, the present yearly value is about £450, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1873 by the Rev. Pownoll W. Phipps M.A. of Pembroke College, Oxford. The British Orphan Asylum, Mackenzie park, is a large handsome building opposite the station, built for the Royal Hotel, which, with the grounds, was purchased for the charity in 1863, the late Edward Mackenzie esq. of Fawley Court, Henley-upon-Thames, contributing the sum of £14,000. The building has since been considerably enlarged and a swimming bath added in 1881; there are at present more than 220 orphans within its walls; the institution has no endowment and depends upon the voluntary offerings of the public for its maintenance. St. Michael's College near here is a first class school, which educates boys for Eton, Harrow, Rugby, Winchester and other public schools, there is a grammar school at Salthill and a number of private schools. There are also National and British schools and a Reading Room and Mechanics' Institute with a library of 800 volumes. The Congregational chapel, Church street, was erected in 1853; the same denomination have a small chapel at Chalvey, and there is a small Wesleyan chapel in Herschel street, built in 1847, and a Primitive Methodist chapel in William street and at Chalvey. The Volunteer Fire Brigade, consisting of 16 firemen and 4 officers, has a manual engine and was established in 1874. There is a sum of £10 yearly for apprenticing, and Lane's charity of £20 yearly for clothing and Thomas' of £12 for food. 1st Bucks Rifle Volunteer (Slough Company), of 100 members, of which A. Cockshott esq. of Eton College, is the captain, has been enrolled here. Mrs. Beauchamp gave in 1879 £200 to be distributed in meat, coals and bread yearly, on 24th December. Mrs. Mason bequeathed in 1859 £766 Consols, to be distributed in beef and coals in December and January every year, among deserving poor. Here is the Eton Union workhouse, a brick building, erected in 1836, to hold 440 inmates, at a cost of £5,350. Herschels, situated on the Windsor road, was for many years the residence of Sir W. Herschel, the celebrated astronomer and also of his son Sir John Herschel; here the former erected his large telescope and made most of his discoveries; his remains were interred in Upton church. Upton Park consists of 27 first-class residences, with about 30 acres of pleasure grounds and has a commanding view of Windsor Castle. J. Darvill esq. is lord of the manor; and the Earl of Harewood, the Duke of Leeds, Duke of Buccleuch and the Duke of Somerset are the principal landowners. The population of the town in 1861 was 3,425; and in 1871 4,509; in 1881, 5,080, 205 of which are in Stoke Poges. The population of the parish of Upton in 1871, including the town of Slough, was 5,940; and in 1881, 7,037; and the area is 1,950 acres; rateable value, £28,045.

SALT HILL, partly in the parish of Stoke Poges, but principally in Farnham Royal, is prettily situated on the Bath road, at the western extremity of Slough and forms part of the town; it contains some good residences. The large family hotel, known as Botham's hotel, was burnt down in 1882 and has not yet been rebuilt, and was the scene of the triennial procession of the Eton scholars when they went ad montem and collected contribution, called "salt," from the visitors; this ceremony has been abolished.

Parish Clerk, William Sargeant.

SOULBURY is a village and large parish 4 miles in length, 3 miles north-west from Leighton Buzzard, in Cottesloe hundred, Leighton Buzzard union and county court district, rural deanery of Ivinghoe, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The Grand Junction canal, the river Ouzel and the London and North Western railway pass through this parish. The church of All Saints is an edifice chiefly of the Decorated period, with Perpendicular alterations and additions and consists of a fine chancel, nave, aisles, south porch and a western tower containing a beautiful peal of 6 bells: the whole fabric was restored in 1863, under the direction of the late G. E. Street esq. R.A. at a cost of £1,400, raised by subscription, liberally aided by P. C. Lovett esq.: in the chancel is a vault of the Lovett family and three brasses in an excellent state of preservation, recording the fact that the Lovett family had possession of Liscombe estate in 1304: there is also a brass to Col. John Lovett M.P. 1710 and his wife the Hon. Mary Verney, 1769; their first son Verney M.P. 1771; and second son John, 1758, all of whom are buried here. The register dates from the year 1676. The living is a vicarage, without house, yearly value £108, in the gift of Capt. Phillips Cosby Lovett D.L., J.P. and held since 1874 by the Rev. George Henry Augustus Perry. The Stapleford Bridge Charity, administered under a scheme promulgated in 1858, provides yearly £5 for public uses, £36 for fuel and clothing and £5 for a medical charity; Lovett and Sambee's charity supplies £40 yearly for education and £62 for apprenticing: Harris's charity of £6 is for distribution and Tarbuck's of 12s. for a sermon. The Wesleyans have a chapel here. Liscombe Park, the property and residence of Capt. Phillips Cosby Lovett D.L., J.P. has been the seat of the Lovett family for between five and six centuries; the present mansion is a large and quadrangular structure of the Elizabethan period; one side of the court is occupied by an ancient chapel, dating from the middle or end of the fourteenth century, with part of an ancient stained window and in the courtyard is an old yew tree; the kitchen gardens are large and ancient; the park of about 200 acres, abounds in oak and timber; the house contains various portraits of this family by Sir Godfrey Kneller and Sir Peter Lely and there are besides a half length of Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk, the first Earl of Bedford, dated 1555, Sir Nicholas Crispe, Sir Edmund Verney, standard bearer to King Charles I., Archbishop Sancroft, Titus Oates and others; there is also a fine picture of Nell Gwynne and Eddystone rock, the fee of which belongs to the Lovetts. Stockgrove, the residence of Edward Henry John Hanmer esq. is an elegant modern white brick mansion, situated on the hills on the borders of the parish and county; the grounds are well wooded and afford extended views, richly varied with plantation scenery. The principal landowners are Capt. Phillips Cosby Lovett D.L., J.P. and Major Sir Wyndham Edward Hanmer bart. The soil is light sandy; subsoil, sandstone and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, oats, beans and barley. The area is 4,460 acres; rateable value is about £9,545; the population in 1881 was 486.

STANTONBURY is a parish abutting on the road from Newport Pagnell to Wolverton, 2 miles from the former and 2 from the latter place, 14 from Bedford and 4 from Stony Stratford, situate in a most productive valley on the river Onse and is in the hundred, union and county court district of Newport Pagnell, rural deanery and archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The Grand Junction canal passes through the parish. The church is a small Norman stone structure with chancel, nave and south porch; it is not used; the parishioners attend the church at New Bradwell. The living is a vicarage with that of New Bradwell annexed, joint yearly value £225, in the gift of Earl Spencer and held since 1857 by the Rev. Charles Purcell Cotter M.A. of Trinity College, Dublin, who resides at New Bradwell. Here is a Baptist chapel, erected in 1843. Earl Spencer is lord of the manor and the principal landowner. The soil is gravel and sand; subsoil, clay. The land is pasture. The area of the parish is 784 acres, the entire acreage with New Bradwell is 904 acres; rateable value £1,604; the population in 1831 of the parish was 35; the entire population, with that of New Bradwell, is 2,495.

Parish Clerk, John William Pidgen.

STEEPLE CLAYDON, see CLAYDON.

STEWKLEY is a village and parish 5 miles west from Leighton Buzzard and 6 east from Winslow, 12 miles south-east from Buckingham, in the hundred of Cottesloe, union of Winslow, Buckingham county court district, rural deanery of Mursley, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The village is nearly two miles long and lies 500 feet above the sea, on the high ground which divides the drainage of the Ousel and the Thames. The church of St. Mary is very old and is one of the most complete specimens of Norman architecture extant, dating, as far as can be ascertained, from the close of the eleventh century, since it is certain that in 1170 it was given by Geoffrey de Clinton to the Priory of Kenilworth: the ground plan forms a parallelogram of four squares, of which two belong to the nave, one to the chancel and one to the tower, each being about 21 feet long, the nave 21 feet 6 inches and the tower and chancel 18 feet wide; the church is therefore on a frequent Norman plan consisting of chancel and nave with a short square tower between them, containing 5 bells: the chancel has a window on either side, splayed toward the interior and adorned with zigzag mouldings: the east window is, on the exterior, a triplet of arches, with similar mouldings and slender shafts, the centre opening alone being pierced; on the north side of the chancel is a plain oblong recess, perhaps an Easter sepulchre, or an ambry: in the south wall is a plain piscina, below which is a stone seat running all along the south side, the Eastern end being elevated and the western end terminating in a massive elbow rest: the roof is groined: the tower, rising almost from the centre of the building, is supported on massive semicircular arches, springing from piers nearly four feet in thickness, with rounded columns at the angles; the west front of these arches is very richly carved; the tower is about 57 feet in height and the exterior of the belfry story is surrounded by an arcading of interlaid arches with zigzag mouldings, on short columns, with plain caps: the nave has two windows on each side, similar to those in the chancel and under all the windows there runs externally a string-course of zigzag moulding: the west front is a curious and interesting example of Norman work and exhibits an arcade of three arches, the centre arch forming the entrance being recessed with three rows of ziggag moulding; above there is a single window like the others: the font is plain and cylindrical, splaying out considerably towards the top: the north door of the nave, hitherto blocked up, is ornamented with double chevron moulding, on single shafts with carved caps: the south door has similar mouldings, with shafts in pairs and richly carved caps: the roofs seem to have been lowered in 1684: in 1844 the chancel was repaired and the stone vaulting partly removed and renewed with brick: some interior re-arrangement took place in 1860 and in 1862 a complete restoration was carried out, under the direction of the late G. E. Street R.A. when the roofs were raised to their original pitch, the stucco removed from the walls and the western entrance cleared of plaster: new buttresses were also supplied to the chancel wall: the church has also been reseated with open benches and stalls placed in the choir, a massive stone pulpit, new lectern and communion table introduced, and a reredos of alabaster and marble erected; the east window being at the same time filled with stained glass: during the progress of the works, a rude carving in alabaster, representing the Virgin and Child, with attendant angels, was found buried in the step of a doorway; some ancient tiles were also met with, and a coffin slab bearing a floriated cross: there are monuments to the Rev. Charles Ashfield M.A. twenty-eight years resident vicar of this parish and to his widow. The register dates from the year 1545. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £330 with residence erected in 1861, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford, who owns the great tithes, and held since 1881 by the Rev. Henry George Jephson Meara M.A. Trinity College, Cambridge. A small church, the Holy Trinity, was built by a former vicar, the Rev. Charles Henry Travers, at his sole expense, at the south end of the parish in 1866; it is a plain building consisting of a simple nave and capable of holding about 80. Here are Wesleyan and Primitive Methodist chapels, also a Wesleyan Sunday school, erected in 1873. The charities are £26 yearly for the church, the school and the poor. Major Sir Wyndham E. Hanmer bart. is lord of the manor. The landowners are the Earl of Rosebery, the trustees of the late William Thomas Cavendish J.P. John Chillingworth, James Vere Woodman and George Windsor, esqs. Mrs. Palmer, the trustees of Mrs. Woodman and others. The soil is clay and gravel; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and pasture. The area is 4,330 acres; rateable value, £6,159; the population in 1881 was 1,360.

STEWKLEY DEAN is a hamlet of the parish of Stewkley, about 1½ miles west, consisting of 3 farm houses.

STOKE GOLDINGTON is a parish and village on the road from Newport Pagnell to Northampton; from the former place it is 4½ miles north-west and the latter 10 south-east, in the hundred, union and county court district of Newport Pagnell, archdeaconry of Buckingham, rural deanery of Newport Pagnell and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Peter, which is seated on an acclivity, is an ancient Gothic stone structure and consists of chancel, nave and aisles, with low square tower containing 5 bells. The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a rectory consolidated with Gayhurst, gross joint yearly value, £480, in the gift of James William Carlile esq. J.P. of Gayhurst and held since 1865 by the Rev. Charles Jerdein M.A. of Trinity College, Dublin. Here is a Congregational chapel erected in 1839. James William Carlile esq. J.P. of Gayhurst, is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is various, principally stiff clay and limestone; subsoil, clay and limestone. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and beans. Bricks are made here. The area is 2,061 acres; rateable value £3,146; the population in 1881 was 808.

GOREFIELDS, a place of 65 acres with no resident population and formerly extra-parochial, was annexed to this parish in 1865 by an order of quarter sessions.

STOKE HAMMOND is a parish and village 4 miles north-west from Leighton Buzzard, 3 south from Bletchley Junction station, in the hundred of Newport, union and county court district of Leighton Buzzard, rural deanery of Bletchley, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, situate on the river Ouzel. The church of St. Luke is a small cruciform building, approached through an avenue of lime trees, having chancel, nave, transepts, a central tower with 3 bells and a south porch; the interior was restored in 1852: the oaken roof is in panels; the benches and stalls are open and of oak; the pulpit and reading desk of finely carved oak, and the font is Norman; the stained east window was contributed by the rector: in the course of the restoration, finely decorated sedilia and a piscina were discovered in the south wall of the chancel: a stone tablet in the west wall of the north transept contains inscriptions to the Fountaine family from the year 1650 to 1690; in the churchyard is also a handsome tomb, the burial place of the family of Fountaines: there is a curious poor-box, dated 1610, and some ancient stained glass: in the year 1220, Richard de Tinlon was instituted, on the presentation of the prior and convent of Bradwell, founded by the Hamons, lords of this town, who endowed it with this advowson, which the convent, about the year 1260, gave to the see of Lincoln. The register dates from the year 1537. The living is a rectory, yearly value about £313 with residence, in the gift of Edward Hart esq. and held since 1869 by the Rev. Edmund Pain B.A. of Emmanuel College, Cambridge. The Wesleyans have a chapel here. The principal landowners are Bernard Thomas Fountaine esq. who is lord of the manor and resides at Stoke House and Sir N. M. de Rothschild bart. M.P. The soil is light clay; subsoil, clay and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, oats, beans and barley. The area is 1,470 acres; the population in 1871 was 369.

STOKE MANDEVILLE is a parish within the parliamentary borough of Aylesbury, 2 miles south from Aylesbury, on the road to Princes Risborough, in the hundred of Aylesbury, union of Wycombe, county court district of Aylesbury, rural deanery of Wendover, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Mary has been erected on another site, near the centre of the village, about half a mile from the old church; it is a small flint and brick building in the Early English style, comprising chancel, nave and south aisle, and a campanile tower containing 5 bells. The old parish church of St. Mary, situated at a little distance from the village is used only once a year in general. The register dates from the year 1612. The living is a vicarage with the chapelry of Buckland annexed, joint yearly value £180 with residence, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Lincoln and held since 1879 by the Rev. Meyer Mensor D.D. of the University of Berlin. A vicarage house has been built, at a cost of £1,200, on a site given by the late Mr. T. Gurney, who also gave a site for the schools. The Wesleyans have a chapel here. The great tithes are in the hands of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. In Prestwood, an ecclesiastical parish formed out of this and other parishes, are the lands in respect of which John Hampden refused to pay ship money. In a detached part of the parish on the Chiltern Hills, 6 miles from the parish church, is a small chapel of ease. Edward Munday Major Lucas esq. who is lord of the manor, Sir N. M. de Rothschild bart. M.P. Charles Bennett, Hans Sloane-Stanley, Frederick Whitchurch esqrs. and E. D. Lee esq. J.P. are the principal landowners. The soil is stiff wet clay; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, beans and oats. The area is 1,460 acres; rateable value, £2,833; the population in 1881 was 497.

STOKE POGES is a parish including Ditton, a portion of Slough and part of Salt Hill, in the hundred of Stoke, union of Eton, county court district of Windsor, rural deanery of Burnham, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, 3½ miles from Slough station and 5 north from Eton. The church of St. Giles is a large and most interesting ancient structure of mixed styles covered with ivy, and consisting of chancel, with Hastings chapel on the south side, nave of three bays, aisles, massive wooden porch with pierced tracery and feathered gable and an embattled tower with wooden spire, at the east end of the north aisle of the nave and containing 6 bells, the tower and nave arcades are Early English, the chancel arch Norman and there are some Decorated windows; the east window and south chapel, erected in 1557, are Perpendicular: in the north wall is a fine ogee arch, with an ancient tomb supposed to be that of Sir John Molyns, treasurer to Edward III; in the chancel are tombs with brass effigies of Sir William de Molyns, who fell at the siege of Orleans in 1429, and his wives Margaret and Eleanor, 1425; there are also fifteenth century brasses to Edward Hampden and his wife; a brass to James Edward Coleman and his wife, of Hollenden park, Kent, 1869; and a tablet to several members of the Penn family, descendants of the founder of Pennsylvania, who are buried in a vault in the church, dating from 1775 to 1869, the founder himself being buried at the Friends' Meeting house, Jordan, Bucks; in the Hastings chapel, built by Sir Edward Hastings, Baron Hastings, as a place of interment for his family, is a monument to Gregory Hascard D.D. dean of Windsor, 1708; on the north-west side is a private entrance, through the cloisters, from Stoke Park: there are eight ancient stained windows, some bearing the arms of the former owners of the park and also six stained lancet windows, of recent date; the chancel contains a rich sedile and piscina and some good brasses. The churchyard, the scene described in Gray's "Elegy," has some fine yews and cypress, and is visited by admirers of the poet from all parts; in it is a plain flat stone over the remains of Gray and his mother and aunt, with an epitaph to these relatives written by himself; the only record which indicates the spot of his interment is a small stone inserted opposite to his grave, in the wall beneath the east window of the Hastings chapel, and in Stoke Park, opposite the church is a monument erected to his memory by Mr. Penn and inscribed with lines from the "Elegy." The poet died in 1771. The register of baptisms and marriages dates from the year 1563; burials 1564. The living is a discharged vicarage, net yearly value £500 with residence and glebe, in the gift of the Duke of Leeds and held since 1866 by the Rev. Vernon Blake M.A. of Wadham College, Oxford. There is a chapel of ease, formerly a chantry chapel, at Ditton, near Langley, distant 5 miles from the parish church, and another at Holly Bush hill, about a mile and a half from the parish church, this chapel was re-opened, after enlargement and complete restoration, on Sunday, Aug. 21, 1870; it was originally a dissenting place of worship, but was purchased and refitted for church purposes by the Rev. John Shaw, late vicar and now consists of chancel, nave, porch and bell turret. The hospital near Stoke Park was founded in 1557 by Sir Edward Hastings, Baron Hastings, of Loughborough, and is endowed with £137 yearly, it was rebuilt in 1765 by the late Mr. Penn, and is a building of brick, containing a chapel and apartments for three men and three women, each of whom receive 7s. per week from the funds of the charity; the vicar is the present master. Lady E. Hatton's charity of £24 yearly is for clothing, and Gardner's of £3 yearly for bread, there are also charities producing about £1 10s. for apprenticing and of £7 for the benefit of the poor. In 1810 an allotment of the common of 200 acres was made for the benefit of the poor. Baylis House, the property of the Duke of Leeds, was rebuilt by Dr. Gregory Hascard and has for some years been a Catholic boarding school; there is a chapel in the house, in which the services of the Catholic Church are celebrated. Stoke Park is the seat of Edward John Coleman esq. J.P.; the mansion is in the Italian style, designed by Wyatt, with a very fine interior, the library, in particular, being a noble room 140 feet in length and extending along the whole south front; the park, of about 500 acres, is well wooded and stocked with deer and ornamented with a handsome sheet of water; the old manor house, celebrated not only for it former distinguished inhabitants, but as having furnished the subject of Gray's "Long Story," was pulled down in 1789 by Mr. Penn; it had previously been the seat of Sir Edward Coke, who entertained Queen Elizabeth here in great style in 1601; he died in 1634, and there is a monument in the park to his memory, with a colossal statue by Rossi, on a fluted pedestal 68 feet high; his only daughter married Sir John Villiers, who in 1619 was created Baron Villiers, of Stoke Poges; among the pictures at Stoke House are portraits of Admiral Sir William Penn and of his son, the founder of Pennsylvania. Ditton Park is the property and residence of the Duke of Buccleuch K.G.; the house, said to have been built by Sir Ralph Winwood, is a square building surrounded by a moat with drawbridge, and stands in a finely wooded park of 260 acres. Stoke Place, the seat of Howard Henry Howard-Vyse esq.; Sefton Park, of Etienne Riggio esq.; Stoke Court, the property of Christian Allhusen esq. and Fairfield, the residence of Herbert Shaw esq. The Manor of Stoke derives its name of Stoke Poges from its heiress, Amica, or Amice de Stoke, having married Robert Pogis, a Knight of the shire in the 12th century. E. J. Coleman esq. is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are the Duke of Leeds, Francis Molyneux, E. J. Coleman, Howard Henry Howard-Vyse and C. Allhusen esqrs. and Mrs. Easson. The soil is gravel; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are wheat, oats and barley. The entire area is 4,451 acres; rateable value, £10,770. The population, with a part of the town of Slough, was, in 1881, 2,145.

DITTON is a hamlet, 2 miles from Datchet station, with an area of 435 acres.

WEST END is a part of the parish. Here Gray resided.

STONE is a parish within the parliamentary borough of Aylesbury, situated on the road from Aylesbury to Thame, 3 miles south-west from the former and 7 north-east from the latter town, in the hundred of Aylesbury, union and county court district of Aylesbury, rural deanery of Aylesbury, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. John the Baptist, built in the reign of King Stephen, is a cruciform structure in the Early English style and consists of chancel, nave, north aisle, small transepts, south porch and a western tower containing 5 bells and a clock: the church contains some considerable remains of Norman work, especially in the nave arcades, and a very good doorway in the south porch: the chancel and transepts are Early English, the tower is of three stages with double buttresses at the western angles, it terminates in a parapet with a cornice of masks and has a gable roof: at the south east angle is a large square turret, with pointed roof surmounted by a vane: the font, brought from a garden at Lewisham in Kent, and said to have originally belonged to the Church of Hampstead Norris, Berks, whence it was removed about a century ago, it is circular and bears rude sculptures of a salamander and other figures; in the south porch are the remains of a stoup: there is a palimpsest brass inscribed on the one side to Christopher Thorpe, ob. 28 Sept. 1514 and on the other Thomas Gurney and Agnes his wife, 1520; there is another brass with a Latin inscription to William Gurney, dated 1475, other brasses, which were placed in the vestry during some restoration of the church, have been lost: the chancel was rebuilt and the nave reseated about 1843; a gallery has also been removed, and a stained west window inserted by the late vicar: in the churchyard are the remains of a stone cross. The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £500, in the gift of E.D.Lee esq. J.P.of Hartwell House,and held since 1879 by the Rev. Jas. LawChallis M.A.of Trinity College, Cambridge F.R.A.S. who was presented by theAstronomical Society of London,the late patrons. There is a Wesleyan chapel. Bucks County Lunatic Asylum, situate on the High road from Aylesbury to Thame, is a large building of red brick with stone dressings, erected in 1852 at a cost of £43,500 for 210 patients; it has since been enlarged and will now hold 480 patients at additional cost of £23,000, total cost of building £66,500; a chapel has been added with sittings for 420; a large quantity of Roman remains was found in making excavations for the foundation; a bronze fibula, of the Anglo-Saxon period, was found in the village some time since, and a labourer, while one day working in his garden, hoed up a gold ring set with a red stone in its rude state; in March, 1862, a skeleton, with a spear head and knife blade, were found in a sand pit on the glebe, about two feet below the surface; these are now in the museum of the Bucks Archeological Society; in January, 1866, various Anglo-Saxon remains, consisting of several skeletons, portions of shields, spear heads, a knife and fibula were exhumed from a pit of red sand in Canseway Field, on the east side of the road between Stone and Bishopstone; these relics are also now in the museum. Plomer's charity of £3 yearly is distributed to the sick poor. Peverel Court, the residence of John Edward Bartlett esq. J.P. is a building of red brick, erected in 1862, situate about 2 miles from Aylesbury, E. D. Lee esq. J.P. is lord of the manor and the principal landowner. The soil is loam and sand; subsoil, clay and limestone. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and turnips. The area is 2,590 acres; rateable value, £4,998; the population in 1871 was 1,292, of which 464 were in the asylum.

BISHOPSTONE is a hamlet, 2 miles south from Stone village, where a chapel of ease was erected on a site given by the late vicar, Dr. Booth; it is a Gothic building of flint and brick with stone dressings, and is capable of seating 100; the late vicar also erected near the chapel a school-room for boys and girls on a site given by Lord Carrington. The Wesleyans have a chapel.

STONY STRATFORD is a small market town and a polling place for the county, on the Northamptonshire border of the county, comprising the united parishes of St. Giles and St. Mary Magdalene, 8 miles north-east from Buckingham, 6 south-west from Newport Pagnell, 1½ west from Wolverton station and 54½ from London by rail and 51 by road; it is in the hundred of Newport, union of Potterspury, county court district of Newport Pagnell, rural deanery and archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The town mainly consists of one long street and the Market square and is built on the old Roman road called Watling street, which passes through this county in a direct line from Little Brickhill. At the west end of the town and connecting it with Old Stratford, in Northamptonshire, is a handsome stone bridge of three arches spanning the river Ouse. This town is supposed to have been the Lactodorum of the Romans; a Roman urn and a number of Roman coins have been discovered here. King Edward IV. appears to have gone from this place to Grafton in 1464 to marry Elizabeth Woodville; the oak, under which tradition says they first met, is still standing and is known as the Queen's Oak. At an inn also in this town slept the unfortunate young prince Edward V. on his journey to London to be crowned, to which circumstance Shakespeare alludes in his tragedy of Richard III., Act 2, Scene 4:—

Archbishop—

"Last night, I heard, they lay at Stony Stratford,
And at Northampton do they rest to-night;
To-morrow, or next day, they will be here."

One of the memorial crosses to Eleanor, queen of Edward I. stood at the western end of the town, but was demolished about 1646 during the turbulent times of Charles I. In 1742 an accidental fire destroyed a large portion of the town and part of the church of St. Mary Magdalene, the tower of which alone remains; it has a saddle-back roof and is considered a particularly good specimen of the Perpendicular style. The church of St. Giles, originally a chantry chapel, was founded about 1450, the tower, which is in the Perpendicular style, and contains a peal of 6 modern bells, being the only part of the original structure which remains; the remainder of the church was rebuilt in the year 1776; it was reseated in 1866; the plaster ceiling is groined and is supported by eight clustered columns of iron, cased in wood; the interior was thoroughly restored in 1876, new side galleries replacing the heavy old ones, the groined ceiling and pillars decorated, and by the erection of a pitch pine screen, a chancel and choir were formed out of the church, costing £1,600: there are two memorial windows to previous vicars, that in the south to the Rev. W. T. Sankey and that in the north choir to the Rev. George William Corker and Lady Corker. The register dates from the year 1613. The livings of the two parishes are united and form a vicarage, yearly value £235 with residence and 6 acres of land, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held, since 1880, by the Rev. John Moore Lester M.A. of University College, Oxford. The vicarage house is a handsome building of stone and brick, standing at the foot of New street. The Baptist chapel which dates its origin as early as the year 1625, was enlarged in 1823 and subsequently in 1860. The Congregational chapel was founded in 1808 and the present chapel in Wolverton road was built in 1823, and the Wesleyans have one erected in 1844. The Cemetery of one acre, formed at the expense of the parishioners in 1856, is situated at Calverton End; the entrance is through a lych-gate and there are two elegant Gothic mortuary chapels. A County Police Court was erected in 1865 of red brick and stone in the middle of the Market square and the petty sessions are held by the county magistrates every alternate Friday. The market is held on Friday for corn: the fairs take place on August 2, the Friday following October 10 and the first Friday in November; the first and last for cattle and the second for hiring servants. The engineering establishment of Mr. E. Hayes, known as the Watling Works, at the south end of the town, is occupied principally in building small steam launches and tugs A weekly newspaper, "The North Bucks Advertiser," is published here on Friday. The Provident Dispensary, Calverton End, was established in 1866; the average number of patients are 3,000. A small cottage hospital was opened on the Green in 1871, in the same building in which the Provident dispensary is conducted There are charities left by John Whalley of Cosgrove in 1670 and by Arnold of Furtho about 1689 for the apprenticing of boys, to the amount of £300 yearly; also the Bridge and Street charity of 140 acres, producing £200 yearly, for lighting, paving, and cleansing the town: also the Bradwell charity left by Simon Bennett of Beachampton, of £80 devoted to this place, Beachampton and Calverton, given in clothing to old men: John Oliver, of Stony Stratford, by will, 1856, left £500 invested in Consols, realizing £16 per annum, given in money to 10 men and 10 women; also Whitnell's, derived from land, realizing £20 per annum, given in bread weekly William Selby-Lowndes esq. is lord of the manor (west side) and the Radcliffe trustees are lords of the east side. The area of Stony Stratford is 70 acres; rateable value, £5,010, viz. east side, £2,295, west side, £2,724; and its population in 1881 was, east side, 727, west side, 1,216, making a total of 1,943.

Parish Clerk, John Johnson.

Sexton, William Sewell.

CALVERTON END, in Calverton parish, situated at the south-east extremity of the town, comprising some good villa residences, and WOLVERTON END, in Wolverton parish, form important additions to the town of Stony Stratford. Wolverton End is an ecclesiastical parish formed in 1870 from the civil parishes of Wolverton and Calverton; the church named St. Mary the Virgin, was erected and opened in 1863; it is of stone, in the Early English style, after a design by the late Sir G. Gilbert Scott R.A.: it has apsidal chancel, nave with arcades of five arches and aisles; the north aisle was added in 1867; the cost was chiefly defrayed by the Rev. W. P. Trevelyan, Lady Mary Russell and the Radcliffe trustees. The register for baptisms dates from the year 1864, for marriages 1867, and deaths 1871. The living is a vicarage, endowed with £200 yearly, in the gift of the Radcliffe trustees and held since 1872 by the Rev. Armine Wale Mountain M.A. of University College, Oxford. There is a vicarage house, corresponding in architecture with the church. The area is 330 acres.

STOWE is a parish 3½ miles north-north-west from Buckingham, in the hundred, union and county court district of Buckingham, rural deanery and archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Mary is situated in the private grounds of Stowe House: it consists of chancel, nave, aisles, with western tower and 5 bells. The register dates from the year 1750. The living is a vicarage, tithes commuted at £160, with 6 acres of glebe and residence, in the gift of the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos, and held by the Rev. John Warren M.A. of St. John's College, Oxford. Stowe House, the seat of the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos P.C., G.C.S.I., C.I.E. is a noble building of stone; the front elevation exhibiting a central block, with wings united to it by buildings of inferior height; the basement is rusticated throughout and the principal floor, well-lighted by lofty windows, is entirely surrounded by pilasters supporting a frieze with cornice and balustrading; a noble ascent of 31 steps conducts to the portico formed of six Corinthian pillars and two pilasters above which rises a frieze and pediment; the front, including a grand centre, two colonnades and two pavilion wings, is 916 feet in length: on each side is a flower garden extending along the front, enclosed by a balustrade of iron and Portland stone, surmounted at intervals by vases and at the foot of the steps are pedestals, with colossal figures of lions; below are the lawn and the lakes; the north or park entrance of the mansion is an elaborate architectural work with a portico of four Ionic columns, open colonnades and another flight of steps; the chief apartments include the saloon, the hall, painted by Kent with allegorical representations of the seven planets; that of Mars being a portrait of William III.; the Egyptian hall decorated with hieroglyphics; the chapel, wainscoted with cedar, and containing the colours of the First Provincial Battalion of Militia, 1814; and an organ belonging to James II.; the music room, the state drawing-room and dining-room, the tapestry room, the state bed-chamber and closet, the jewel room, the armoury, containing some valuable specimens of arms and armour, the library, 75 feet long, and comprising about 20,000 vols. and many valuable portraits, by Rubens, Vandyck, Lely, Kneller, Vanloo, Gainsborough and others: the ornamental gardens occupying nearly five hundred acres, laid out by the celebrated "Capability Browne," exhibit in the disposition of the grounds, the endless variety of their culture, and in their connection with and contrast to the various buildings with which they are adorned, the perfection of a gardener's art; the entrance to the park from Buckingham is by a beautiful Corinthian arch 60 feet high and of the same width, at the end of an avenue 2 miles in length; the park extends over 800 acres and to the north are Stowe woods. Boycott Manor House, erected by Charles Higgins esq. J.P. is a handsome Elizabethan residence of red brick with Bath stone dressings, situated on an eminence a short distance from the old house, and commands a beautiful view of Stowe Park: the gardens and terraces occupy two acres. The Duke of Buckingham and Chandos, who is lord of the manor, Robert Loder esq. and Charles Higgins esq. are the principal landowners. The soil is gravel and clay; subsoil, various. The chief crops are wheat, barley, beans and oats. The area is 2,952 acres; rateable value, £3,961; the population of the parish in 1831 was 338, including Boycott.

DADFORD is a hamlet, containing the greater part of the inhabitants of the parish.

BOYCOTT is a hamlet. The area is 340 acres.

LAMPORT is a hamlet, occupied by a few cottagers.

SWANBOURNE is a village and parish 2½ miles south-east from Winslow, 9 south-east from Buckingham, 9 west from Leighton Buzzard and 9 north from Aylesbury, in Cottesloe hundred, Winslow union, Buckingham county court district, rural deanery of Marsley, Buckingham archdeaconry and diocese of Oxford. The Oxford and Bletchley railway has a station about one mile and-a-half north from the village. The church of St. Swithin is an ancient fabric consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, north aisle, south porch and a western tower containing 6 bells: the chancel is Early English and has good lancet windows: the rest of the church, with the exception of the lower part of the tower, which is also Early English, may be regarded as rather Late Perpendicular: the church contains a series of ancient fresco paintings, with accompanying inscriptions in Latin and English, and the interior generally seems to have been much coloured, especially in the north aisle; near the south door may be traced a much mutilated picture of the Crucifixion: there are some monuments of the Adams family and a memorial to Mr. Josias Askew, who died in 1750 at the age of 94: the church was restored and repaired in 1864 by G. Wilkinson esq. architect. The register dates from the year 1565. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £200 with residence, in the gift of Lord Cottesloe and held since 1879 by the Rev. William Miles Myres M.A. Brasenose College, Oxford. The glebe is 33 acres. The Baptists have a chapel here, erected in 1809; there is also a Primitive Methodist chapel at Nearton. There is a poor allotment of 9A. OR. 37P. producing £2 a year and other charities of £11 per annum for church purposes. Swanbourne House, the seat of the Right Hon. Lord Cottesloe P.C. is a spacious mansion of white brick, surrounded by well-planted grounds and a picturesque park of about 80 acres, and being situate on an eminence can be seen for miles and commands most extensive views of the surrounding country. Lord Cottesloe is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is loam and gravel; subsoil, lime and has. The chief crops are wheat, beans and pasture. The area is 2,510 acres: rateable value, £4,292; and the population in 1881 was 473.

NEARTON END is part of Swanbourne.

SYMPSON (or SIMPSON) is a parish and village 1 mile north from Fenny Stratford and 2 miles from Bletchley Junction station, in the hundred, union and county court district of Newport Pagnell, archdeaconry of Buckingham, rural deanery of Bletchley and diocese of Oxford, situate on the Grand Junction canal. A portion of the town of Fenny Stratford is in this parish. The church of St. Thomas is an ancient cruciform building in the Perpendicular and Decorated styles, consisting of chancel, nave, transepts and square central tower containing 4 bells; the chancel was restored at the cost of Sir W. E. Hanmer bart. in 1873 and at the same time the transepts were restored and the tower underpinned. The present register dates from the year 1718: the earlier ones have been lost. The living is a rectory, yearly value £203 with house, built in 1872, in the gift of Sir Wyndham E. Hanmer and held since 1871 by the Rev. George Shelford Bidwell B.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge. There is a Methodist chapel. Pigott's charity of £100 a year is given in bread, coals and clothing to the poor. The manorial rights have ceased for 150 years. The principal landowners are John Sipthorp esq. Francis Farnborough esq. and Miss Pinfold. The soil is light, some clay; subsoil, clay and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, oats, beans and barley. The parish contains 1,307 acres; rateable value, £5,918; the population in 1881 was 737, of which 477 are in Fenny Stratford.

Parish Clerk, George Saunders.

TAPLOW is a parish, village and station on the Great Western railway, pleasantly situated on the banks of the Thames, one mile east from Maidenhead, 6 miles from Windsor and 22½ miles from London, in the hundred of Burnham, union of Eton, county court district of Windsor, rural deanery of Burnham, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford; there is a stone bridge across the river to Maidenhead. The church of St. Nicholas is a small plain brick structure, erected in 1828 at a little distance from the site of the former edifice; it has a chancel, nave and a low embattled tower in which there are 3 bells and a clock: the reredos is of alabaster; on the north side of the nave is the pew of the Grenfell family, which contains a brass in memory of Chas. Wm. Grenfell, ob. 1861 and on the south side is a large brass to Pascoe St. Leger Grenfell his wife and Penelope his second wife dated 1879: in the nave are a large number of ancient brasses removed from the old church, including one to Sir Nicholas de Aumberdene, dated 1350 and one with 3 figures to Richard Manfeld, his sister and brother, 1455. The register dates from the year 1710. The living is a rectory, yearly value £480, in the gift of the Bishop of Oxford and held since 1850 by the Rev. Charles Whateley M.A. of St. Mary Hall, Oxford. There is a small Wesleyan chapel and a reading room with a small library attached. The poor's allotment of 3 acres with 6 cottages produces £36, distributed in fuel; Sharp's charity bequeathed in 1797, £105, to be invested in £3 per cents. the interest to be given away twice yearly in bread; Mrs. Morris of Birmingham gave £50 in 1876 to be invested in £3 per cents. for educating 2 poor children; Ashford Moore's charity, bequeathed in 1867, £611 9s. 4d. to be invested in £3 per cents. the interest to be given away in food and clothing, yearly. Cliveden, the magnificent seat of the Duke of Westminster K.G., P.C. is situated in this parish, about 2½ miles north from the village; it has been successively the residence of the witty and profligate Duke of Buckingham, Frederick Prince of Wales, during the infancy of George the Third, the Earl of Orkney and the late Duke and Dowager Duchess of Sutherland and of the Duke of Westminster; the present princely edifice, erected from designs by Sir C. Barry, is in the Italian Palazzo style, standing in a beautifully diversified park of 300 acres having before the south front a lofty terrace 433 feet in length, erected on arches, the prospects from which, including the valley of the Thames are of the greatest beauty; the former mansions were twice destroyed by fire. Glenisland is the seat of Lieut.-Gen. Sir Roger Palmer bart. D.L. standing on an island below the lock. Taplow Court, the seat of William Henry Grenfell esq. D.L., J.P. is a stately building of red brick with Bath stone dressings in the Tudor style and contains a beautiful Norman saloon built by the Earl of Orkney; the situation of the mansion is commanding and the park and grounds of 200 acres are planted with the choicest shrubs and contain a long avenue of large cedars of Lebanon. William Henry Grenfell esq. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The Duke of Westminster P.C., K.G. and Charles Whitlaw esq. are also landowners. The soil is loam; subsoil, chalk and gravel. The chief crops are wheat and barley; the area is 1,920 acres; rateable value, £8,440; the population in 1881 was 1,063.

TATTENHOE is a parish 3½ miles west from Fenny Stratford and 2½ from Bletchley Junction station, in Cottesloe hundred, Winslow union, county court district of Buckingham, rural deanery of Mursley, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Giles, placed in a retired situation, stands on the site of the ancient manor house, the moat belonging to which now surrounds the churchyard; the existing fabric was rebuilt from the ruins of Snelshall priory in 1540, and is a stone building supported by brick piers, and consists of chancel and nave under a single roof, south porch and a small turret containing 1 bell: the chancel is separated from the nave by an open screen of wood, elaborately carved and painted, with central doors, between a range of cinque-foiled arches on either side: the pulpit, with its sounding board, is likewise profusely carved; the chancel retains a piscina, and has a single east window of three lights, on either side of which is a stone bracket; the font consists of an octagonal basin, well carved, supported on four clustered shafts, rising from an oval base: the church is at present in a very dilapidated condition. The register of baptisms dates from the year 1733; marriages, 1765; burials, 1744. The living is a donative, yearly value £50, in the gift of W. Selby-Lowndes esq. and held by the Rev. Kitelee Chandos-Baily B.A. of University College, Oxford, who is also vicar of Bradwell, where he resides. W. Selby-Lowndes esq. is lord of the manor and sole landowner. The soil is stiff clay, some gravelly; subsoil, clay and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, oats, beans and barley. The area is 690 acres; rateable value, with Shenley Brook end, £1,880; the population in 1881, with Brookend, was 236.

THORNBOROUGH is a large village and parish within the parliamentary borough of Buckingham, 3 miles east from Buckingham and 5 north-north-west from Winslow, in Buckingham hundred, union and county court district, rural deanery and archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The river Ouse flows through the parish and is crossed by a stone bridge of six arches, on the Buckingham and Leighton Buzzard road. The church of St. Mary is a stone fabric, consisting of chancel, nave, north aisle, south porch and a western tower containing 5 bells, recast from an older peal of 4 bells, two of which were dated 1610 and 1736: the tower is Decorated, with a very good west doorway; but Perpendicular windows have been inserted: the piers and arches of the nave are also Decorated and the south porch is of like date; but nearly all the windows are Perpendicular: there are brasses with effigies to William Barton and his wife, 1389; and inscriptions on brass to John Crowche, chaplain, "who celebrated here for the souls of John Barton, senior and junior," 1473; Dorothy, successively wife of John Butcher and John Stevens, 1685; Elizabeth, wife of John Woolhed, 1696 and John Woolhed, 1709: there are also memorials to the Woolnoths. The register dates from the year 1602. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £150 with residence, in the gift of Sir Harry Verney bart. M.P. and held since 1880 by the Rev. William Steadman. There are Wesleyan, Calvinist and Congregational chapels. The poor's allotment is 16 acres. There are sand, stone, clay and gravel pits here. Near the river Ouse are two tumuli. Some bronze vases of exquisite form, glass cinerary urns, a bronze lamp and other remarkable remains have been met with in a tumulus near here and were placed in the collection of the Hon. Richard Neville. Sir Harry Verney bart. M.P. is lord of the manor; the trustees of the late William Thomas Cavendish, Messrs. Robert Bell, James Ridge, George Roads, George Wilkinson, Mrs. Clarke and Magdalen College, Oxford, are the principal landowners. The soil is clay; subsoil, various. The land is arable and pasture, in about equal portions. The area is 2,473 acres; the rateable value is £3,729; the population in 1881 was 577.

THORNTON is a parish and village 4 miles south-west from Stony Stratford and 4½ north-east from Buckingham, in the hundred, union and county court district of Buckingham, rural deanery of Buckingham, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The river Ouse separates the parish from Northamptonshire. The church of St. Michael, which was rebuilt, with the exception of the tower, about 1850, is covered with ivy and is picturesquely situated in the grounds of Thornton Hall; it consists of chancel, nave, aisles and a tower of Perpendicular date, containing a clock and 3 bells: the interior was refitted at the beginning of the present century by Thomas Sheppard esq. then lord of the manor, when two altar tombs, with brasses of the Ingletons, were removed and the latter placed on the floor, these still remain and represent—1, Robert Ingleton esq. in armour, with his three wives, 1472; 2, Jane, daughter and sole heir of Robert Ingleton and successively wife of Humfrey Tyrrell and Alexander Seynct Johns, she died in 1557; 3, George Terrell, her son: there are also effigies in alabaster of John Barton, founder of a chantry here, ob. 1443 and of his wife Isabella; these were removed at the time above mentioned from under an arch between the body of the church and the chancel, to the west end, where they were placed on either side the entrance. The register dates from the year 1562. The living is a rectory with the chapelry of Nash annexed, yearly value about £220, in the gift of the trustees of the late William Thomas Cavendish esq. and held since 1882 by the Rev. William Thomas Wilson-Lang. William Bredon, rector of Thornton, who died in 1638, contributed to Sir Christopher Heydon's "Judicial Astrology." The Cavendish trustees are lords of the manor and sole landowners. Thornton Hall, a noble and spacious mansion, with a lofty tower, in the Tudor style, was rebuilt in 1850 by the late Hon. Richard Cavendish and is situate in a park of 181 acres; the approach from the Beachampton road is through an aveune of fine elm trees; it is now occupied by the Rev. Herbert Richard Peel M.A. The soil is stiff clay; subsoil, clay, gravel and limestone rock. The chief crops are wheat, oats, barley and beans. The area is 1,332 acres; rateable value, £2,093; the population in 1881 was 68.

TINGEWICK is a parish within the parliamentary borough of Buckingham, in the hundred, union and county court district of Buckingham, rural deanery and archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, 2¾ miles west-by-south from Buckingham, on the borders of Oxfordshire and having the Ouse on the north. The church of St. Mary Magdalene consists of chancel, nave, aisles and a western tower: the nave is Early English, its arcades having plain arches of circular piers: the south side has been rebuilt in a modern imitation of Norman: the chancel and tower are good Perpendicular, the latter having a very good doorway at the west end; in the chancel is a small piscina: there is a curious brass to Erasmus Wilhams, rector of this parish, who died in 1608, with a demi-effigy, habited in a gown and in the attitude of prayer: in 1867 a porch was added to the south front, the chancel restored and the church re-seated. The register dates from 1560. The living is a rectory, yearly value £500, in the gift of the Warden and fellows of New College, Oxford and held since 1855 by the Rev. John Coker M.A. formerly fellow of that college. Here are Congregational and Wesleyan chapels. Longland's charity of £10 and North's are for yearly distribution. Lace-making occupies the time of the poorer class. In 1160-2 remains of some Roman foundations, bronze instruments and ornaments, pottery and coins, were discovered in a field called "Stollidge," a quarter of a mile north-east of the village, the property of Mr. R. P. Greaves, where it is conjectured was formerly the site of a Roman settlement; the coins dated from A.D. 218 to A.D. 395 and were almost wholly of brass. The Warden and fellows of New College, Oxford, are lords of the manor. The rector, Messrs. R. P. Greaves, A. Durrant, J. Arnatt and H. Cooper are the principal landowners. The soil is principally gravelly loam and clay: subsoil, various; the land more arable than pasture. The area is 2,204 acres; rateable value, £3,695; the population in 1881 was 787.

TYLER'S GREEN, 4 miles north-west from High Wycombe and 2½ north from Loudwater station on the Great Western railway, is a hamlet of High Wycombe and an ecclesiastical parish formed in 1863 out of the civil parishes of Chipping Wycombe and Penn; it is situated on high upland and almost surrounded by a beautiful woodland, in the county court district of Wycombe, rural deanery of Amersham, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Margaret is a handsome building of flint and stone, erected in 1854; it consists of a chancel and nave, with bell-turret and 1 bell: the church can seat over 200 people: the east window was erected by Sir Philip Rose bart. in memory of his parants; he also presented a fine organ as a memorial of his eldest son. The register dates from the year 1855. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £250 net with residence, in the gift of Earl Howe and held since 1873 by the Rev. William Henry Pengelley M.A. of Corpus Christi college, Cambridge. The principal landowners are Lord Carrington, Sir Philip Rose bart. and Earl Howe. The soil is clay; subsoil, clay, sand and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and beans. The entire area is 1,200 acres; the population in 1881 was 842.

TYRINGHAM-cum-FILGRAVE is a parish abutting on the road from Newport Pagnell to Northampton, from which it is 12½ miles south-east, 4 north-west from Olney, 14 west from Bedford and 2 north-west from Newport Pagnell, in the hundred, union and county court district of Newport Pagnell, archdeaconry of Buckingham, rural deanery of Newport Pagnell and diocese of Oxford: the river Ouse bounds the parish on the west and south. The church of St. Peter is a small edifice, rebuilt, with the exception of the tower, in a modern style of Gothic, and has been thoroughly restored at a cost of £2,000, defrayed by the widow of W. B. Tyringham esq.: the church consists of chancel, nave, organ chamber, chantry, south porch and a western tower containing 5 bells: the tower, which is the only remaining portion of the ancient church, dates from about 1120, the lower portion being Norman; the upper part is Perpendicular of the time of Henry VII.: there are brasses to Mary, wife of Anthony Catesby, and daughter of John Tyringham, 1508, and one of a scroll inscribed "Domine accipe meum spiritum," the effigy and emblem of Holy Trinity lost, c. 1500; both these are now in the exterior wall of the church; in the church is the brass of a knight wearing a tabard with the arms of Tyringham, c. 1490, and other brasses are recorded here to John Tyringham esq. and John Tyringham esq. 1595, and his wife Parnell (Goodwin) 1594. The register dates from the year 1629. The living is a rectory, yearly value £398 with residence, in the gift of the trustees of Roger Giffard William Tyringham esq. and held since 1850 by the Rev. Joseph Tarver M.A. of Worcester Coll. Oxford J.P. Tyringham House, the residence of John Clutton esq. is a very handsome stone structure with massive pillars supporting pediment in front and an open balustrade at the top: among the objects of interest preserved here is an autograph letter of King Charles I. written from the Isle of Wight, April 10, 1648, to William Tirringham esq. requesting a remittance of £500: the park, of about 100 acres, is studded with forest trees and slopes to the river Ouse, over which is a modern stone bridge. The trustees of R. G. W. Tyringham esq. are lords of the manor and sole landowners. The soil is mixed; subsoil, limestone. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats. The area is 1,736 acres; rateable value, £3,609; the population in 1881 was 199.

WADDESDON is a township and parish situated on the Bicester road, 5½ miles north-west from Aylesbury, 12 south from Buckingham and 2 from Quainton Road station on the Aylesbury and Buckingham line of railway, in the hundred of Ashendon, union and county court district of Aylesbury, rural deanery of Waddesdon, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The Wotton tramway passes through this parish and has two stations called Waddesdon Road and Westcott. The church of St. Michael is an ancient building, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south porch and an embattled western tower containing 6 bells and a clock: the earliest portion of the structure, comprising one or two piers of the nave and the minor doorway, is Norman; the tower, south porch, and piers and arches of the nave are generally good plain Early English, and some parts of the chancel are Decorated; the clerestory is entirely Perpendicular, and windows of that date have been inserted in other parts of the church; there are three piscinæ, one in each aisle and one in the nave; the font is Decorated, octagonal in shape and panelled: in the chancel are some brasses to Robert Pygott and his wife; there is also the figure of a knight in armour, lying upon a raised table tomb at the eastern end of the south aisle, a monument to Guy Carleton, a veteran soldier, ob. June 1, 1608, and brasses to Hugh Bristow, rector of the first portion, elected thereto in 1548, and to Richard Huntington, a priest, date uncertain; affixed to the walls is a brass in memory of William Turner, who left £3,625 to the poor of the parish; the chancel was restored in 1877, the rest of the fabric having previously been restored at a cost of £1,650. The register of baptisms dates from the year 1541; marriages, 1735; burials, 1538. The living is a rectory, formerly in three portions, consolidated by an Order in Council dated 1876, gross yearly value £900, net £660, in the gift of the Duke of Marlborough and held since 1881 by the Rev. Thomas John Williams M.A. of University College, Oxford, rural dean and surrogate, and vicar of Over Winchendon; a rectory house was erected in 1869. The church of St. Mary, WESTCOTT, erected in 1867 from designs by the late G. E. Street esq. M.A. at the sole expense of the Duke of Buckingham, consists of chancel, nave and aisles, with bell tower: a stained memorial window has been erected in the church to the late Duchess of Buckingham by the tenants of the Wotton estate. There are two Baptist chapels, one at Waddesdon Hill, erected in 1788, and the other in Waddesdon village; there are also one for Wesleyans, rebuilt in 1877, and one for Primitive Methodists, rebuilt in 1876. In the village are Goodwin's almshouses for 6 aged women, who receive £5 a year; Turner's charity yields about £100 annually, and is distributed amongst the poor of the parish; Fetto & Beck's charities produce together about £27 yearly. This parish and Westcott each receive 7s. from Nash's (Quainton) charity for bread. There is a small silk factory here. Baron Ferdinand James de Rothschild is lord of the manor: the principal landowners are the Baron Ferdinand James de Rothschild, Miss Alice de Rothschild and the Duke of Buckingham. Waddesdon Manor, the seat and property of Baron Ferdinand James de Rothschild, is a noble structure situated on an eminence and commanding beautiful views of the surrounding country: Miss Alice de Rothschild has lately (1883) had a pavilion erected at Aythorpe in this parish. The soil is clay and clayey loam; subsoil, various. The area is 6,010 acres, two-thirds of which are pasture and the remainder arable: rateable value, £9,515; the population in 1871 was 1,838, which includes the hamlets.

WOODHAM is a hamlet with a population in 1871 of 37.

WESTCOTT and WORMSTONE are other hamlets.

Parish Clerk, John Kibble.

WALTON is a parish 2½ miles north from Fenny Stratford, 6 miles south from Newport Pagnell, in the hundred, union and county court district of Newport Pagnell, archdeaconry of Buckingham, rural deanery of Bletchley and diocese of Oxford. The river Ouzel flows through this parish. The church of St. Michael is a stone building chiefly in the Decorated style and was thoroughly restored in 1861: it consists of chancel, nave, south porch and a western tower of Perpendicular date containing 2 bells; there is a mural monument in the nave, with a fine medallion portrait, by Nollekens, of Sir Thomas Pinfold knt. LL.D. who died in 1701; and a brass, with rhymed verses in English and Latin, to Elizabeth, daughter of William Pyxe, 1617; there is also a monument, erected in 1672, by his sons, Charles and Henry, to Bartholomew Beale, lord of this manor, who died in 1660, with medallion portraits of himself and his wife. The register of baptisms and burials dates from the year 1598, marriages 1633. The living is a rectory, yearly value £300 with residence, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor and the Rev. G. W. Pearse, alternately, and held since 1851 by the Rev. Geo. Wingate Pearse M.A. late fellow of Corpus Christi college, Oxford. A charity of about £16 a year, left by an unknown donor, is for the school and poor, the church land produces £3 annually for the maintenance of the fabric of the church. Walton Hall, a noble mansion of brick, the property of Miss Pinfold, and occupied by William Schoolcroft Burton esq. J.P. is pleasantly situated in a well-wooded park of about 60 acres. Miss Pinfold, who is lady of the manor and Mr. David Cook are the principal landowners. The soil is light clay; subsoil, gravel and clay. The chief crops are wheat, beans, barley and oats. The land is chiefly pasture. The area is 737 acres; rateable value £1,489; the population in 1881 was 112.

WATER STRATFORD is a small parish on the Ouse, 3½ miles west-by-north from Buckingham, in the hundred, union and county court district of Buckingham, rural deanery and archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Giles is an ancient structure, consisting of chancel, nave and western tower containing 3 bells; the chancel and nave were rebuilt in 1828, when the doors and windows of the old edifice were inserted in the present building; there is a curious marble monument in the north wall of the nave, representing a female lying on a bed, dying, with six females kneeling by her side and two boys and a man at the foot; it is inscribed to Mary Franckysle, the wife of John Franckysle, of Water Stratford, who died in 1629; there is a piscina in the south wall of the chancel: On May 22nd, 1694, John Mason, rector, was buried; he published 41 hymns, entitled "Songs of Praise and Penitential Cries;" London, D. Sedgwick: over the chancel door is some carving, considered to be the effigies of St. Hubert, represented with a stag and a cross on the head, and over the south door is a man, carved with two angels ministering to him, but it is defaced. The register dates from the year 1596. The living is a rectory, net yearly value £350 with residence, in the gift of William J. D. Andrew esq. and held since 1875 by the Rev. Edward George Andrew B.A. of Jesus College, Cambridge. The rectory was restored in 1877 by the present rector. Admiral Parker is lord of the manor and chief landowner. The soil is mixed clay, stone brash and gravel; subsoil, various. The land is arable and pasture, in about equal portions. The area is 1,082 acres; rateable value £1,303; and the population in 1881 was 188.

WAVENDON is a parish and village one mile from Woburn Sands station, 52 miles from London by rail and 45 by road and 5 south-east from Newport Pagnell, in the hundred, union and county court district of Newport Pagnell, archdeaconry of Buckingham, rural deanery of Bletchley and diocese of Oxford, extending to Bedfordshire. The church of St. Mary was entirely restored, under the direction of W. Butterfield esq. architect, 1848-9, at a cost of over £4,000; it consists of chancel, nave with aisles and clerestory, south porch and a western tower containing 5 bells; the chancel, which is Early Decorated, has a fine stained east window of four lights, a double piscina of curious design, and triple sedilia; on the north side is an arcade of four semicircular arches, enclosing as many stone stalls recessed in the wall: separating the nave and chancel is a low stone screen, with central gates of brass; the piers and arches of the nave are also fine specimens of Early Decorated work, while the clerestory, the whole of the roofs and the upper part of the tower are Perpendicular; the nave is very lofty, and the aisles were formerly side chapels and still retain their piscinæ; the font, of Totternhoe stone, is of considerable size and has a cover of carved oak; the pulpit is of similar material: there are two memorial windows and monuments to the Hoare family, including a mural brass in the north aisle to Henry Arthur Hoare esq. of Wavendon House, erected by his widow; the church contains also some memorials of the family of Saunders, of Battlesden, among which are two brasses of Richard Saunders esq. 1630 and his four wives, Elizabeth (Charge) ob. 1596, Frances (Fitzhugh), Beatrice (Annesley), and Francis (Stanton). The register dates from the year 1567. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value £830 with residence, in the gift of the trustees of the late Henry H. Hoare esq. and held since 1847 by the Rev. Henry Burney M.A. of Exeter College, Oxford. The rectory house, erected in 1849 by the Rev. H. Burney M.A. at a cost of £3,000, is in the Early Gothic style and built of sandstone, quarried in the parish. There are Wesleyan and Primitive Methodist chapels. Wells' charity produces £71 yearly for apprenticing ten poor boys, and there are also almshouses for four poor widows; there are other charities of £150 yearly for coals, £2 for bread, £10 for the general uses of the poor and £22 for public purposes. The County Police have a station in the village. Wavendon House, the property of the trustees of the late Henry Arthur Hoare esq. J.P. and now occupied by James Budgett esq. is a mansion of brick, pleasantly situated in a well-wooded park of 118 acres, with an approach through an avenue of fine elm trees, nearly half a mile in length; the shrubberies and pleasure grounds are tastefully laid out. Thomas Gadsden esq. is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are the Duke of Bedford K.G. the trustees of the late H. A. Hoare esq. and Thomas Gadsden esq. The soil is stiff loam, some sandy; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, oats, beans and barley. The area is 2,613 acres; rateable value, £5,792; the population in 1881 was 971.

Woburn Sands, partly in this parish, will be found in Directory of Bedfordshire.

WENDOVER is a parish and market town within the parliamentary borough of Aylesbury, formerly an incorporated borough, distant 35 miles from London, 5 south-south-east from Aylesbury, 3 west from Little Kemble station on the Wycombe branch of the Great Western railway, 7 south-south-west from the Tring station on the London and North Western railway and 11 north from High Wycombe, in the hundred and county court district of Aylesbury, union of Wycombe, rural deanery of Wendover, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. At the south-east entrance is Boddington Hill, most pleasantly situated, on the top of which is a beautiful wood called Halton wood, and at the south-west entrance is Bacombe Hill, commanding fine views of the country for many miles around, adjoining which is Coombe Hill, from which St. Paul's cathedral may be seen. The Chiltern range passes through this parish and extends over many miles. The borough sent two members to Parliament as early as 1300, but suffered its privilege to lapse for 300 years, until in 1623, by the exertions of Mr. Hakeville, a barrister of Lincoln's Inn, the representation was, upon petition, recognised, in defiance, it is said, of the Sovereign's wishes. By the Reform Act Wendover was disfranchised, but the householders have votes for Aylesbury; Hampden, the patriot, represented this borough in five Parliaments. Gas Works have been established and the streets are lighted. The Grand Junction Canal Company have a branch from here to Marsworth, giving water communication to all parts of England. The church of St. Mary is a building of stone, chiefly in the Decorated style and consists of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles and a low western embattled tower containing 6 bells: the chancel, restored in 1839, retains a piscina: the nave has arcades of five arches on either side, springing from clustered pillars with moulded bases and foliaged cups; the south aisle has a plain trefoil piscina and the south doorway good Decorated mouldings and ornament; there are some remains of a stoup; in the south aisle is a curious mural brass to W. Bradshaw gent. 1537, and his wife, nine children and twenty-three grand-children: the church was beautifully restored in 1869 at the cost of £5,000, under the superintendence of G. E. Street esq. R.A. and re-opened June 1 in that year; the materials used in the restoration being flint facings, with dressings of Bath stone; there are sittings for 500 persons; there are three stained windows in the chancel; a beautiful reredos has been added and an alabaster and marble pulpit, erected by the parishioners in memory of the Rev. C. F. Champneys M.A. late vicar: the churchyard has been enlarged. The register of baptisms dates from 1626; marriages and burials, 1670: the entries of marriages and burials from 1626 to 1670 have been cut out. The living is a discharged vicarage, yearly value about £300, with residence and 180 acres of glebe attached, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor and held since 1867 by the Rev. Albert Smith M.A. of Christ Church, Oxford. Here is a Congregational chapel erected in 1811, one for General Baptists, founded in 1683. There are charities of about £46 annually for distribution in bread, clothing and money; Hill's charity of £60 yearly is for educational purposes and apprenticing, and Whitechurch's, bequeathed in 1849, provides about £4 a year for education and £6 for medical aid, now usually paid to an infirmary. The Wendover Literary Institution, built by Col. Philip Smith, comprises a commodious reading-room and a library of over 500 volumes and is also well supplied with daily papers; lectures are occasionally delivered. There is also a Labourers' Club room, opened in 1878, supplied with papers and books and supported by voluntary contributions. Here is a reservoir, covering 70 acres, for the supply of the mills at Weston Turville and Aylesbury. At the end of the High street stands a red brick building, erected in 1842 as a Market house; in 1870 it was partly rebuilt and fitted with an illuminated clock; the lower portion being at the same time adapted to the purposes of an Engine House, with an attached drinking fountain in front. The market day is Tuesday and annual fairs are held on the 13th of May and 2nd of October. The parish boundary runs through a farm-house now in the possession of Mr. George Billington, supposed to have been the residence of the notorious Judge Jefferies in the time of the Restoration. The Hale House, the residence of Alfred de Rothschild esq. stands about a mile and half east of the town; this estate belonged to the ancient family of Colet or Collet; Sir Henry Collet knt. twice Lord Mayor of London and father of Dean Colet, founder of St. Paul's school, was of this family and was born in the parish of Wendover. The principal landowners are Col. Philip Smith, who is lord of the manor, Alfred de Rothschild esq. Sir Nathaniel Mayer de Rothschild bart. M.P. and George Butcher esq. The soil is principally chalk and loamy; subsoil, chalk and gravel. The area is 5,719 acres; rateable value, £7,954; the population in 1881 was 1,901.

WESTBURY is a parish 5 miles west-north-west from Buckingham, 2½ east from Brackley, 1 north from Fulwell and Westbury station on the Banbury and Bletchley branch of the London and North Western railway and 62 from London, in the hundred of Buckingham, union and county court district of Brackley, rural deanery and archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The river Onse separates the parish from Oxfordshire. The church of St. Augustin is in the Early English style and was restored in 1863; it consists of chancel, nave, aisles and north porch, with western saddled-back tower, containing 2 bells; a fine organ, the gift of Mrs. Barrington, has been placed in the church. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £200 with residence, in the gift of the Hon. Percy Barrington, and held since 1877 by the Rev. Charles Henry Firmstone M.A. of Christ Church, Oxford. At the enclosure in 1764 a piece of pasture land, covered with bushes, containing 21A. 1R. 37P. was allotted to the poor; it is now let at £13 yearly. Westbury Manor, the seat of Lt.-Col. the Hon. Percy Barrington J.P. is a handsome and commodious stone building, situated in a valley, surrounded by pleasure grounds. The principal landowners are Lt.-Col. the Hon. Percy Barrington, who is lord of the manor, and R. Loder esq. M.P. The soil is mixed; subsoil various. The land is two-thirds arable, remainder pasture. The area is 2,547 acres; rateable value, £3,223; the population in 1881 was 417.

Parish Clerk, James Fenemore.

WESTON TURVILLE is a parish within the parliamentary borough of Aylesbury, 2 miles north-by-west from Wendover, 3 south-east from Aylesbury and 5 west from Tring, in the hundred, union and county court district of Aylesbury, rural deanery of Wendover, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Mary is an ancient structure, consisting of chancel, nave, vestry, serving also as organ chamber, north and south porches and a western tower containing 5 bells; the chancel is unusually lofty, having been raised in the fifteenth century to receive a good open-timbered roof, which rests on a massive wall plate, carved with quatre-foils, enclosing shields; the ridge line of the older roof is distinctly marked on the western wall: the east window is of three lights, with flowing tracery in the head and has a small demi-figure of the Madonna and child; on the south side, projecting from the wall is a double piscina of Early English date and near it, affixed to the wall, the brass figure of a man in a furred robe, with a shield of arms, displaying a chevron between three roundles: within the communion rails are two carved chairs of Elizabethan or Jacobean date, one of which is unusually wide and has a hinged back, which being reflexed converts the whole into a table; within recesses, in the south wall, are portions of the earlier church and some sculptured figures discovered during the restoration of 1860: these comprise part of a moulding with dog-tooth ornament, a portion of a Norman shaft, carved with a quilted pattern, and two curious effigies with swords and long shields, carved in relief on blocks of stone 17 inches high and 12 wide; below these, in another recess, is the base of a pillar; there is a mural monument of marble on the south side, with fluted pilasters and a boldly moulded pediment with arms to the Rev. John Tipping, rector, 1722, and other memorials to the Rev. Matthew Panting D.D. 19 years rector of this parish and 40 years rector of Brockhall, Northants, 1704; the Rev. John Dell LL.B. rector, 1838, Mary his wife, 1857, and John, their son, 1850; and to Philippa, only daughter of the Rev. Euseby Isham D.D. 1801: on the north side is a marble mural tablet, with effaced shield, to the Rev. John Taylor S.T.P. 27 years rector here, 1774; Mary his wife, 1779; and Danvers, their eldest son, 1771: in the western chancel window on the south side are the arms of John of Ghent, duke of Lancaster: the chancel generally is Decorated, and north of the chancel arch under a tall and narrow arch in the eastern pier of the arcade are the remains of the rood-loft steps: the nave, also Decorated, is of five bays, with clustered columns and moulded arches supporting a clerestory, lighted by four windows on either side; the roof is of timber and plaster, and dates from the time of Henry VII.: the north aisle retains its original roof and in one of the windows is a shield of arms, beneath a canopy and assigned to the family of Gernor or Horwood: the south aisle exhibits in its windows some elegant examples of Flamboyant tracery; two of these are segmental headed and have interior hood mouldings, and the east window and two others retain some ancient foliated glass in the heads; one of the quarries in the eastern window is inscribed "Altiss^mo: Gloriosiss^mo: Opt^mo: Max^mo: Laus & honos & prostratio. T: W: f. 1655;" the font, placed in this aisle, is a fine specimen of Norman work and consists of a fluted basin with elaborate scroll ornament round the edge, resting on a square-cushioned base, similarly carved, with chevron and cable moulding: the tower occupies the whole of the westernmost bay of the nave, the arches of which are connected by smaller and perfectly plain arches cut through the tower walls; towards the east a lofty narrow arch opens from the nave to the lower stage of the tower, which has a good Perpendicular window of three lights; in the south wall of the tower, within the church, is a recessed arched ledge, and on the floor below a stone inscribed to Mr. Henry Babham, 1719: externally the tower has three stages, terminated by a battlemented parapet, a western door and a battlemented hexagonal turret at the north-west angle; over the tower arch are the royal arms: the pulpit is of Tudor or Jacobean date, hexagonal in shape, well carved in panels and rests on a modern base; there are some remains of a carved wood screen in the south aisle, which has also a trefoil-headed piscina and several large brackets: the remains of the rood screen, removed during successive alterations, are preserved at the rectory: the church was restored in 1860 under the direction of David Brandon esq. and in 1879 the chancel underwent a complete restoration by J. P. St. Aubyn esq. the level of the floor being considerably raised and laid down with tiles, some of which are reproductions of old tiles found in the church: new stalls and desks of carved oak were fitted and a new organ, costing £140, placed under the arch on the north side; the total cost of the restoration exceeded £300. The register of baptisms dates from the year 1538; marriages and burials, 1566; and there is also a volume of "Stemmata Parochialia," extending from 1538 to about 1840, compiled from the parish registers by the Rev. Arthur Isham, of Reigate, late rector. The living is a rectory, yearly value £545 with residence and 293 acres of glebe, in the gift of the Warden and fellows of All Souls College, Oxford and held since 1877 by the Rev. William Ernest Malahier M.A. of that college. The rectory house is a commodious building of brick in the Italian style and was designed by the late Sir G. G. Scott R.A. There is a small Baptist chapel, built in 1839. Widow Turpin's land of 10A. 1R. 34P. now produces £35 annually, which is distributed twice a year in loaves; Pennant Trust cottages, left to the parish by the Rev. Thomas Pennant, rector, are in trust of the rector for the time being, the rents distributed in clothing to not more than six persons, being regular attendants at church. Findall's (Aylesbury) charity provides 6s. 8d. for distribution amongst the poor and also 6s. 8d. for cleaning the churchways. The women and children are largely employed in plaiting straw. The Aylesbury breed of ducks is reared in great numbers here. A reservoir of about 54 acres held by the Grand Junction Canal Company is in this parish. At the back of the manor house, a plain brick mansion, is a mound on which formerly stood the castle reared here by Sir John de Molins, c. 1333; there are still lands in the parish known as "Molins" and "Castle Field." The Duchy of Lancaster sold their manor here to the late Mr. John Eldridge, of this parish and there are three other manors owned respectively by the Worshipful Mercers' Company, Sir Nathaniel Mayer de Rothschild bart. M.P. and Nicolas Tindal-Carrill-Worseley esq. The principal landowners are Sir Nathaniel Mayer de Rothschild bart. M.P. the Mercers' Company, G. A. Hulbert esq. and W. L. Lowndes esq. In May, 1855, a Roman amphora, various vessels of glass and Samian ware, pieces of iron with rivets and nails and some other objects, with evidences of the burial of a female, were discovered in the rectory garden. The soil is various, gravelly, loam, and some clay, with a clay subsoil. The chief crops are wheat, beans, oats, barley, clover and turnips. The area is 2,450 acres; rateable value, £4,342; the population in 1881 was 824.

WESTON UNDERWOOD is a parish and village in the hundred, union and county court district of Newport Pagnell, archdeaconry of Buckingham, rural deanery of Newport Pagnell and diocese of Oxford, 6½ miles north from Newport Pagnell, 1½ from Olney, 13 south-east from Northampton, 13 west from Bedford and 9 north-east-by-east from Stony Stratford, situate on the Ouse. The church of St. Lawrence is an ancient structure of stone in the Early Perpendicular style, and consists of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, north porch, and low embattled western tower containing 6 bells: the whole exterior is Perpendicular: the piers and arches of the nave arcades are plain Early English and the chancel and tower exhibit portions of the same style: the font is also of this date: the east window retains its original glass, and there is a piscina and sedilia; a helmet and coat of early date are preserved in the church, which also contains some memorials of the Throckmortons, and a brass, with effigy, and those of five daughters, to Elizabeth (Hussay), wife first of Sir Walter Hungerford, and afterwards of Sir Robert Throckmorton 1571; there is also a tomb with marginal inscription on brass, to John Olney, a former rector, and Dionisia his wife, 1450; his epitaph records that he converted the ancient and dilapidated chapel into a church. The register dates from the year 1681. Some old documents and a terrier are also preserved in the parish chest. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £51, in the gift of Sir N. W. G. Throckmorton bart. and held by the Rev. Hugh Allan, jun. M.A. of Wadham College, Oxford, who has resigned, but is still in charge. Here is a Catholic chapel with school, erected by the late Sir Robert Throckmorton bart.; the school is supported by Sir N. W. Throckmorton bart. who also maintains two resident priests. The feoffee estate of 6 acres produces £28, which is distributed in money; the Town Dudley charity of about 24 acres, producing £31 per annum, is for six poor widows; Higgins' charity of £17 yearly is for clothing, and Mrs. Spink's charity provides 30 blankets, which are given away at Christmas; there is also a charity of £2 a year for apprenticing. Cowper, the poet, resided here from 1786 to within a few years of his death, which occurred at East Dereham, Norfolk, in 1880, and here wrote his translation of Homer; on the panel of a window shutter in the bed-room occupied by the poet, is the following couplet, written in his own hand

"Farewell, dear scenes, for ever closed to me,
Oh! for what sorrows must I now exchange thee.
June 22-28, 1795."

The "Wilderness" in which Cowper found such "boundless contiguity of shade," still remains; previously to coming here he had resided for 20 years at Olney in this county; much of the surrounding scenery is described in his poems, and an oak tree is shown as Cowper's oak; Sir John and Lady Throckmorton, who then had a seat here, paid marked attention to the poet. Thomas Scott, the commentator, was also for some time a resident in this village. Weston Park, the property of Sir Nicholas William G. Throckmorton bart. is about 30 acres in extent; it is well-wooded and contains fine avenues of lime, beech, elm and chestnut trees; the house which formerly stood in the park was pulled down in the early part of the present century, the park is now let for grazing purposes. Sir Nicholas William G. Throckmorton bart. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is loam, some rich and the rest very poor; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, beans and oats. The area is 1,839 acres; rateable value £3,007; the population in 1881 was 352.

WEXHAM is a parish 2 miles north from Slough, 5 miles from Windsor, in the hundred of Stoke, union of Eton, county court district of Windsor, rural deanery of Burnham, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Mary is in the Early English style, having chancel, nave, turret and 1 bell. The register dates from the year 1606. The living is a rectory, yearly value £600 with residence, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor, and held since 1846 by the Rev. Alfred Arrow Kempe B.A. of Magdalen College, Cambridge, who is non-resident, the curate in charge being the Rev. William Henry Bliss M.A., MUS.B. of Exeter College, Oxford, and chaplain in ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen, rector of West Ilsley, Berks. Grainger's charity is the interest of £100 Consols. Ragstone is found in this neighbourhood. Wexham park is the seat of Edward Brooke esq.; the house is a handsome building of red brick and stone, in the Elizabethan style, and stands in a park of about 70 acres; the village of Wexham and Infant school form part of this property. The Duke of Leeds is lord of the manor and chief landowner. The soil is loam and clay; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are oats, wheat and barley. The area is 670 acres; rateable value, £1,496; the population in 1881 was 172.

WHADDON is a township, parish and village, 4½ miles south-east from Stony Stratford, 5 north-east from Winslow and 7 east from Buckingham, in Cottesloe hundred, Winslow union, county court district of Buckingham, rural deanery of Mursley, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Mary, standing on high ground near the Chase, is an ancient stone building, consisting of chancel with north aisle or chapel, nave, aisles, north and south porches and a western tower containing 6 bells and a clock; the chancel has Early English piscina and sedilia but the east window, and some other features are Decorated, the chapel is also of this date, and has on the north side a handsome monument with long epitaph to Arthur, 14th Lord Grey de Wilton, who was lord deputy of Ireland during Desmond's rebellion and one of the commissioners who tried Mary Queen of Scots, and died in 1593; the nave is separated from the aisles by arcades of four arches, all of the Transition Norman period, but the walls are Decorated: each doorway retains a stoup: the font is Early English: there are monuments to Thomas King, 1770, and to William, his son, 1775, and a brass recording the gift of a clock to the church in 1613 by Amy (Allen), wife of Joseph Emerton, minister. The register dates from the year 1580. The living is a vicarage, yearly value about £300 with residence in the gift of W. Selby-Lowndes esq. and held since 1882 by the Rev. Charles Edward Bowlby M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge. A Congregational chapel was erected in 1865. The poor's land is 4 acres. In a part of Whaddon Chase called "Nasbury," about 320 ancient British gold coins were discovered in February 1849, and were claimed by Mr. Selby-Lowndes as lord of the manor; they are of a later period than those of Cunobelin, and are stamped with a wheat-ear and rampant horse: in the coppice adjoining there are indications of a large rectangular encampment evidently Roman, enclosing a space of about 5 acres, with a vallum and fosse quite perfect. Three miles west of Whaddon, and near the site of the battle which is said to have been fought by Cunobelin at Thornborough bridge, are two tumuli, one of which was opened in 1842, and disclosed many Roman relics; other Roman antiquities were met with in 1857 and 1858, chiefly consisting of coins about 200 in number, all of which, as treasure trove, were surrendered to the lord of the manor. Whaddon Chase was formerly the principal woodland in this part of the county and contained 2,200 acres of coppice, with valuable timber, and maintained 1000 head of deer: the greater part of it is now enclosed and cultivated. About ⅞ of a mile north-east from the church stood Snelshall Priory, founded by Ralph Martel about 1218, for monks of the Benedictine order, and dedicated to St. Leonard; on its suppression there were but four monks, and the revenues amounted to little more than £18 a year. The present church at Tattenhoe was rebuilt from the ruins in 1540. Whaddon Hall, the seat of William Selby-Lowndes esq. J.P. is a large stately stone mansion, containing many spacious and elegantly fitted apartments; "few private residences in the kingdom," writes Lipscomb, "can be found to rival the magnificence of its splendid staircase:" the pleasure grounds, gardens and park are extensive; great numbers of the forest trees are of immense size, and the views from the place are delightful: up to 1840 the deer were allowed to roam wild over the Chase, but they have now a portion of the grounds fenced off for them. This manor in 1698 became the property of Dr. Willis, the celebrated physician, and being inherited by his grandson, Browne Willis esq. LL.D. the well-known antiquary, was for many years his residence; here he accumulated the valuable manuscript collections bequeathed by him to the University of Oxford, as well as a fine library of printed books; the greater part, if not the whole, of his published works, were also prepared for the press at Whaddon; he died 5th February, 1760, and was buried in the chancel of Fenny Stratford church. Queen Elizabeth visited Whaddon Hall in 1568, at which time it was held by Arthur Lord Grey; but the old mansion, as then existing, with its great hall, 50 feet in length, was partially destroyed on its coming into the joint possession of Thomas Willis and James Selby in 1608; eventually the whole property came into the hands of Thomas James Selby, son of the foregoing, who died in 1772, and no lawful heir appearing, it was surrendered, by order of the Court of Chancery in 1783, to Mr. William Lowndes of Winslow, who had been appointed by Mr. Selby his lawful heir, if no heir-at-law could be found. W. Selby-Lowndes esq. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is light and stiff yellow clay; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, oats and beans. The area of the township and parish is 2,489 acres, a large portion of which is comprised in Whaddon Chase, celebrated for its fox covers; rateable value, £2,984; the population in 1881 was 405.

WHITCHURCH is a large village and parish 5 miles north from Aylesbury, 5½ south from Winslow and 12 from Buckingham, in the hundred of Cottesloe, union and county court district of Aylesbury, rural deanery of Mursley, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, situate on the road from Aylesbury to Buckingham. The church of St. John the Evangelist is an ancient structure and consists of a large chancel, nave, aisles, with a lofty embattled tower, in which are 6 bells and a clock: the arches of the nave are pointed, and supported on the north side by octagonal and on the south by circular pillars: the chancel was partially restored in 1853: Sir Edward Smythe, formerly Lord Chief Justice of Ireland, and lord of the manor, was buried here in February, 1681: the communion plate was for the most part his gift. The register dates from the year 1653. The living is a vicarage, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor, yearly value £300 with residence, erected in the year 1845 by the late incumbent, and held since 1876 by the Rev. George Tate Medd T.A.K.C.L. formerly lieut. R.N. There are places of worship for Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists. A charity of £15 a year bequeathed by John Westcar esq. late of Creslow, is distributed in the winter time in clothes and blankets to the most necessitous and deserving poor. Here was formerly a castle belonging to Hugh de Bolebec, the sites of the drawbridges being still traceable; at the outer edge of the moat is a remarkable spring, which flows from beneath the trunk of a large ash tree, the water of which is very clear and of excellent quality; it is called "Fair Alice." The principal landowners are Leopold de Rothschild, Messrs. Philip and Edward Hart, Joseph Parrott of Little Kimble, Mr. Edward Harper Roads; and Mr. John Henry Guy, is lord of the manor. The soil is loam; subsoil, limestone and gravel. The land is chiefly in pasture; wheat and peas are grown. The area is 1,580 acres; rateable value £3,875; the population in 1881 was 754.

WILLEN is a parish and village 2 miles south from Newport Pagnell, in the hundred, union and county court district of Newport Pagnell, archdeaconry of Buckingham, rural deanery of Bletchley and diocese of Oxford. The Grand Junction canal passes on the west and the river Ousel on the east. The church of St. Mary Magdalen, a substantial brick structure in the Italian style, consists of nave and apse, with a square tower and 3 bells, and contains a small organ; it was built in 1688 by Sir Christopher Wren, and restored in 1862, when the apse was added; all the windows (of which there are nine) are stained. The register dates from the year 1665. The living is a vicarage, yearly value from tithe rent-charge £76, with 20 acres of glebe, in the gift of the trustees of Dr. Busby and held since 1852 by the Rev. John Benthall M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The charities amount to £1 a year, given in books, bequeathed by Dr. Busby; but his trustees give £14 a year to the poor, besides supporting the school. The trustees of Dr. Busby are lords of the manor and principal landowners. The soil is mixed; subsoil, gravel and stone. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and roots. The area is 654 acres; rateable value, £1,105; the population in 1831 was 86.

WINCHENDON LOWER is a parish about 6 miles north-east from Thame and 6½ west from Aylesbury, situated on the acclivity of a steep hill on the river Thame, in the hundred of Ashendon, union and county court district of Aylesbury, rural deanery of Waddesdon, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Nicholas is an ancient stone building in good preservation, consisting of chancel, nave and aisle, with square embattled tower, in which there are 5 bells and a clock. The register dates from the year 1563. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £60, in the gift of Sir Thomas Tyringham Bernard, and held since 1832 by the Rev. Thomas Hayton M.A. who is also vicar of Long Crendon, at which place he resides. Sir Thomas Tyringham Bernard bart. J.P. is lord of the manor and has an ancient mansion here, called Winchendon Priory, supposed to have been built on the site of an ecclesiastical edifice, but no trace of this latter remains. The chief landowners are Sir T. T. Bernard bart. J.P. Richard Rose esq. the Duke of Buckingham and Henry Smith esq. The soil is limestone and clay; subsoil, same. The chief crops are wheat, barley and turnips. The area is 1,520 acres; rateable value, £2,640; the population in 1871 was 283.

Parish Clerk, Thomas Smith.

WINCHENDON UPPER or OVER, situated on a high hill, is a village and parish about 7 miles west from Aylesbury by road, 3 miles from Quainton Road station on the Aylesbury and Buckingham line of railway, in the hundred, union and county court district of Aylesbury, rural deanery of Waddesdon, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of St. Mary Magdalen is an ancient structure, consisting of chancel and nave, with a massive embattled tower of Perpendicular date and having a turret at the south-east angle: in the church is a brass to Sir John Stodeley, a former vicar, dated 1515, in good preservation. The register dates from the year 1672. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £90, in the gift of the Duke of Marlborough and held since 1879 by the Rev. Thomas John Williams M.A. rector of Waddesdon, rural dean and surrogate. Baron Ferdinand de Rothschild is lord of the manor and sole landowner. The soil is stiff loam; subsoil, limestone. The chief crops are wheat, barley and turnips; the area is 1,030 acres; rateable value, £2,221; the population in 1871 was 209.

WING (or WENGE) is a parish 3 miles south-west from the London and North Western railway station at Leighton Buzzard, in the hundred of Cottesloe, union and county court district of Leighton Buzzard, rural deanery of Iving-hoe, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. In former days Wing was a place of some importance; in the year 1255 a charter was granted to Peter de Warren by Henry III. for a market every Thursday and a fair for three days at Michaelmas. The church of All Saints is an interesting structure of mixed styles, consisting of apsidal chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, porches and a western battlemented tower; this may fairly be regarded as the most remarkable church in the county; it is reputed to contain Saxon work, and this view has been supported by the late Sir Gilbert Scott R.A. who particularly instanced as examples the semi-circular arcades, or rather arched perforations in the walls and the construction of the chancel arch: the most interesting feature in the church is its apsidal polygonal chancel, which is considerably elevated above the nave, and has beneath it a crypt of rude construction about eight feet in height: a rude arcade runs round the outside of the apse, considered by some authorities to be also Saxon work, perhaps of the eleventh century; the windows are much later; the nave appears to be chiefly of Norman date and has arcades of massive arches dividing it from the aisles; there are some good Early Decorated windows and a north doorway of that period, but the tower, font and south porch are Perpendicular; the base of an old Norman font may be seen in the south porch. There are monuments to the family of Fynes from 1686 to 1758, including one to Mrs. Margaret Fynes, said to be the work of Roubiliac, and several costly memorials to the Dormers, with others, ranging from 1542 to 1729; these include a fine altar tomb of marble, with Corinthian columns supporting a cornice with shield of arms, to Sir Robert Dormer, 1552, around which, until 1850, were two large pews with baluster screens, inscribed with twelve rhymed couplets; and another altar tomb with recumbent effigies of marble, partly gilt, under a canopy, supported by columns of Sicilian jasper, with marble caps and adorned with five shields of arms, to Sir William Dormer K.B. 1575, and Dorothy, his wife; there are also brasses to Harry Bracknall, 1460, and Agnes, his wife, 1489; with effigies to Tankerville Fynes, without date; John Theede, 1622; and Thomas Cotes, "porter at Ascott Hall," 1648; and there are effigies of a man and woman, with the initials K.S. and date 1633; other memorials remain to the family of Redman 1699-1722; and Bell 1721-38; Mrs. Bridgett Neale 1677; William Theed gent. and Stephen Welch, vicar, 1774; in the churchyard are remains of a stone cross: in 1850 the church was completely restored by the late Sir G. Gilbert Scott R.A. at a cost of £1,476. The register dates from the year 1546, and is perfect from that date: it was carefully restored in 1850; there is also an ancient book of churchwardens' accounts. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £400 with residence, in the gift of Lord Overstone, and held since 1850 by the Rev. Peter Thomas Ouvry M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge, who is also rector of Grove; Dr. Dodd, executed in the last century for forgery, was vicar of this parish. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel here. There are almshouses, called Dormer's Hospital, founded in 1562 by Dame Dorothy Pelham, for eight men and women, endowed with land, and money invested in Consols, producing a total gross income of £74 per annum. The other charities in the parish are those of William Robinson, a perpetual rent-charge on land at Burcot of £2 a year for clothing; Lady Carnarvon and William Hoare, arising from the rent of a field of about six acres at Burcot, now let for £36 a year, for clothing and blankets; William Dent, £59 New £3 per Cent. Annuities, the proceeds of which are also distributed in clothing; Robert Shepherd, a rent-charge of £6 6s. 8d. arising from land in the parish of Edlesborough, of which £1 a year is paid to the vicar for catechising the children, 10s. to the vicar of Leighton Buzzard for a sermon on Ascension day and the rest distributed in penny loaves to twenty children attending the church weekly; there is also the Fuel Allotment Charity, consisting of about £8 a year, arising from £268 9s. 1d. £3 per Cent. Consols, and distributed annually in coals; the Church Land Charity, of about £268 in Consols, derived from the sale of about three acres of land in the parish of Mentmore, yields over £14 yearly, which is paid to the churchwardens; a sum of £12 1s. 4d. arising from Pratt's charity at Wingrave is also distributed amongst the poor at the discretion of the trustees. Wing lodge, situated near the church, the property of Edward Hart esq. is a commodious and handsome building of white brick in the French style, with gables and abutments of dark brick highly finished, which give the building a pleasing appearance: it was erected by the owner in 1874 and is now occupied by Hy. J. Chinnery esq. Lord Overstone, who is lord of the manor, and the Earl of Rosebery are the principal landowners. The soil is various, clay, sand, gravel and loam; subsoil, clay. The crops are hay, wheat, beans, barley, oats and roots. The area is 5,310 acres; rateable value, £10,317; the population in 1881 was 1,636.

ASCOTT is a hamlet half a mile east. The old Hall, built by the Dormers, and in part designed by Inigo Jones, began to fall into decay in 1720, and has now wholly disappeared; some traces of the fish ponds and moat and of the bowling alley still remain. There was here, in the latter part of the 12th century, a cell of Benedictine monks, attached to the Abbey of St. Nicholas of Angiers, afterwards granted by Henry V. to the priory of St. Mary de la Pré, near St. Albans. Lord Overstone, who is lord of the manor, and Leopold de Rothschild esq. are the principal landowners. Ascott Park, the hunting cottage of Leopold de Rothschild esq. J.P. is an old Elizabethan structure of brick and timber, and was originally a farm house, built in 1606, but was restored and enlarged about 1874. The kennels and hunting stables, originally at Mentmore, have been transferred to Ascott.

BURCOT hamlet is one mile north. Lord Overstone, who is lord of the manor, and E. Crouch and Fynes Clinton esqrs. are the principal landowners.

CRAFTON hamlet is three miles south. Lord Overstone who is lord of the manor and the Earl of Rosebery are the principal landowners. Lord Rosebery has a breeding stud here.

LITTLEWORTH hamlet is half a mile north. Lord Overstone who is lord of the manor and Mr. Philip Hart are the chief landowners.

Parish Clerk, John Windmill.

WINGRAVE is a village and parish 2 miles from Marston Gate station on the Aylesbury and Cheddington branch of the London and North Western railway, 5½ miles north-east from Aylesbury, 6 south-west from Leighton Buzzard and 7½ west-north-west from Tring, in the hundred of Cottesloe, union and county court district of Aylesbury, rural deanery of Ivinghoe, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, pleasantly situated on a hill commanding a fine view of the town of Aylesbury and the surrounding country. The church of SS. Peter and Paul is a fine structure in the Early English and Perpendicular styles, consisting of chancel, nave and aisles, with a square tower at the west end containing 6 bells and a clock. The register dates from the year 1550. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £150 with residence, in the gift of Earl Brownlow and held since 1850 by the Rev. John Martin Butt B.A. of Corpus Christi college, Cambridge. A curious custom has been observed here from time immemorial of strewing the church with hay on the first Sunday after St. Peter's day, about half an acre of grass land having been left for that purpose. Here is a Union chapel erected in 1805; also one for Primitive Methodists, with a Sunday school in connection with each. Here is a reading-room adjoining the infant school. There are charitable bequests to the amount of about £40, distribute l annually amongst the poor. The Rothschild family are lords of the manor and the principal landowners. The soil is chiefly of a clayey nature, producing excellent crops of wheat and beans; subsoil, clay. The area is 2,600 acres; rateable value, £4,231; and the population in 1871 was 908.

WINSLOW-cum-SHIPTON is a parish, station on the Oxford, Banbury and Bletchley branch of London and North Western railway and small market and union town and a polling place for the county, in Cottesloe hundred, Buckingham county court district, rural deanery of Claydon, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, 50½ miles from London by road, 54 by London and North Western railway, 10½ north-west from Aylesbury, 6¾ south-east from Buckingham and 12 north-west from Leighton Buzzard. The town stands on the brow of a hill, overlooking a fertile vale on the road from Aylesbury to Buckingham, and is of very remote antiquity. The houses are chiefly of brick, in three principal streets, radiating from a square market-place in the centre. The town is lighted with gas. The church of St. Lawrence is a venerable structure, and consists of chancel, nave and aisles, galleries with square embattled tower containing 6 bells and a clock. The register dates from the year 1560. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £210 from 130 acres of glebe with residence, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor and held since 1882 by the Rev. Hamilton Anne Douglas-Hamilton M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. Here is a Congregational chapel erected in 1817; also a Baptist tabernacle erected in the Buckingham road, in 1853; and a small Baptist chapel in Bell alley, erected in 1830. An iron reading-room, 48 feet by 30 feet, erected at the expense of the late vicar, the Rev. A. M. Preston, is used for religious and other meetings and also for deposits of Clothing and Coal Clubs and Penny Savings' Bank. The Winslow Benevolent society is for the distribution of coal to the poor in the winter, supported by the interest of £100 left by the late Miss Bridget Yeates and by voluntary subscriptions. Ten Bibles and ten Prayer Books are yearly distributed by the trustees of the late Philip Lord Wharton. A market for live stock is held the first and third Wednesday in each month and for corn every Wednesday. Statute fairs are held on the Wednesday before October 11 and the two following Wednesdays. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agriculture and in lace and straw plait making. The Manor House, the property of W. Selby-Lowndes esq. J.P. and at present occupied by Henry Lambton esq. is a substantial and commodious brick mansion, built by Sir Christopher Wren, and is surrounded by well planted grounds. W. Selby-Lowndes esq. is lord of the manor and chief landowner. The area is 1,920 acres; rateable value, £7,313; and the population in 1881 was 1,663.

LITTLE WOLSTON (or WOOLSTON) is a parish and village, 3 miles south from Newport Pagnell and 3 north from Fenny Stratford, in the hundred, union and county court district of Newport Pagnell, rural deanery of Bletchley archdeaconry of Bucks and diocese of Oxford. The river Ouzel and the Grand Junction canal run through the parish. The church of The Holy Trinity is a stone building; the roof was repaired in 1854 and the chancel rebuilt in 1861; a handsome reredos erected in 1868 by the rector and family, J. S. Westmacott, of London, artist; the east window is stained; the interior has been partially restored in the Decorated style, at the cost of William Smith esq. who also rebuilt the road front of the churchyard wall; the centre flooring is of encaustic tiles and the seats of English oak; at the south-west side of the nave is a stone font, supposed to be 700 years old. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is a rectory. Great and Little Wolston were consolidated in 1854, joint gross yearly value £280, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor and held since 1879 by the Rev. Charles Penswick Smith T.A.K.C.L. who resides at Great Wolston. The poor have a rent-charge of £5 5s. for fuel. Charles Prescott esq. is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are Charles Prescott esq. and William Smith esq. the well-known agriculturalist. The land has been for the most part laid down for pasture. The area is 613 acres; rateable value £877; the population in 1881 was 181.

WOLVERTON is a parish and station on the North Western railway, where there is a branch to Newport Pagnell, one mile and-a-half east from Stony Stratford, 4 miles south-west from Newport Pagnell and 53 from London, in the hundred of Newport Pagnell, union of Potterspury, county court district of Newport Pagnell, rural deanery of Buckingham, archdeaconry of Bucks and diocese of Oxford. The Grand Junction canal passes through. The church of The Holy Trinity is a cruciform building of stone, erected in 1815, in a quasi-Norman style, on the site of an older structure, and consists of chancel, nave, transepts and a western battlemented tower containing 6 bells; all the windows are stained, and in the chancel is the life-size recumbent marble figure of Sir Thomas Longueville, of Wolverton, who was killed by a fall from his horse in 1685: in 1877 the church was decorated throughout in polychrome by Mr. Daniel Bell, the whole of the figures being executed by his own hand, the communion table was at the same time enlarged and a reredos of English oak, designed by J. Swinfin Harris esq. of Stony Stratford, erected; this is divided by cusped arches into three compartments, containing various figures of saints and angels, richly painted. The register dates from the year 1599. The living is a discharged vicarage, endowed with £400 private benefaction and £400 Royal bounty; present yearly value about £56, in the gift of the Radcliffe trustees and held since 1871 by the Rev. John Wood M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The mound near the church and vicarage is said to have been the site of the keep of a castle held by Brito Magno, a powerful Norman, whose descendants took the name of Wolverton; the family became extinct, in the male line, in the reign of Edward III. and the property passed into the hands of the Longueville family by the marriage of John Longueville, who died in 1439, with Joan, daughter and heir of John Hunt, whose wife, Margaret, was daughter and sole heir of Sir John de Wolverton. The manor subsequently continued in the family of Wolverton for nearly 300 years. Sir Edward Longueville was created a Baronet of Nova Scotia in 1638: the last baronet, also Sir Edward Longueville died in 1718, and about six years before his death he sold the property to Dr. Radcliffe, the celebrated physician in Queen Anne's time, who bequeathed it to the University of Oxford, in trust for the benefit of the Radcliffe Library and Observatory. The Radcliffe trustees, who are lords of the manor and the London and North Western Railway Company are the principal landowners. The entire area is 2,250 acres; rateable value, £23,781; the population of the whole parish in 1881 was 3,611.

WOLVERTON END, in this parish, forms part of the town of Stony Stratford: full particulars and the names of residents are given with that town.

NEW WOLVERTON is an ecclesiastical parish formed in 1868 out of this parish. The London and North Western railway has a large junction station one mile from the old church, 2 miles from Stony Stratford, 52½ from London by rail and 60 from Birmingham; the Newport Pagnell railway company opened their branch from Wolverton to Newport Pagnell for merchandise in 1866 and for passengers in 1867; the length from Wolverton is four miles. The railway company have extensive workshops for the manufacture and repair of railway carriages, which afford employment to a great number of hands, who reside near. The town is lighted by gas supplied by the railway company. The church of St. George the Martyr, a building of stone in the Early English style, was erected in 1843, at an expense of about £5,000, defrayed principally by the Radcliffe trustees and the London and Birmingham railway company, and consists of chancel, nave, south porch and a tower with spire, containing 1 bell; the east window is stained and there are sittings in the church for about 700 persons. The register dates from the year 1843. The living is a vicarage, yearly value about £260, in the gift of the Radcliffe trustees and held since 1860 by the Rev. Francis William Harnett M.A.R.C.L. Here is a Catholic church dedicated to St. Francis of Sales; also a Congregational and Wesleyan chapels. The Science and Art Institute is a structure of red brick and stone; it contains several class rooms, reading room and library, with large lecture hall, used for concerts, which will seat 500; opened in 1864. A corn and cattle market is held every Wednesday. The area is 400 acres; population in 1831, 2,703.

WOOBURN is a parish and scattered village, consisting of the Green, the Town, Cores End, Bourne End, the Common, the Moor, Havenslea and Northend Woods; in the hundred of Desborough, union of Wycombe, county court district of High Wycombe, rural deanery of Wycombe, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford; it has two stations on the Wycombe branch of the Great Western railway, viz. Bourne End, 32 miles from London, and Wooburn Green, 30 miles; Wooburn is about 3 miles south-west from Beaconsfield and 4 south-east from High Wycombe, on the river Wye or Wick and partly on the Thames, which on the south side bounds the parish. The church of St. Paul is an ancient edifice in the Decorated and Perpendicular styles, consisting of chancel with north aisle, clerestoried nave, aisles and massive embattled western tower with turret containing a very good peal of 8 bells; it was completely restored internally in 1857 and externally in 1870, at a cost of over £3,000, when new windows with rich tracery were inserted throughout the building, the walls repaired and the parapets embattled; the nave at the same time was heightened by the erection of a clerestory, and the substitution of an open-timbered roof for the flat plastered ceiling; the upper part of the tower was renewed and the turret carried up and finished with a vane, and a new clock placed within; and the whole interior was refitted with benches and stalls; a handsome carved stone pulpit and several stained windows, reading desk and lectern were added: there are brasses to John Goodwin and Pernell his wife, who built the church tower A.D. 1488, to Thomas Swaine S.T.P. prebendary of Aylesbury, 1519 and to Arthur, infant son of Philip, Lord Wharton, 1642; one other brass, with a single figure in shroud, surrounded by shields and scrolls, has a rhyming inscription of eleven lines, but no name or date: there are memorials to the families of Bertu and Wharton, including a monument to Philip, Lord Wharton, who died in 1694: a new churchyard, near the church, was enclosed and consecrated in 1862 and the church was reopened after its completed restoration by the Bishop of Oxford, October 14th, 1869: an organ has been erected to the memory of Alfred Gilbey and there is a handsome east window, subject, The Ascension. The register dates from the year 1653. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £140 with residence, in the gift of Caledon George Du Pré esq. and held since 1847 by the Rev. Francis Busteed Ashley, of St. Bees. Here is a Congregational chapel, founded in 1768; a Baptist chapel at Wooburn Green, erected in 1836; also Wesleyan and Primitive Methodist chapels. There is a Working Men's Institute and Reading Room on the Green. Lace is made to a considerable extent in this and neighbouring parishes and commands a high price. The charities are:—Mr. J. P. John Fromow left the interest of £200, now about £6 yearly, to be distributed in blankets at Christmas; Lord Wharton's trust provides annually 20 bibles bound up with prayer books; the poor's land of 28 acres produces about £21 yearly for distribution in money; Mrs. S. Ballard gave the surplus of interest of £50 £3 per Cent. Consols, after repairing the vault of J. Osmer esq. to be distributed every second year in bread; Mrs. L. Butterfield's charity consists of the interest of £100 stock £3 per Cent. Reduced Annuities, to be given to twelve poor families of the parish at 5s. each on St. Thomas' day; Mrs. Rook gave the interest of £50 stock in £3 per Cent. Reduced Annuities, to be distributed equally to six poor widows not in receipt of any collection on St. Thomas' day. The Church Estate produces £10 yearly and there is a sum of £20 a year for an afternoon sermon. The parish contains extensive paper and millboard mills, which give employment to most of the labouring inhabitants. Wooburn House, the seat of Mrs. Gilbey, is a handsome mansion built in 1756, on the site of what was for many years the palace of the Bishops of Lincoln, and subsequently the seat of the D'Eyncourts and Whartons, one of whom, Philip, Lord Wharton, had the honour of receiving a visit from William III.; he was wont also to entertain here the eminent Nonconformists of his day, who frequently preached in the domestic chapel then attached to the mansion. Sir Giffin Wilson resided here about 20 years till his death in 1848; the house and grounds were much improved by the late A. Gilbey esq. Caledon George Du Pré esq. of Wilton Park, Beaconsfield, is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is mould and gravel; subsoil, chalk and sand. The area is 3,132 acres, consisting of wood, arable and pasture; rateable value, £9,664; the population in 1881 was 2,419.

Parish Clerk, Stephen Wood.

WORMINGHALL is a parish on the borders of Oxfordshire, 2½ miles from Tiddington station, 4 miles south from Brill, 5 north-west from Thame and 15 south-west from Aylesbury, in the hundred of Ashendon, union and county court district of Thame, rural deanery of Waddesdon, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The church of SS. Peter and Paul is a small building in mixed styles, mostly Perpendicular, consisting of chancel, nave, porch and a low embattled western tower containing 3 bells and a sanctus bell: it was originally a Norman structure, of which both doorways and the chancel arch are remains: the present chancel is Decorated, and was built late in the fourteenth century with a high-pitched roof: the east window of three lights, being Perpendicular, of about 1480: there are sedilia, contained in the eastern-most window on the south side, prolonged downwards for that purpose: against the north wall is hung a small oaken tablet, on which are carved the arms of the see of London, impaling those of Dr. John King: the walls of the nave are, no doubt, part of the old Norman church: the tower is late Perpendicular, and has a western window of three lights: the font is cylindrical and of the thirteenth century; and there is a church chest of the seventeenth century: within the communion rails is a slab inscribed to Edmund Kinge, 1577, and on the south side is a mural brass with effigies to Philip King, 1592, his wife Elizabeth (Conquest) and twelve children, of whom one, John King B.D. was Bishop of London, 1611-21: the church was extensively repaired in 1847, under the direction of Joseph Clarke esq. the whole north wall and a considerable portion of the south wall being taken down and rebuilt; a new vestry was added and a stone porch erected; all the roofs were restored, a gallery removed, the chancel filled with oak stalls and the east window filled with stained glass; a piscina found on the south and an aumbry on the north were both renovated, and a new lectern and pulpit set up; the total cost was £1,200, towards which Viscount Clifden contributed £500, the rest being raised by subscription and rate: the interior of the church was restored in 1876 and two new windows added. The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £200, in the gift of Viscount Clifden and held since 1876 by the Rev. William Henry Pochin, of St. Bees. In the village are ten almshouses, founded by John King esq. of Boycote, Kent, eldest son of Henry King, Bishop of Chichester, and grandson of John King, Bishop of London, for six poor men and four poor women, who are allowed, besides a weekly payment of 3s. 3d and a loaf of bread each, a new coat and gown every alternate year at Christmas. The almshouses are built in the form of the letter H, in memory of the father of the founder, and over each entrance are the arms of King impaling Russell, with an inscription recording the foundation, with the date 1675. There is a charity of £21 yearly value for bread, left by an unknown donor. John King, Bishop of London, left by will £100 to purchase land, the rent of which is added to what his father left for bread, to be distributed at the church porch every Sunday: on Good Friday the thirty-three recipients receive a loaf four times the size of an ordinary loaf and 1s. each; on leaving the church they drop a penny in the clerk's hat in order that he may keep the memorial brass clean. Worminghall had formerly a market on Thursdays, granted in 1304, and a fair held on the Feast of SS. Peter and Paul. Viscount Clifden is lord of the manor and sole landowner. The soil is loam and clay; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat and beans; the land is about one-half pasture. The area is 1,482A. 1R. 10P.; rateable value, £1,593; the population in 1871 was 341.

Parish Clerk, John Lowe.

WOTTON UNDERWOOD is a large village and parish, 3 miles north-east from Brill 3¼ south-west from Waddesdon, 10 west from Alyesbury, in the hundred of Ashendon, union and county court district of Aylesbury, rural deanery of Claydon, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The Wotton tramway connects this place with the Quainton Road station on the Aylesbury and Bucks railway, 4 miles distant. The church of All Saints is a handsome structure, dating from the fourteenth century, in the Decorated style, consisting of chancel, nave and western tower with spire with a narcade of 3 bays, on the south side: the mansoleum of the Grenville family is on the south side of the nave, built in 1343 by William and Mary Grenville, in which are several monuments to their memory; there are also stained windows in the mausoleum bearing the shields and armorial devices of the family of the Grenvilles; this was restored and enlarged in 1873 by the Duke of Buckingham: the church is in excellent repair, the present tower containing 6 bells and spire having been rebuilt at the sole expense of George Marquis of Buckingham: there is a piscina in the south chancel wall, also pointed arches on either side of chancel: the eastern window and all those on the south side of the church are stained: on the south side of the nave are two elegantly carved marble mural monuments to the memory of Caroline Duchess of Buckingham and Chandos, who died Feb. 28th, 1874, also to the most noble Lady Anna Eliza Bridges, Duchess of Buckingham and Chandos, who died at Stowe, May 16th, 1836. The register dates from the year 1654. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £100 with house in the gift of the Duke of Buckingham and held since 1876 by the Rev. William Woodward, of St. Aidans: there is a tradition that Thomas à Beckett held this living; and it is certain that in 1160 and again in 1162, when Henry II. held his courts at Brill, that prelate attended him there. Wotton House is a beautiful red brick mansion, the seat of the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos G.C.S.I.: it is nearly in the centre of the park and approached on each side through a noble avenue of elm trees. The Duke of Buckingham is lord of the manor and sole landowner. The soil is clay; subsoil, clay. The land is about one-third arable and two-thirds pasture. The area is 3,220 acres; rateable value, £2,625; the population in 1871 was 235.

WOUGHTON-ON-THE-GREEN is a parish and village built around a large green of 20 acres, distant from Fenny Stratford 2½ miles north, 4½ miles south from Newport Pagnell, in the hundred, union and county court district of Newport Pagnell, rural deanery of Bletchley second portion, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The river Ouzel and the Grand Junction canal pass through this parish. The church of St. Mary is of stone in the Perpendicular style and has chancel and nave, south aisle, square tower containing 4 bells and porch: there are ancient rood-loft stairs within the wall: it was restored in 1867, the cost of the restoration of the chancel being defrayed by the rector; the remainder, about £600, was raised partly by subscription and partly by a rate. The register dates from the year 1580. The living is a rectory, yearly value £300, in the gift of and held since 1855 by the Rev. Maurice Farrell M.A. of Trinity College, Dublin. A Wesleyan chapel was erected in 1867. There is a charity of about £18 derived from 14 acres for the repair of the church and the relief of the poor and £2 3s. fuel money. Woughton House, the residence of William Levi esq. J.P. is a handsome brick building and has undergone considerable repairs and an additional wing has been built; it is pleasantly situated near the church in a park of 43 acres. The principal landowners are H. Carrington Bowles Bowles esq. J.P. the Rev. Maurice Farrell M.A. who is lord of the manor, William Levi esq. J.P. Charles Prescott esq. and William Whitworth esq. The soil is stiff clay; subsoil, clay and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, beans and barley. The area is 1,173 acres; rateable value, £3,246; the population in 1881 was 231.

WRAYSBURY (anciently WYRARDISBURY), on the borders of Middlesex, is a parish about 3 miles long, having a station on the South Western railway, in the hundred of Stoke, union of Eton, county court district of Windsor, rural deanery of Burnham, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, adjoining Staines, 3½ miles south-west-by-south from Colnbrook, 4½ east from Windsor, 21¾ from London, on the north bank of the river Thames. A suspension bridge across an arm of the Colne which here flows into the Thames, forming the boundary between Middlesex and Bucks, has been erected at the sole expense of George Simon Harcourt esq. The church of St. Andrew is a structure in the Early English and later styles, supposed to have been built by King John; it consists of chancel, nave of 3 bays, aisles and a western tower with spire, containing 6 bells: the chancel retains a piscina and double sedilia and there are eleven stained windows: brasses remain here to Dame Elizabeth; Hobby, daughter of Sir Walter Stonnor, 1560; John Stonnor, 1512, with effigy and a modern brass to George Willoughby James Gyll, 1878; there are also monuments to Elizabeth, wife of Philip Harcourt, 1728; Jesse wife of George Simon Harcourt, 1842; Mrs. Harriet Paxton, 1794; Captain Willoughby Gyll, 1826; Rt. Hon. Hamilton Flemyng, 9th and last Earl of Wigtoun, 1829; Thomas Wright esq. and Thos. Gill esq. both 1798. The register dates from the year 1734; the earlier registers, it is believed, were destroyed by fire. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £165, in the gift of Dean and canons of Windsor and held since 1880 by the Rev. John Hutchinson Hindson M.A. of Corpus Christi college, Cambridge. The great tithes, commuted in 1839 (aggregate amount £5909s. 2d.), belong to the Dean and canons of St. George's chapel, Windsor. Here is a Baptist chapel erected in 1868. The Bridge land of 10 acres produces £40 yearly and there are charities of £19 yearly value. On the Ankerwycke estate, the property of Captain Harcourt, are the ruins of a Benedictine nunnery, founded in the reign of Henry II. by Sir Gilbert Montfichet kt. and his son, Sir Richard Montfitchet, for five nuns, and dedicated to Mary Magdalene; a charter was granted to this religious house by Henry III. in 1257, confirming the donations of benefactors: at the dissolution Dame Magdalene Downes, the last prioress, received a pension of 100s. and the site was granted to Andrew, Lord Windsor. On the adjoining estate, the property of Major Flemyng Gyll, is a portion of King John's hunting lodge, now a farm-house, in which was found the massive oak table on which John signed the Magna Charta; this is now in the possession of Mrs. Clifford, of Magna Charta Island in this parish. Capt. Simon John Chandos Harcourt, who is lord of the manor and Colonel Williams are the principal landowners. The soil is loam; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats. The area is 1,656 acres; rateable value, £4,975; the population in 1881 was 658.

ANKERWYCKE, three-quarters of a mile south-east, and HYTHE END, 1½ miles south-east, are portions of this parish.

WYCOMBE.

COMMONLY KNOWN AS HIGH, OR CHEPPING, WYCOMBE.

WYCOMBE is a municipal and parliamentary borough, market and union town, head of a county court district, a parish, polling place for the county and a first-class station on the Wycombe, Aylesbury and Thame branch of the Great Western railway, in the hundred of Desborough, rural deanery of Wycombe, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford, 29 miles from London by road and 34 by rail, 25 south-east from Oxford, 10 north from Maidenhead, 7 north-east from Marlow, 12 north-west from Uxbridge and 7 south-west from Amersham. The town is situated in a valley and has a beautiful stream of water running through it, called the Wyck, from which it derives its name; it consists of a long and spacious High street, anciently containing a curious collection of old inns and continued through the town under the names of Easton street and London road; there are several other streets. The west end of the town has been augmented by several estates, which have been built on and have now populous streets. The corporation of Wycombe, made a free borough, there is little doubt, in the reign of Henry I. is the oldest and most honourable in the county, being the only one before the Municipal Act governed by a mayor; the corporation registers date from the reign of Henry III. the earliest being in a MS. volume given to the town in 1475 by William Redhode, then mayor; the first mention of a mayor being in the reign of Edward I. (1205) when Roger Oughtred or Hutred is described as mayor in each year from that date up to 1302. The corporation, exercising judicial powers within the limits of the municipal borough, consists under the new Municipal Act of a mayor, 6 aldermen, and 18 councillors. The mayor of the preceding year acts as a justice for the borough, in conjunction with the mayor for the time being. Six additional justices, independent of the corporation, are appointed by the Lord Chancellor for the purpose of sitting in petty sessions in the borough. The municipal borough of Wycombe, situated principally on the highway from London to Oxford, is of much smaller extent than the parish and is comprised within it, consisting of four wards, Easton ward, Paul's Row ward, Frogmore ward, and High Street ward. There was formerly a board of commissioners appointed under a local Act, which consisted of the mayor and aldermen for the time being and about 40 others elected by the rated inhabitants; but this Act is now repealed and the local management vested in the corporation. The borough police force consists of superintendent, sergeant and eight constables. The town is lighted with gas and is well supplied with excellent water, and the Health of Towns Act has been in operation since 1865. The parliamentary borough comprises the whole parish and returned two members to Parliament from the reign of Edward I. until the "Representation of the People Act, 1867," under which it returns only one member. There were anciently several churches and chapelries in the town, which were destroyed at the Reformation. King John is recorded to have several times visited the town; Queen Elizabeth passed through it in 1566 on visiting Lord Windsor at Bradenham; in 1647 Charles I. came to Wycombe as a prisoner, on his way to Parliamentary Head Quarters at St. Alban's; Charles II. in a progress from Oxford to London, spent one night at the Catherine Wheel in Wycombe, September 30, 1663, accompanied by the Queen, the Duke and Duchess of York, Prince Rupert, the Duke of Monmouth, and many nobility. On November 9, 1832, Her Majesty the Queen, then Princess Victoria, with her mother the Duchess of Kent, passed through the town on her way to Oxford, changing horses at the Red Lion Hotel; and on 15th December, 1877, on the occasion of her visit to the Earl of Beaconsfield, at Hughenden, Her Majesty made a royal progress through the town and was received with loyal demonstrations.

The parish church of All Saints, erected in the place of a Norman structure, said to have been built by a wealthy Saxon named Suarting, between 1070 and 1092, is traditionally recorded to have been built by the Abbess and Nuns of Godstowe in 1273 and originally consisted of chancel, nave, aisles, and a central tower, but in the early part of the fifteenth century the whole design was altered, the central tower, containing 5 bells of great weight, dating from 1583 to 1683 was removed, the columns and arches rebuilt on a loftier scale and a clerestory and western door added; it now consists of chancel with aisles, transepts, nave, aisles and a western tower 108 feet high, built in 1522 and adorned with pinnacles in 1753 by the Earl of Shelburne: it contains 10 bells cast in 1711 by Phelps, of Whitechapel (the tenor weighing 27 cwt.), re-hung and an excellent set of chimes constructed and fixed by the late Mr. G. Harman in 1790; the exterior walls, south porch and several windows are Decorated, but the arcades of the nave and chancel, the clerestory, roofs, and tower, are Perpendicular: the North chapel contains a marble monument with recumbent effigy, by Schumaker, to Henry Petty, Earl of Shelburne, erected by his lordship's executors in 1784; in the south aisle is a monument by Carlini to Sophia, Countess of Shelburne, 1771, with figures of the Countess and two children, and also memorials to Captain William White, mortally wounded at the battle of Salamanca, 22nd July, 1812, and Lieutenant Gillespie White, who died at Damietta, October 15, 1801; the Rev. John Manning LL.B. Oxon, and Alderman of this Borough, 1822; in the chancel is a curious and unique inscription to William Bradshaw, 1614; his wife Margaret, 1620, and Henry their son, 1596; there are other memorials to the Rev. Isaac King LL.B. 25 years vicar of West Wycombe, 1832; Richard Lluelyn B.D. rector of Saunderton, 1770; Joseph Pevtevir, gent. Alderman, 1730; Samuel Guise, vicar of Wycombe, 1753; Jacob Wheeler, a benefactor to the town, 1621; and to the families of Shrimpton, 1727-94; King, 1712-1812; Sparkes, 1707-27; and Grange, 1746-1807, with others; there are brasses to Margaret Trone, 1581; Robert Kemp, 1621; Martin Lluelyn M.D. Principal of St. Mary Hall, Oxford, and physician to Charles II. 1681; and to Margery and Mary, wives of John Lane, of Wycombe. The screen formerly enclosing the aisles of the chancel and nave were some years since removed; the screen or parclose of the south chancel aisle was erected by Richard Ridehode in 1468, and has an inscription to that effect; two stone coffins have been found, one in the north wall and the other below the floor of the south aisle, and a fragment of zig-zag moulding and a quantity of mediæval paving have also been met with: the stained west window was added in 1878, to the memory of J. Edwards esq. by his widow, and a stained window has also been erected in the south aisle to the memory of Miss Poulter, daughter of the Rev. James Poulter, late head master of the Royal Grammar School; the east window is a memorial to the late Lord Carrington, inserted by the voluntary contributions of his tenantry and friends; the organ, originally erected in 1783, was a few years since entirely renovated at a cost of £650; some portion of the old organ being retained. The church has been completely restored under the direction of the late G. E. Street esq. R.A. at a cost of about £8,000. The register dates from 10th September, 1598. The living is a vicarage, nett yearly value £275 with residence, in the gift of Lord Carrington and held since 1869 by the Rev. Robert Chilton M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge.

The Society of Friends have a Meeting House in Crendon lane.

Trinity Congregational chapel, situated at the west end of Easton street, erected in 1807, is a building in the Romanesque style, consisting of nave and transept, flanked by two square towers and was erected principally at the expense of the Rev. John Hayden, a former minister. Crendon Lane Congregational chapel, built 1714, has been restored. The Wesleyan chapel is endowed with a sum of about £307 in Consols, bequeathed 15th January, 1799, by John Murlin, gent. of High Wycombe.

There is a General Baptist chapel in Bridge street, built in 1680, also one in Easton street built in 1845 and one for Particular Baptists in Newland. There are Primitive Methodist chapels in White Hart street, Slater street, and Westbourne street, and a limited Free Methodist chapel in Oxford road. There is a small iron Free church in Crendon street.

The Cemetery, a quarter-of-a-mile north of the town, was opened in 1855; it comprises about 4 acres all laid out.

A handsome Gothic building for the National schools was erected in 1855 from the designs of Mr. Bond, accommodating 470 children.

A School Board of 5 members was formed for the borough and the parish, in 1870 and very handsome schools have been erected in the Cemetery road, West End; Totteridge road; at Loudwater and Tyler's Green. The schools in Cemetery road are built to hold about 1,000 children and were opened in 1875.

The Royal Grammar School was founded in 1550, by the Mayor and Burgesses of Wycombe in pursuance of an agreement made by them April 1st, 1548, with Sir Edmund Peckham and George Philyps, gent. executors under the will of George Juncklyn, deceased, whereby the hospital of St. John the Baptist, with the lands and premises, were granted to the former for a sum of £30, on condition of their establishing a school within the two years next ensuing. On the 18th July, 1562, this property, together with the rents of the Fraternity of the Blessed Mary, were granted to Queen Elizabeth, and by her re-granted on the 21st of the same month, by Letters Patent, for the re-founding of the school and the maintenance of four poor persons; the school has since been regulated by a scheme of the Court of Chancery, dated 26th July, 1856, but in 1869 was placed under the provisions of a new scheme framed by the Charity Commissioners, in accordance with the Endowed Schools Acts of 1869, 1873, and 1874. The school is now managed by a governing body of 15 persons, of whom 9 are representative, and 6 co-optative. The tuition fees range from £4 to £8 a year and the maximum payment for boarders, exclusive of these, is £40 a year; instruction is given in the usual English subjects, mathematics, Latin, foreign languages, natural science, drawing and vocal music. There are now (1882) between 50 and 60 boys; buildings, from designs by Mr. Arthur Vernon, will be completed in 1883. Among the distinguished men who have received their education at this school may be mentioned Edmund Waller, the poet; Sir Denis le Marchant bart. M.P. late Clerk of the House of Commons; Lieut.-Gen. Sir John Gaspard Le Marchant K.C.B., G.C.M.G.; General Sir Robert Percy Douglas bart. Lieut.-Governor at the Cape, 1864-8; and Professor H. W. Bristow.

The Guild Hall, situated at the junction of High street and Paul's row, is a handsome building of stone, erected in 1757 at the cost of John, Earl of Shelburne, and was renovated by Sir G. H. Dashwood bart. M.P. in 1859; it consists of an open arcaded space below and in the upper story several ante-rooms and a spacious council chamber adorned with a fine painting after Vandyck of Philip, 4th Lord Wharton, his wife, Lady Jane, and their son Henry, presented by Mrs. Alfred Lane in 1863; a full-length portrait by Graves, of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales K.G. in the robes of the Garter, presented by Lord Carrington in 1876; and one of James Blackstone D.C.L. formerly Recorder of the Borough; there is also here a picture of St. Paul, preaching, by J. H. Mortimer R.A. formerly serving as an altar piece in the parish church. The Shambles, occupying the site of the old Hog-market, is an octagonal building, erected in 1761 from the designs of the Adelphi Adams, taking the place of an older but similarly planned structure, built in 1622 by William Aire, Alderman.

The town was first lighted with gas in 1836 and Gas Works were erected in 1848, since greatly altered and enlarged.

The Wycombe Water Works Company have supplied the town with water since November, 1875.

The Literary and Scientific Institute, established in 1844, occupying a handsome building in Church square, has over 300 members, paying 10s. a year and a library of 1,300 volumes.

There is an Odd Fellows' Lodge, styled the "Loyal Bud of Hope," founded in 1845.

The Wycombe Savings Bank was established in 1818.

The Free Library, with librarian's residence attached, was founded in 1874 by the generosity of J. O. Griffits esq. Q.C. a native of Wycombe, and Recorder of Reading, who gave £250 towards an endowment fund; the library consists of a spacious and well-lighted room, containing a large collection of 1,300 valuable works, many of which were presented by the founder, and the walls are covered with diagrams, pictures and maps. Mr. Griffits has also presented the freehold premises (valued at 2,000 guineas) to the town, on condition that it is maintained without aid from the rates, and permanently endowed, the requisite sum for this purpose being estimated at £3,000, which was raised in 1882, by the proceeds of a fancy fair and summer fête, a bazaar and the subscriptions of the inhabitants, and in November, 1882, the library and the endowment fund were transferred to the Mayor and Corporation in trust for the inhabitants.

There is a weekly newspaper published on market day, the "South Bucks Free Press," by W. Butler and Son, High street.

A large pleasure and hiring fair is held on the Monday and Tuesday preceding Michaelmas day. The horse, cattle and wool fairs have for some years been discontinued.

Chair making is the chief trade of the town and adjoining districts, and has of late years greatly increased, nearly a million and a half having been made in 1874 only: those manufactured here are the lighter sort of cane and rush-bottomed chairs; a common sort being made from the beech wood with which the neighbourhood abounds, and the better kinds, such as drawing-room, folding, communion table and hall chairs, from walnut, birch, cherry and other ornamental woods. Paper making is also carried on to a considerable extent: and here are brick fields and iron foundries. The female inhabitants are occupied in making pillow lace, straw plait and bonnets.

The High Wycombe Cottage Hospital was established about 1875, and in the year ending Oct. 1st, 1881, had under treatment 84 patients, of whom 58 were cured and 16 relieved, 4 being still in attendance.

Previous to 13th Henry III. a hospital for lepers, dedicated to St. Margaret and St. Giles, and called "The Loke," was founded in this town.

The hospital of St. John the Baptist, in Easton street, was founded about 1175, for a master and poor brethren and sisters, who were appointed by the burgesses. The premises have long been occupied as a grammar school, the Norman hall having been sub-divided to form a house for the head master, and the chapel appropriated as a schoolroom; but on the completion of the new school buildings these will be no longer needed for educational purposes, but it is in contemplation to preserve, and, as far as possible, restore the remains of the ancient hospital.

There are several almshouse foundations in the town. Queen Elizabeth's Almshouses, numbering eight, in Easton street, were endowed out of the property of the dissolved guild or fraternity of St. Mary by letters patent, dated 21st July, 1562, and since regulated by a scheme of the Court of Chancery, dated 26th July, 1856: there are 14 almspeople, four receiving 8s. and the remainder 4s. weekly. Waller's Almshouses, in Newland, six in number, have been lately rebuilt. Lane's Almshouses, Crendon street, were founded by the will of John Lane esq. of Hammersmith, Middlesex, dated 2nd Jan. 1674, for two poor persons, each of whom receives 6s. a week and £2 at Christmas. There are other charities, most of which are administered by the municipal charity governors, including a gift by Philip, Lord Wharton, of twenty-five Bibles yearly. The gift of Mary Bowden, dated Oct. 30th, 1790, that of William Littleboy, in or before 1633, together with eight other charities, have been appropriated to the Grammar School and Almshouse foundation. A scheme for the re-administration of the charities was issued by the Commissioners in 1877.

A military college was established here in 1709; in 1813 the college was transferred to Farnham, in Surrey, and the junior department to Sandhurst.

The neighbourhood of Wycombe abounds in antiquities. The Roman station at the east end of the ancient common pasture, known as "The Rye," proves it to have been the head-quarters of a large district. A British fortification closely adjoins the station. Castle Hill, close to the church, has on its summit a fine Roman fortification; and the camps of Desborough and West Wycombe to the south-west of the town are well known; in the latter stands West Wycombe church. Roman remains have been found in abundance in the churchyard and town. In 1724 a Roman pavement was discovered in a meadow called "Penn's Mead," situated about half a mile from the town at the east end of the Rye; it forms in shape an irregular triangle and is bounded on the north by a very clear and rapid streamlet flowing from the ancient spring called Holywell, and on the south by a piece of ornamental water, through which an ancient road called "Windsor way," formerly ran: this site was again excavated, and more extensively in 1822-3, by Mr. E. J. Payne, disclosing in the centre of the field a villa, consisting of sundry apartments with a portico, and surrounded, at a distance of about 80 yards, by a massive wall, fortified at intervals with turrets: remains of larger apartments were also discovered at the southern angle of the enclosure; the principal apartment on the north side contains a splendid tesselated pavement with female busts at the angles and oblong compartments at each end, filled up with twisted sea monsters, the whole being enclosed by bands of double and single guilloche ornament: it is 15 feet by 25 feet in area, and is executed with very fine tesserulæ of black, blue, red, yellow and white on a solid basis of flints and rubble: another pavement (now destroyed) exhibited a dog standing by a tree; this pavement was 14 feet square, and portions of others have been discovered with remains of fresco paintings, a Roman statera or steelyard, with leaden counterpoise and some mediæval English and German coins. Roman remains and encampments are numerous on the eminences surrounding the town.

Mr. Griffits purchased in 1877 a piece of ground in the the centre of the town, known as Frogmore gardens, which he has laid out and adorned with a fountain and presented to the town.

The Rye is a commonable pasture of 30 acres which has belonged to the town since the thirteenth century and, prior to the incorporation of the borough, was the common pasture of the tenants of the ancient demesne of Wycombe, in it all inhabitants have by ancient prescription common of pasture for two cows and a heifer in the day time only at its eastern end, and included in it is Pound Mead, and beyond this is Great Penn's Mead. Near the Rye are two mills of great antiquity, one of which is mentioned so early as 1380.

There are several mediæval houses and halls in the borough, which are fast disappearing to make room for modern shops; among the eminent natives of this town may be mentioned William Allay, Bishop of Exeter, 1560-70, and John Munday, Lord Mayor in 1522.

Wycombe Abbey, formerly the manor house of Loake's manor, the seat of Lord Carrington, is a handsome stone structure, rebuilt by the first Baron Carrington, in a species of Late Gothic, after designs by James Wyatt, the materials being Denner hill or Wycombe stone; it stands in the hollow of the park, which is about 200 acres in extent and is ornamented by a large piece of water; the mansion contains some valuable paintings; and in the hall are several mummy cases brought from Egypt by the present Lord Carrington.

The Priory, in the occupation of James Oliff Griffits esq. Q.C.: north of the church, is a noble specimen of fourteenth century work; the interior is chiefly of solid oak.

Lord Carrington is lord of the manor.

The area of the parish is 6,382 acres; rateable value, of the borough, £12,346; of the parish, £22,825. The population in 1881 was, municipal borough, 10,618; parliamentary borough and parish, 13,154.

Parish Clerk, John Youens.

WYCOMBE MARSH.—St. Ann's chapel of ease is a building in the Early Gothic style, from the designs of the late G. E. Street esq. R.A.; the foundation stone was laid 23rd Sept. 1858, and the edifice consecrated in 1861; it is served from the mother church, from which it is one mile and a half distant.

Parish Clerk, Edward Anthony.

Young George John, rope & twine manufacturer, Paul's row

WEST WYCOMBE is an extensive parish and station on the High Wycombe, Thame and Aylesbury branch of the Great Western railway, 36½ miles from London and 2½ west from HighWycombe, situated on the London and Oxford road, in the hundred of Desborough, High Wycombe union and county court district, rural deanery of Wycombe, archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Oxford. The river Wye, or Wyck, which winds its course through High Wycombe, Loudwater and Woodburn and thence falls into the river Thames, rises in Lang Meadow, a few yards south of the park belonging to West Wycombe House. The church of St. Lawrence consists of chancel, nave, and tower, with 6 bells, one of which is dated 1581: it is situated at the top of a very steep hill, partially obscured by a large cluster of trees; it is built of brick and flint in the Classic style: the tower is built of stone and brick, the stone portion is ancient, though mutilated; the upper portion, which is of brick, was added when the body of the church was rebuilt in 1763 by Sir Francis Dashwood: the nave is very lofty, with painted ceiling, embellished with a broad handsome cornice, supported by bold pilasters with Corinthian capitals; on the chancel ceiling is a beautiful representation in oil by Borgnis of the Last Supper; the chancel contains several mural tablets to the Dashwood family. The register dates from the year 1581, but the book containing the entries to 1663 is missing. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £280 with residence, in the gift of Elizabeth, Lady Dashwood and held since 1880 by the Rev. Herbert William Taylor. Close to the east end of the church is a hexagonal enclosure called the Mausoleum, built by Lord Le Despencer in 1763; the walls are composed of flints and are ornamented with a frieze and cornice, supported by Tuscan columns; within niches are monumental urns, one of which is to the memory of Lord Le Despencer, who died in 1781. The church of St. Paul is situated in the village, at the foot of the hill on which the church of St. Lawrence stands and consists of chancel and nave, is of red brick, and was built by Elizabeth, Lady Dashwood and opened in October, 1875. At Downley is a small iron church, called St. James', built in 1874 and enlarged in 1876. There are three Wesleyan, one Congregational and two Primitive Methodist chapels. Mrs. Pye's charity of about £9 yearly is for widows and education of children, John Hunt bequeathed £1 yearly to the poor, Andrew Hunt, by will 23rd March, 1667, left £5 to the vicar to preach several sermons in the year and £5 yearly to the poor, to be paid out of his estate in this parish. Hugh Hobbs, by will 2nd January, 1670, left £2 yearly to the poor widows and aged people. There were several other charities which have disappeared. A cave, 350 yards long, running under the church hill, is visited by many strangers during the summer. There is a Literary and Mechanics' Institute in the village, the reading-room and library of which are open from 10 a.m. till 10 p.m. daily, also a Horticultural Society for the encouragement of cottage gardening, which holds its annual show in August. West Wycombe House, the seat of Elizabeth, Lady Dashwood, situated in an extensive and well-wooded park, was built by Sir Francis Dashwood and enlarged by his son, Lord Le Despencer; it is a handsome mansion in several styles, containing some fine paintings: the great hall measures 52 feet by 22, the roof is supported by four columns and the grand staircase is of mahogany and richly decorated. Elizabeth, Lady Dashwood is lady of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is chiefly chalk with large beech woods, the value of which has caused the place to become a chair-making district; subsoil, chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats. The area is 6,340 acres; rateable value, £8,765; the population in 1881 was 2,389.

BOOKER, WHEELER END and DOWNLEY are parts of this parish.
